The Braves in Britain

College basketball can provide more than glory on the court. It can be a marvelous opportunity to see the world. Just ask the Husson College Braves who recently toured England and Scotland on an exhibition swing which emphasized history, culture, and hands-across-the-sea camaraderie as much as roundball.

"I think it brought us closer together as a team as well as teaching us a lot about the cultural aspects of a different society," is how MacGregor assessed the 12-day excursion. Whether it was feasting on roast beef and pan potatoes in a firelit London pub, sharing the warm hospitality of host families in the rural English countryside, or counting sheep from the bus, the Braves savored every moment of it.

"It was a unique experience," said freshman center John Ferry. "Meeting so many people and learning so much, it was something I'll never forget." Of course, there was basketball to be played also. Game time saw the Braves become more businesslike as they won three times and lost twice. "We agreed the trip was the primary thing and basketball was secondary. The whole idea was to grow together as a team. But when it came time to play, we came to play," said Neil Waterman.

While barnstorming across the countryside, the Braves took time out to ring in the New Year at a Scottish nightclub. The experience was a memorable one. "When midnight struck, everyone jumped in and came together like a big family," said freshman guard Andy Nickerson. "They knew we were Americans, but they made us feel welcome."

Finally, it was time for the Braves to return to the United States and Bangor. But they carried many memories with them. "I'll probably never get a chance like that again," said Don Roberts. "It was a once-in-a-lifetime experience."

College Kicks Off $2.5 Million Fund Drive

This spring, Husson will kick off the Twenty-First Century Fund — a $2.5 million fundraising campaign. Campaign gifts will also be used to make capital improvements in the campus dormitories, gymnasium and dining hall.

As part of the overall goal for the Twenty-First Century Fund, Husson College hopes to raise $1.5-million in endowment funds. The establishment of an endowment fund will provide the College with an additional and permanent source of income. The interest this money accrues will provide a cushion of funds which will be used for new academic programs, financial aid and professional development.

Husson is fortunate to have a young (1968) and, therefore, structurally sound physical plant. Changing conditions in the business world, and even in the characteristics of the student body, mandate that renovations and improvements be made. The expansion of certain facilities is also needed.

The Husson College Twenty-First Century Fund

Capital needs such as endowment, renovations and equipment cannot be met with annual fund gifts. Additional resources are needed as Husson College educates its students for the twenty-first century. In order to meet the educational challenges of the future and to continue to develop as an institution of high caliber, the College must raise $2,000,000 in capital and endowment funds and $450,000 in current funds over the next 3 to 5 years.

Dick Dyke '58 Gives $100,000 To 21st Century Fund

Husson alumnus Richard E. Dyke '58, president of Dyke Associates in Portland and a member of the Husson board of trustees, has made a pacesetting $100,000 gift to the College to kick off the Twenty-First Century Fund capital campaign.

"Mr. Dyke has contributed yet again to Husson in a magnanimous way that will add to the growth and stimulation of faculty and students for many years to come," said Husson president Delmont N. Merrill about Dyke's gift. "We are indeed fortunate to have an alumnus like Dick who demonstrates his pride in and devotion to the College in such a generous way."

Dyke himself considers the gift to Husson his professional legacy to the future of young people. "No matter how well we do in life, the only legacy we leave in life is children," he says. "In your professional life, this manifests itself when you make a contribution to the future of young people. By doing that, you offer something of yourself. All I can leave is a better person and a better life."

Dyke came to Husson College on Park Street hill in 1952, but ran out of money after one year and left to join the Army. He was stationed in Korea until 1955. He returned to Husson that year, and graduated as class president in 1958 at age 25. Alumni from the Park Street era will remember him as the master of ceremonies for all the Husson shows back then, a role he thoroughly enjoyed.

"I got involved on the board of trustees at Husson because I shared the same dream with 'Chief'," Dyke says. "He had devoted his whole life to education — been in debt all his life just to benefit education. It's not till you get out of college and look back that you can see the contributions 'Chief' made to your life."

"... I shared the dream with 'Chief.' He had devoted his whole life to education; been in debt all his life just to benefit education. It's not till you get out of college and look back that you can see the contribution 'Chief' made to your life."

Upon graduation, Dyke became a Treasury Agent in Portland with fellow 1958 graduates Frank Morgan and Bill Hughes.

He left the Treasury to become the assistant treasurer at Burnham and Morrill, makers of B & M Baked Beans, in Portland. At Burnham and Morrill, Dyke helped the company do some merger work, including helping Underwood Deviled Ham acquire the B & M Beans operation.

In 1966, Dyke Associates, an accounting and business management consulting firm, was formed. At the same time, Dyke began acquiring companies that were in trouble and turning them into successful enterprises. He first bought a small, troubled airport in Scarborough and turned it into an industrial park. Since then, a variety of sick companies have received the Dick Dyke healing touch.

Says Dyke of his successful takeovers, "I don't go in and run a company. I buy a sick company and bring in good management. I stand back and look at where we should be five years from now."

This same ability to envision where things should be five years from now is what makes Dyke the asset he is to the Husson College board of trustees. He originally joined the board when Chesley "Chief" Husson wanted to build the new campus in the late sixties. Dyke, who says that "Chief" is one of the two people who have had the most influence on his life (the other is Louise B. Miller), wanted to pay homage to the man who had helped shape his life.

"No matter how well we do in life, the only legacy we leave in life is children. In your professional life, this manifests itself when you make a contribution to the future of young people. By doing that, you offer something of yourself."

Dyke was an ardent supporter of the movement to establish a campus of its own for Husson at its present location between Broadway and Kenduskeag Avenue. His interaction with the board of trustees deepened when he became chairman of the board in 1973, a post he held until 1976. His resignation from the board in 1979 was only temporary, for he rejoined the group in 1983 and is deeply committed to his post, and to the quality education offered at Husson.

"'Chief' used to say we develop the whole person at Husson," Dyke recalls. "A young person coming out of Husson has a good combination of general and technical backgrounds. A Husson student is a better qualified graduate, he'd say. That's as true today as it was when 'Chief' said it."

Owning and envisioning the future for seventeen companies, plus being deeply committed to the ideals of his alma mater and other community projects is enough to keep Dick Dyke very busy.

But wherever he goes, the philosophy of the value of education he learned from "Chief" Husson goes with him, keeping him one of Husson College's staunchest supporters.

"I'm always learning," says Dyke, "for I know the day you don't learn is the day you better look out." And a half hour with Dick Dyke will tell you that he has no intention of stopping now.

Arthur "Ed" McKenzie '48 To Chair Twenty-First Century Fund

Husson trustee Arthur "Ed" McKenzie '48, vice president, general manager, treasurer, and member of the board of directors of the Bangor Publishing Company, has been named chairman of the College's $2.5 million Twenty-First Century Fund capital campaign.

"We are extremely pleased to have such a loyal alumnus and ardent supporter of Husson College to lead us in this vital campaign," said Husson president Delmont N. Merrill '54.

"I owe a great deal to Husson College. I wouldn't have the position I have today without Husson," said McKenzie. "Chairing the Twenty-First Century Fund will give me a chance to show my appreciation to the College."

A well known civic and community leader, McKenzie graduated from Bangor High School prior to attending Husson, from where he graduated in accounting and auditing in 1948.

McKenzie joined the accounting department of the Bangor Daily News in 1951 and has worked his way up to his present position with the Bangor Publishing Company, publisher of the Bangor Daily News.

McKenzie's participation in community affairs includes the board of directors of Eastern Maine Healthcare and the Greater Bangor Chamber of Commerce, where he is a past president.

Husson officials knew they needed a campaign chairman who was both a dedicated supporter of the College and greatly respected in the business community. All roads led directly to McKenzie.

His acceptance of the chairmanship of the Twenty-First Century Fund was the result of a thoughtful process. McKenzie is a busy man; he asked for some time to think it over.

While he was thinking, he decided what his own personal pledge would be. McKenzie went to his publisher and asked for a tentative commitment from the Bangor Publishing Company and asked for the time away from his desk that he knew he would need to undertake a job of this magnitude for his alma mater. Both were given — including the largest pledge the company has ever made to a nonprofit organization.

That's the kind of commitment it takes to do a major fundraising effort like the Twenty-First Century Fund, and McKenzie is the kind of chairman Husson College needed.

"I am delighted that Ed McKenzie has accepted the chairmanship of the Twenty-First Century Fund," says Benita J. Deschaine, Husson executive director for development. "Ed is one of Husson's most successful and devoted alumni and we need a chairman of that calibre with that level of dedication to the College."

As chairman, McKenzie's duties will include enlisting top notch volunteers for important posts in the campaign, chairing the campaign's steering committee (made up of key division chairmen, administrators and faculty), and working with campaign leaders to carry out the objectives of the campaign.

McKenzie's friendly, easy-going personality and obvious devotion to Husson will make it easy for him to carry out his most important duties as chairman: generating goodwill and enthusiasm for the Twenty-First Century Fund among the College's alumni and friends and in the business community.

"I owe a great deal to Husson College. I wouldn't have the position I have today without Husson. Chairing the Twenty-First Century Fund will give me a chance to show my appreciation to the College."

Twenty-First Century Fund Needs

Capital Improvements

Library Expansion and Improvements

The library is the heart of the Husson College academic program. In recent years, student use of the library has shown a sharp increase. Today, as additional acquisitions are contemplated, the library must be enlarged with respect to storage space and specialized equipment. Specific needs range from developing a computerized search capability to acquiring a microfiche storage system and computer software.

Residence Hall Renovation

Residence halls by their very nature are heavily used. For hundreds of Husson students they serve as living, working and studying quarters during the college years. As the College is a popular choice for special events such as summer camps, seminars and conferences, the residence halls are subject to nearly year-round use. Renovations are needed in student rooms, lounges, and common areas.

Student Computer Center Expansion

Husson first became computerized in the late 1960's. Since then, the institution has kept pace with an ever-accelerating technology. A physical expansion of the computer center is now imperative. An existing double classroom will be renovated and refurbished to allow for lecture space and for a computer lab area containing 20 microcomputers and associated printers and other equipment.

Dickerman Dining Commons Renovation

The dining commons, used by Husson students for meals and recreational purposes, is also used extensively by Husson's friends and neighbors in the community. It is in need of interior renovations. Home of the well-known Husson Business Breakfast, the commons is important not only for the benefit of students, but to the public image of the college as well.

Energy Saving Projects

Energy management is extremely important to a Maine college. Husson has already done a great deal to conserve energy, such as computerizing its entire energy system, but there is much more to be done in the dormitories, gymnasium, and dining commons.

Science Equipment-Nursing Program

The Husson/Eastern Maine Medical Center Nursing Program was established in the fall of 1983. It has already received national acclaim for its philosophy of early clinical experience along with classroom work. Essential equipment and supplies for the program were purchased before the first students arrived. But now, for nursing students to acquire critical skills, more sophisticated equipment is essential to ensure a learning experience using the latest technology.

Renovations - Swimming Pool

The facilities of the Newman Gymnasium are used by both the Husson family and the Husson College Athletic Association with its many community members. The Olympic-size pool and its facilities are in almost constant use and must be renovated. The filtering system should be replaced soon along with refurbishing the pool ceiling, spectator bleachers, and locker facilities. A pool cover must be purchased to conserve energy.

Renovations - Newman Gymnasium Weight Room

The College's weight-training room has become tremendously popular in recent years. To better serve students and members of the Athletic Association, additional equipment is necessary. A rowing machine, bicycles and hydraulic weight training equipment are needed.

Endowment

Endowment for Professional Development

Program for Leadership and Excellence

The successful executive in the 21st century will be a master planner, strategist, analyst and communicator. The demands of an ever-changing business world dictate that business and professional people will have to transcend the inevitable limits of a primarily technical education. The educational line separating the specialist from the generalist must be erased in response to industry's call for the individual who is proficient in both technical and communication skills. In an effort to gradute students who can continue to learn and adapt throughout their careers, Husson hopes to create the "Program for Leadership and Excellence" with $500,000 in interest-bearing endowment funds. The foci of the program will be leadership styles, ethical and moral considerations, and communications.

Miss Renaud to Retire

Dolores R. C. Renaud '62

One of Lewiston's beloved French women has shared her education, experiences and TLC with many a Husson student since 1967 as instructor, professor, and Business Education department head. Her name is Dolores Rose Cecile Renaud, and she will retire in May.

Del is beloved by hundreds of Husson grads and her former students, now many of Maine's finest business teachers, are doing exceptionally well.

Upon high school graduation, Del went to work as duty registrar of deeds in Androscoggin County. In 1952 she enlisted as a WAVE, serving in personnel administration from 1952-59. In 1959 she became a Lt. Commander in personnel administration, U. S. Navy Reserve, in Bangor.From 1970-72 she was the administrative officer, Naval Reserve Military Sealift command, Bangor. While in the Naval Reserve, she was an instructor in personnel administration.

Del was awarded a Husson B.S. in Business Education with a minor in secretarial science in 1962. She received her Master's degree in education from UMO in 1967 and a Certificate of Advanced Study in teaching supervision from UMO in 1976. She also did further study at Walden University in Florida.

While a student at Husson, Del was active in Epsilon Tau Epsilon Sorority and the Teacher Education Association. Del is to be commended for her academic excellence, graduating as valedictorian of the class of 1962. The Naval Reserve hours of duty really pushed her to the point of leaving the service. But with a determination abetted by a friend, she managed to continue as a reserve for 20 years' service to her country. Del's other honors include Tau Epsilon Scholastic Society, Husson's Outstanding Educator in 1976-77 and being named to the Outstanding Educators of America in 1974.

Del is active in the National and State Associations of Teacher Educators, BEAM, MVA, NBEA, NEBEA, Phi Beta Lambda and Delta Phi Epsilon.

Her contributions to education consist of so many seminars, panels, and workshops that they are too numerous to list. She has always presented the Husson image in an honorable manner. She has served as an executive board member of BEAM, and has co-edited several teaching articles.

There is not a faculty committee that Del has not been a member of in her 20 years. She has served as the faculty representative on the Husson alumni board for a number of years.

Del says her retirement will be spent in travel, skiing, and all the activities she has had to pass by while actively pursuing her career.

The Alumni Association is happy to have had the opportunity to spotlight Dolores and to recognize the many contributions she has made to Husson. Carry on, "Admiral."

Local Composer Pens New Husson Song

Piece to Premiere at May 3 Pops Concert

Gordon W. Bowie, composer and conductor of the Bangor Band, has written a new song for the College, entitled "The Bells of Husson." The work will be premiered at a spring "Pops" concert by the Bangor Band to be held at Husson on Saturday, May 3, 1986.

"The piece is really five songs together," says Bowie. "It includes a graduation march, an alma mater, a mission song, and two "fight" songs for the pep squad to use at Braves games." The piece's title, "The Bells of Husson," refers to the Epsilon Tau Epsilon bell tower located in the center of the campus, which has become the College's symbol in its advertising and public relations. The song was commissioned as a gift to the Twenty-First Century Fund from alumni Rod '76 and Lisa (Collins) Hotham '77.

A native of Bayshore, New York, composer Bowie has been living and working in Maine as a musician and music teacher since 1965. He has been band director at several Maine high schools, and was Colby College's band director for seven years.

Bowie plays principal and bass trombone for the Bangor Symphony Orchestra, with which he has performed for the last 21 years. He recently won a multi-state competition to compose a town march for Hollis, New Hampshire.

The piece, "The Hollis Town Band March," premiered on March 15, 1986, in Hollis. Hollis Band conductor David Bailey relinquished his baton to Bowie for the event.

In 1952, Bangor resident William J. Cupp composed the "Husson Song" with words by Betty Haldane '52. Now Husson is fortunate to have two fine pieces dedicated to it.

For more information about the May 3 "Pops" concert at which "The Bells of Husson" will premiere, contact the Alumni Office at 947-1121, ext. 267.

President's Corner

In many ways, this has been an unusual year for the College. It seems as though the world around us is changing at an ever-increasing rate, particularly the business world. Many of the predictions of only five years ago are now reality. Keeping pace with change has become our major challenge here at Husson.

The advent of a new year is appropriately a time for reflection on the past. Recently, after one of my periodic tours of the campus, it occurred to me just how much change has taken place at Husson College since I first became associated with it forty years ago.

That was in 1946. Enrollments were up, swelled by World War II veterans. We were at Park Street then and because of the limited facilities there, it was not only a busy place but a crowded one. We had very little then of what today we call "technology." The typewriters in the typing rooms were manual, and there were no computers. Chief Husson was busy scouting the neighborhood for more room. But despite the crowding, it was a happy place. A lot of good learning took place at Park Street. Two buildings were eventually added to the Park Street College to help alleviate the situation during the early 50's.

Even then, major changes were inevitable. In 1968, the fulfillment of Chief's dream was realized when the College moved to the new, spacious campus on outer Broadway. And the good learning continued although in a different way. New terms were creeping into our language and they had a great deal to do with the very character of Husson College. Our students had to achieve "computer literacy." And many had to master something new called, "word processing." A graduate program was added to the curriculum followed by a nursing program.

The student profile changed radically. The male/female ratio went back and forth as the average student age increased. In the early 1970's, the College began offering degree programs at extension sites throughout the state. A lot of gray-headed graduates started coming across the stage at commencement ceremonies.

My years here have been good ones, not the least because of change. From them, however, I have learned that many more changes lie ahead if we are to continue to meet the needs of our students as we prepare them for the 21st century.

Husson College Endowed Distinguished Professorship of Accounting

Husson College is recognized throughout New England for its outstanding accounting program. Husson accounting graduates are actively recruited by the "Big Eight" accounting firms. Husson accounting majors take 36 credit hours of accounting instead of the usual 15 and learn from a faculty comprised of certified public accountants. To bring national recognition to this exceptional program, Husson would like to create a named distinguished professorship of accounting. The responsibilities of the visiting scholar would include teaching as well as developing and delivering a lecture series for the Bangor and Portland business communities.

Student Aid

In recent years, state and federal financial aid funds have been diminishing. Developing private sources of assistance is imperative. Husson is a college of opportunity. Endowment funds must be raised to help deserving students achieve their educational goals. In addition to maintaining current programs, Husson's new goals include a merit scholarship program, further development of the Co-op program, a scholarship award for outstanding contributions to the college community (for upperclassmen), and a scholarship award program for outstanding high school graduates coming to Husson.

Faculty/Staff Development

Endowment income is essential to fund the professional development of Husson's faculty and staff. The needs are particularly acute in the fields of business, accounting, and nursing which are in a state of constant technological change.

Endowment for Academic Programs

Library Acquisitions

Husson students have highly specialized research needs and updated collections must be maintained in business, accounting, taxation, and nursing. The library's rate of acquisitions must be increased to keep pace with the everchanging technologies in these fields.

Cultural Activities

The College's student Cultural Committee brings a number of nationally recognized speakers, performers, and art exhibitions to the campus each year. Through this program, Husson students are exposed to a diversity of thought and expression. Endowment income would be used to expand this program.

Honors Program

Husson proposes to underwrite with endowment an academic honors program for its gifted and talented students.

Program/Curriculum Revision

Endowment generated funds are needed for the annual review and revision of Husson's programs and curriculum in order to be responsive to the needs of the business and medical communities.

Eustice In SCORE Position

Husson professor Russell C. Eustice of Prospect Harbor has been named alternate District SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives) Representative for Maine according to G. Eustice has also owned his own business, Mid-Atlantic Associates, Inc., a manufacturer's representative for Wella Products. He also spent a number of years in marketing and sales with Johnson & Johnson.

Out of the Shoebox ... We pulled this photo out of the shoebox in the attic for the second memory lane photo contest. The first person to drop a note to the Alumni office with the correct name of the event and the year it happened will win a set of Husson wine glasses.

Last issue's winner ... Evelyn (Burton) Foster '69, of Bucksport, was the first alumnus to correctly identify the characters in "Bus Stop," done by the Husson Players in 1967. The actors in the photo are: Carole (Buker) Horch '70 as Cherie, George Easton as Will Masters, James O'Connor '69 as Bo Decker, and Neil Mallett '68 playing the role of Virgil Blessing. Congratulations, Evelyn!

Foreign Students Master English at Husson

Sharpening listening skills in the language lab

Every four weeks, from countries all over the world, a special breed of students arrives on the Husson campus. Armed with only a suitcase and a passport, and speaking little or no English, these students come to Husson for an intensive, challenging total immersion course in the English language and American customs and lifestyles.

The program, called the International Center for Language Studies, has been affiliated with Husson since 1977. But only recently has ICLS found a permanent home as an official Husson program.

Most students in the ICLS program are preparing to study at universities or technical schools that require fluency in English. Some are sent by their businesses so that the company will have English speaking employees to deal with American companies. Some are vacationing. Quite a few like Husson so much that once they are able to pass the English proficiency test, they enroll as regular degree students right here.

ICLS students need varying degrees of help with their English. Some need only a review, and others must begin with the basics and slowly increase their proficiency level. That's why the length of a student's stay varies from one to nine months.

But for all of the students, only English is used in ICLS classrooms. And because most ICLS students live in the Husson dormitories, eat in the dining commons, and participate in regular Husson activities, they hear only English all day long.

Worried that such an abrupt change in country, culture and language might be difficult for the students, I asked William McCarthy, ICLS director, about the adjustment period.

"The majority of ICLS students have been tourists in countries other than their own, so they've been exposed to other languages including English," said McCarthy. "When a new ICLS student arrives, a staff member will help with the settling in process, like explaining the meal ticket system and pointing out the dorm and cafeteria, but after that they're on their own. It's a little bit of a shock to some, but everyone has survived it. They know what to expect."

Upon arrival at Husson, an hour-long placement test is administered to the students to determine their English proficiency level. From there on, although students may be at different levels in their fluency development, the ICLS students' schedules are all the same.

On a typical day, grammar class starts at 9 a.m. Later in the morning, pronunciation and listening exercises are done. After lunch, classes continue with reading and writing, and then the remainder of the afternoon is spent in the language lab in Peabody Hall doing listening and reading exercises.

As most people know, learning the verb forms and grammar doesn't make one able to slip unnoticed into another culture. Mary Locke and Bob Fortier, ICLS instructors, teach more than reading and writing. They also teach the students about customs, slang, and American personalities. "There's more to living in America than speaking English," Mary Locke explained. She helps students learn to shop, how to find out what activities are available to them, how to protect themselves from Maine's cold winters. She says that a student from a tropical country may look outside, see the sun shining, and assume that it will be warm outside.

Mary Locke also coordinates the Host Family program, whereby ICLS students are introduced to a local family and are then included in family holidays or outings. This gives the students a chance to see a close-up picture of American culture, and exposes the local families to students of many different cultures. In addition, the ICLS staff organizes a variety of outings for the students including an annual summer overnight at Islesford, complete with lobster dinner, which is organized by Locke.

Since 1977, ICLS students have come to Husson from 52 countries. Their average age is 23 and their average stay in the program is two and one half months.

At the end of every week, the students' proficiency is tested, and successful completion of a test after four weeks at one of the nine proficiency levels leads to promotion to the next higher level. How long a student stays at Husson is usually determined by that initial placement test result, McCarthy says. Students may start out at the middle levels if they have mastered some English before arriving at Husson.

ICLS students learn about the Husson program through recruiters in their country or by reading the Husson ICLS brochure at U. S. information agencies overseas, embassies, or foreign foundations with English language libraries. Word of mouth is another recruitment tool, according to Bill McCarthy, accounting for the fact that several ICLS graduates have convinced their sisters, brothers, cousins and friends to later enroll.

Although there are several different kinds of English-as-a-second-language programs available in the U. S., Husson's program is unique because the students are integrated right into Husson campus life, a tremendous learning opportunity. Regular Husson students benefit too, as ICLS students are mainstays in the International Club and international cultural activities. Some ICLS graduates have been asked to speak at local grammar schools about their countries' cultures.

The number of ICLS students at each session has dropped since late 1982, according to McCarthy, because of the strong U. S. dollar and because of economic constraints on some countries, particularly in South America. But he expects the enrollment rate to level off due to an increase from some areas, including Malaysia, Korea, and Hong Kong.

1986 Award Nominations Sought

Homecoming '86 will be held on October 24 and 25. As in the past Husson's Alumni Association will honor individuals for professional excellence and outstanding achievements.

Two of the coveted awards are the Outstanding Alumnus Award and The Service Award. To qualify for the former, one must be a graduate of Husson College or its predecessor schools. In addition, this individual must have made a significant contribution to the well-being and perpetuation of Husson College and a significant accomplishment in the advancement of, or in the personal development of, this person's career (especially involving his/her degree specialty).

To be nominated for the Service Award, one need be an employee of Husson College (without restrictions in area, type or length of employment) and have made a significant contribution to the continuing development of Husson College. This person should also possess a known and demonstrated dedication to quality employment and cooperative involvement with students, staff, faculty, and administration.

Several Honorary Awards may also be presented. Traditionally, these have been awarded to non-alumni in the areas of Business Administration, Office Administration, Accounting, Business Education and Athletics in recognition of professional excellence. Each individual must have demonstrated in a dedicated and selfless manner his/her determination, involvement, concern, and faith in the ideals and goals of his/her profession and have made a significant contribution to the community.

This year, however, the field has been expanded to include alumni as well as non-alumni nominations. Nominations can be made from the traditional categories or from less traditional areas (such as the liberal arts).

Those making the nominations must be willing to include adequate documentation (such as a resume) or be willing to submit these materials at a later date once the nomination has been confirmed.

All alumni are encouraged to respond. If anyone would like more information before making nominations, please contact the Alumni Office at Husson.

Husson Students Take a Walk on the Wild Side

Students Study Wild Blueberry Industry During Break

What's low in calories, delicious and good for you? Blueberry raisins. This tempting snack is the latest product innovation from one of Maine's strongest industries — wild blueberries. Seven Husson students got a chance to visit blueberry production sites and talk to the experts while studying the wild blueberry business from the ground up (literally) in a pilot "Jan Plan" project during Christmas break.

Under the direction of student coordinator and marketing major Kim Allen, Leanne Bourgeois, Bob Gallagher, Doug Mehne, Hilary Hickson, Janet Wentworth and Jeri Cloutier each researched a segment of the Maine wild blueberry industry. With the help of industry experts, they studied operations management, nutrition, advertising and marketing, product development and trade relations between the U.S. and Canada. Each student selected a research area based on his or her academic major.

"This was the first time a project like this had been done," said Allen, who added that each student gained a better appreciation of the realities of the business world. "All of us were impressed by how sophisticated the wild blueberry industry is," Allen said. Senior Doug Mehne echoed her observation: "It really opened my eyes to the seriousness of the business world — if you make a mistake, you lose money."

The purpose of this pilot program, according to Academic Dean Gary J. Doberstyn, Ph.D., was for the students "to learn how to learn. They showed they could learn, assess information and make informed judgments without the structure of a classroom setting, instructors, or textbooks." Dr. Amr Ismail, vice president of Maine Wild Blueberry in Machias, agreed. "The students' questions showed they not only understood the information but had processed it and narrowed the focus on the segment of the industry that interested each student," he said.

After several weeks of preliminary research, the students spent the first week of the winter-break program touring blueberry operations and talking to industry experts. For Bob Gallagher, senior marketing student, seeing production from start to finish was the best part of the learning experience. "Watching as the fields were harvested, pruned, and pollinated with bees shipped in from out of state was fascinating," Gallagher said. The second and third weeks were spent doing research, conducting follow-up interviews and writing a group proposal.

The blueberry experts who helped the students were all very helpful, according to Allen. In addition to Dr. Ismail, the students also met with Ed Piper, executive secretary of the Blueberry Council; Tom De Gomez, a specialist from the UMO Extension Service, and Husson president Delmont N. Merrill, vice president of Merrill's Blueberry Farms in Ellsworth.

Allen's comment that she "learned more than I ever could have from a book," was repeated by many of her fellow students. As group coordinator, Kim also learned first-hand about time management, motivation, teamwork, organization and leadership. "Everyone was motivated to do good work and was very easy to keep on track," Allen said.

The students submitted a proposal to Dr. Doberstyn which contained the contributions of each participant. Their proposal reflected their group analysis of the future of the wild blueberry industry and their market projections and suggestions. A follow-up evaluation session was conducted with the students, Dr. Doberstyn, and faculty advisors Paul Goss, Ph.D., and Russell C. Eustice.

The consensus of the students at the end of the project was — time well spent! They benefitted from seeing the intricacies of running a real business. Their enthusiasm was shared with the blueberry experts who helped them in this unique learning experience. Tom De Gomez said he was impressed that the students were "prepared with well thought-out and insightful questions." Dr. Ismail praised their work habits and values, adding, "the students really put heart and soul into the program. Their behavior and attitude showed a great deal of maturity."

Notes From Clara

by Clara L. Swan '33
President, Alumni Association

First things first! A happy and prosperous spring to you all. I'm getting very anxious to get out on the lake to do some fishing. Won't be long now.

Lots has been happening at Husson this spring. Both the men's and women's basketball teams had fine seasons. The men's team had a wonderful European tour during the Christmas break, winning three of their five games in Scotland and England. Now it's time to look forward to the baseball, softball and golf seasons, and I'm sure all of the teams will do well. If you're in the Bangor area, you can get a free pass to all home games. See the coupon in this Ledger — right by the spring sports schedule.

This year's bus trip to Quebec Winter Carnival was at least as much fun as last year's. I'd like to see more alumni attend. You don't know what a great time you're missing! It wasn't nearly as cold this year.

We had another very successful Senior Reception in March. The focus this year was on careers, not just jobs. Senior students were able to ask successful alumni and friends for advice not just on how to get a job, but also on how to decide where they want to be ten years from now and how to get there.

The 1985-86 Alumni Association Board is ready and willing to do their best to promote alumni activities, keep you informed, listen to your ideas, and integrate your suggestions into our plans. We're already working on another gala Homecoming, scheduled for October 24 and 25.

Don't the Husson ads on TV make you proud of your alma mater? How much these student and alumni "stars" love Husson really shines right through. Gives me a warm feeling every time I see one.

In reminiscing with a friend the other day, the subject of liberal arts courses came up. Do any of you men remember your dancing classes with Polly Thomas at the Thomas School of Dance? You either hated it or loved it, but aren't you glad now that I made you do it?

Today I want to tell you about the College's Twenty-first Century Fund campaign. Be sure to see the other stories about the campaign in this issue.

In 1966, Husson conducted its first capital campaign and raised $600,000 for the construction of an all-new, much needed campus. Today, we're raising the funds necessary to give the campus some capital improvements and to enhance the College's academic programs for the twenty-first century, and very importantly, to build an endowment.

The members of the Alumni Board are now being contacted and asked to make a 3-year pledge of support for their alma mater. It is wonderful for this College to have the support of so many thoughtful alumni. I hope each and every one of you will respond generously when you are contacted. I am counting on you, as usual!

Stay active and well, and keep Husson in your thoughts as you know you are in mine.

You are Cordially Invited . . .

If you are going to be in the Bangor area, you are invited to visit the Husson campus. You may tour the College campus, attend a sporting event or stay for a complimentary dinner with the students in Dickerman Dining Commons. Husson College invites you to take this opportunity to visit your alma mater, reminisce with professors and meet the Husson students of today.

Contact the Alumni Affairs Office at 947-1121, ext. 267 for further information.

Scenes from the 1st Annual Husson "Pops" Concert

Conductor Gordon W. Bowie led the Bangor Band in performing "The Bells of Husson." Composed and arranged by Bowie, the title of the piece refers to the Epsilon Tau Epsilon Bell Tower located in the center of the campus. Bowie recently won a multi-state competition to compose a town march for Hollis, New Hampshire.

Rod '76 and Lisa '77 Hotham look at a signature copy of the score of the "Bells of Husson" which premiered at a concert held on May 3. The Hothams commissioned the song which includes a graduation march, an alma mater, a mission song, and two fight songs for the pep squad to use at Braves games.

Commencement Commencement Commencement

Two hundred thirty pairs of eyes were sparkling with anticipation on a slightly cloudy day in May as the Husson College Class of 1986 prepared to receive their diplomas. In flowing gowns and graduation caps, they marched with faculty and administrators from Peabody Hall, past the bell tower, and into Newman Gymnasium in a procession that has become an important Husson tradition.

Forrest N. Shumway, chairman of the board of the Allied-Signal Company, was the graduation speaker on May 17. Born in Skowhegan and raised in Bangor, Shumway was a central figure in the 1985, $5 billion deal merging Allied Corporation with the Signal Companies. He was awarded an honorary Doctorate in Business Administration.

Honorary degrees were also awarded to Great Northern Paper Company president Robert F. Bartlett and to Anita C. Stickney, chairman of the board of Deering Ice Cream Corporation. Bartlett was awarded an honorary Doctorate of Business Administration, Stickney an honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters.

Shumway was honored for "devoting his talents to the practices of business and law and for providing a role model to all Maine people," said Husson president Delmont N. Merrill.

Shumway launched his legal career in the office of the Los Angeles county counsel after serving his country in the U. S. Marine Corps. In Los Angeles, he served as a senior law clerk and later as deputy county counsel.

He was educated at Stanford University where he earned a degree in political science in 1950 and a law degree in 1952.

In 1957, Shumway joined Signal's legal department ond two years later was named secretary of the company. He was appointed assistant general counsel in 1960 and the following year was elected vice president, general counsel.

He continued his career at Signal Companies where he was named president in 1964 and chief executive officer in 1968. He has been a member of Signal's board of directors since 1958. On February 5, 1980, he was elected chairman of the board.

In addition to his duties at Allied-Signal, Shumway is a trustee of the University of Southern California and Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in La Jolla, California. He is also a director of Aluminum Company of America, First Interstate Bancorp, Transamerica Corporation, and The Clorox Company.

Shumway is a member of the board of visitors of the University of California at Los Angeles Graduate School of Management, a member of the Hoover Institute, Stanford University, and a member of the board of overseers of the University of California in San Diego.

Robert F. Bartlett, a native of St. Francis, received an honorary Doctor of Business Administration for his "determination to preserve Maine's natural resources while strengthening the state's forest industry," Merrill said.

"Shumway, 57, was a central figure in the $5 billion deal (joining Allied Corporation and Signal Companies) that, except for recent oil industry mergers, is one of the largest ever."

May 18-19, 1985

One of Bartlett's most important achievements was helping Great Northern Paper Company to grow into Great Northern Nekoosa Corporation.

As president of Great Northern Paper and vice president of Great Northern Nekoosa, Bartlett has devoted his time to preserving and replenishing the state's natural resources.

Educated at Ricker College and the Hartford Institute of Accounting, Bartlett serves as a director for Merrill Bankshares Company, Eastern Maine Healthcare, and the Greater Portland Chamber of Commerce. He is a trustee of Westbrook College.

Chairman of the board of Portland-based Deering Ice Cream Corporation, Anita C. Stickney was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree for "generously sharing her business and organizational skills with many cultural, civic, and political concerns in the state of Maine," said Merrill.

Stickney is treasurer of Congressman John McKernan's gubernatorial campaign.

She was one of three women to graduate in the first small company management program at Harvard's Graduate School of Business. She received her undergraduate degree in economics from Vassar College.

Stickney has been appointed to the Maine Management & Cost Survey Commission created to streamline state government. She is also a member of the state board of economic development, the advisory board of Key Bank of Southern Maine, and the Business Policy Council of the State of Maine.

Stickney is a director of the Maine State Chamber of Commerce and Industry and a member of the Committee of 200, a national organization of 200 entrepreneurial women business executives. In addition, she serves as a trustee or a director for numerous business, civic, and cultural institutions.

Also honored during the Commencement ceremony were the valedictorians and salutatorians for both Husson's full time program and the Continuing Education and Extension Division (part time) evening program.

The valedictorian for the day school program was Mona E. Davis of Ellsworth. Davis received her Bachelor of Science in Business Teacher Education and had a grade point average of 3.88. She is presently teaching at Gorham High School. Davis is a member of Phi Beta Lambda and was named a Blaine House Scholar in 1985.

Named salutatorian for the day program was Denise K. Joyce of Swan's Island; she graduated with a 3.86 grade point average in Business Teacher Education. Joyce, also a member of Phi Beta Lambda and a Blaine House Scholar, was the 1985 recipient of the Eastern Business Education Association Scholarship award in Washington, D.C. She has also received the National Business Education Association Award of Merit.

Selected as valedictorian in the CEED program was Deborah J. Wilson of Mars Hill, who received her Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration. Wilson completed her courses at Husson's extension site at Loring Air Force Base. Her grade point average was 3.99.

Janis M. Piper of Ellsworth was named salutatorian of the CEED program with a grade point average of 3.92. Piper, an office supervisor at Bangor Hydro-Electric Company, received a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration.

Hometown Boy Shumway Honored at Reception

Bangor native Forrest N. Shumway, the 1986 Commencement speaker, was honored by Husson Trustees and his childhood friends at a cocktail party following graduation. The reception was held at his boyhood home on State Street in Bangor, now the residence of Harold and Estelle Robinson who graciously hosted the 75 guests.

Shumway has maintained close contact with his childhood friends though he left Bangor over 35 years ago. Husson reunited "Shum" with his pals, among them Robinson Speirs. Mr. and Mrs. Speirs hosted a private dinner for Shumway following the cocktail party.

Ken Hews '70 at the Helm of the Changing Healthcare Industry

Kenneth A. Hews '70, Vice President and Treasurer of Eastern Maine Medical Center in Bangor, is the newly-elected chairman of the Healthcare Financial Management Association, a national organization devoted to educating its 25,000 members about trends in healthcare finance. He is not quite forty years old. To say that he is one of Husson College's best success stories is a vast understatement for he is a man of energy, dedication, patience, and vision. We will be hearing success stories about him for many years to come.

"I'm a positive person. I think positive people tend to be successful and negative people will fall by the wayside."

A native of Dover-Foxcroft, as is his wife Linda, Hews attended Foxcroft Academy. He was not even considering accounting as a career, let alone hospital finance, when he started college at the University of Maine at Orono.

"My mother wanted me to be a doctor, so I started at Maine in pre-med, and very soon decided that wasn't what I wanted in life, that I really was more interested in business," Hews says. "At that point I transferred to Husson because it had the premiere accounting program ... even then if you had asked me if I would become a hospital executive, I would have said no. I would have said hospitals just have doctors and nurses."

Already married before he started college, Hews commuted to Husson from Dover-Foxcroft, where he worked almost full time at the Shop 'N' Save. After four years of commuting, he vowed that someday he'd have a job within easy walking distance from his home. Today, he and Linda and their children, Ryan, 18, and Heather, 15, live nine-tenths of a mile from EMMC.

"I hire people who push me for my job and that way I know the organization is served and I'm challenged to stay on top of the issues. I try to keep at least a half step ahead of the staff," he says.

Keeping one step ahead of the HFMA's 25,000 members is no easy task either. Hews believes that future challenges should be viewed as opportunities. He has appointed three new committees to the HFMA organization and named two Chairman's task forces to assure that HFMA will continue to be involved in, rather than reacting to, changes in healthcare finance.

What does the future hold for this young success story? In the immediate future, a chance to indulge in his passion on a trout fishing trip to Labrador with his father and a few friends. Nothing seems to make Ken Hews happier than fishing or telling stories about it. In his office, he has a photograph of himself holding an eighteen-pound Atlantic salmon he caught in Northern Canada, just south of the Arctic Circle. He says he enjoys fishing in Canada because there are more fish and fewer fishermen.

Asked about his future career plans, Hews seems certain. He hopes to continue to serve Eastern Maine Medical Center in a significant way for a number of years, and he likes the location of his office; within walking distance of home and right on the bank of the Penobscot River.

After all, as he says, "When you think about it, where else can you work in a nice, modern, progressive and aggressive hospital and go out your back door to catch a salmon, an Atlantic salmon, on your lunch hour?"

"I hire people who push me for my job and that way I know the organization is served and I'm challenged to stay on top of the issues. I try to keep at least one step ahead of my staff."

Hews is rightfully proud of the financial management team at EMMC and of the quality of the Medical Center in general. "There are few hospitals in the country that have as many financial managers who are Fellows of HFMA as we do. We have five, which is an unusually high number," Hews is proud to say. Only 865 of HFMA's 25,000 members have achieved this honor. He attributes this to hiring good people, developing them, and pushing them along. His staff includes Dan Coffey, a 1972 Husson alumnus.

Hews ended up in hospital accounting when he and his family returned to Maine following a year with Arthur Andersen, a Big 8 accounting firm in Boston. Arthur Andersen had been the auditor for Eastern Maine Medical Center, and through that connection he found out about a staff accountant position at EMMC.

"It was the best thing that ever happened to me," Hews says now, after fifteen years with EMMC. "I came back to Maine, which I love. Our families were here, and I'm an avid hunter and salmon fisherman, and the Bangor Salmon Pool is right behind the Medical Center."

Not long after Hews started at EMMC, Robert Brandow, president of the Medical Center, sent him to a seminar being put on by the Healthcare Financial Management Association, entitled "Experienced Accountants — New to the Healthcare Field." Hews returned from Chicago knowing that his future was in healthcare management, and he couldn't wait to get involved. Get involved he did, rising rapidly through the ranks of both EMMC and the Healthcare Financial Management Association (HFMA).

He joined the local Maine chapter of HFMA in 1972 and became president in 1976, the year it was an award-winning chapter of the national organization. This recognition on the national level led to his being named to an HFMA task force and soon after to its national board of directors. Seven years later, he is chairman of the 25,000 member organization.

Along the way to the Chairmanship, Hews became a Fellow of the HFMA in 1976, surviving its rigorous certification exam. He has received several HFMA awards, including the William G. Follmer Merit Award in 1976, the Maine Chapter HFMA Outstanding Service Award in 1979, the Robert H. Reeves Merit Award in 1980, and the Frederick T. Muncie Award in 1985.

Hews has held progressively more demanding positions at EMMC since he began there in 1971. He says he began to see the potential for rising to his present position when he became chief financial officer.

"At that point, I became a member of the senior management team of the hospital and I began to see the "big picture." I began to broaden my horizons as the hospital organization grew and I began to think more like a manager of the hospital than just an accountant," he says. Today, the Medical Center is one of twelve subsidiaries of Eastern Maine Healthcare. Hews is an officer in all hospital operations and the financial management of the related corporations.

A magna cum laude graduate of Husson, Hews feels challenged by his new position as treasurer of EMMC. In his new role, he is involved in all departments of the hospital.

"Fifteen years in progressing roles in the finance department allowed me to learn all about EMMC," he says. "I used to see the numbers, the dollars, the statistics. Now I'm seeing the other side too, the people side."

"I hire good people, which is one of the ways to be successful. Frankly, you can't do it all yourself. If you think you can, you're not going to be successful."

Kenneth A. Hews: A Leader and a Guide

Reprinted with permission of the Healthcare Financial Management Association.

The career of the Healthcare Financial Management Association's chairman in many ways reflects the changing environment of the healthcare industry.

Kenneth A. Hews has seen change in his own life paralleled closely by that of the industry.

He has progressed from an auditor with Arthur Andersen & Company in 1970, to vice president and treasurer of Eastern Maine Medical Center, Bangor, Maine. He is a Fellow of the Healthcare Financial Management Association (HFMA), in addition to being its new chairman.

In 1971, he joined Eastern Maine Medical Center in Bangor, a 416-bed institution, as a staff accountant. From then until 1983, when the Medical Center was reorganized, he held progressively more demanding positions as chief accountant, controller, director of fiscal services/chief financial officer, and vice president and treasurer after the reorganization. He is also an officer in 12 subsidiaries of Eastern Maine Healthcare. Hews' primary responsibilities are the majority of hospital operations and the financial management of all related corporations, including Eastern Maine Medical Center.

"My career development closely parallels the important changes we are seeing at HFMA, and what we would like to see in our members. It involves progressively greater involvement in the management of an institution, a reorganization, and involvement in the multi-faceted aspects of a large, diverse healthcare organization," Hews said.

His theme of 1986-87 "Meeting the Challenge of Change" further reinforces his belief that change, and positive accommodation to it, is to be sought as a means of personal and professional growth.

Hews sees HFMA's role in the changing healthcare industry in three ways — its effect on members as healthcare professionals, on their institutions, and on the industry as a whole.

"How HFMA affects the careers of its members is most apparent through the obvious professional recognition of certification, but the Association's influence goes beyond that. We are, and will continue to be, a vital source of information for members who must be up to date in a variety of topics relating to healthcare financial management. Our publications and periodicals bring into the member's office information that can change his career. Chapter meetings and educational offerings present opportunities for networking with fellow professionals that just cannot be obtained in any other way," Hews said.

"A major development in health care has been the emergence and continuing growth of multi-institutional organizations," Hews said. "From my own experience, I know that those involved need all the guidance and counsel they can get. Because a significant portion of HFMA membership is currently, or soon will be, involved to some degree with multi-institutional organizations, we have established a new Matrix committee to deal with the issue," he added.

"They will be asked to define a multi-institutional corporation, to learn how large a market it is, and to determine the extent to which HFMA's membership is in or affiliated with those corporations," he said.

The chairman's concern with change and the future is not new. When he was chosen chairman-elect last year, Hews began a program of chapter and regional visits that has already taken him from coast to coast.

Hews says some of the principles that make a successful outdoorsman, either hunter or fisherman, can be applied back to the business world.

"When you set out to do something, the degree of success you're going to have depends in large part on preparation. The good fisherman has scouted the river he's going to fish. He knows his quarry, its habitat, its habits, how it moves. The fisherman watches the weather and the currents, and he's patient.

"Many of these principles apply in different ways to the business world. Especially the preparation. And knowing how to get what you want. And it's not such a further extension of what we do at HFMA. In a way we provide the member with the information and skills he needs to function in a changing and often unknown environment. He can use what we have to offer to increase his chances of success," Hews said.

So Ken Hews, the careful fisherman and prepared professional, in many ways personifies the ideal HFMA member. To draw an outdoors parallel, he is both the fisherman and the guide. He has prepared himself, knows the waters, and as chairman is ready to lead others so they can have the same degree of success he has had.

"The degree of success you're going to have depends on preparation. The good fisherman has scouted the water, watches the currents, and is patient. It's the same in business."

"I've met with hundreds of members, and I expect to meet with many hundreds more as chairman. My year as chairman-elect was a busy one, and had a few surprises too," he said.

"The time spent away from my family and job was more than I expected. But that is more than repaid in the support of Bob Brandow (Hews' boss and a member of HFMA). My family is very supportive about my chairmanship, and they get to travel to some of the meetings.

"At the hospital, I was pleased to see such an outpouring of local pride from the staff, my peers, and the board of directors," Hews said.

Another discovery that Hews made involves his non-business passion for stalking the Atlantic salmon.

"In Maine, the best salmon fishing is in June. We had to make vacation plan alterations because of HFMA," he said.

It's appropriate that Hews mixes references to his leisure activities and HFMA-related topics. He says the four big thrills in his life have been "earning my FHFMA, the birth of our children, being nominated chairman of HFMA's board, and catching an Atlantic salmon in the Penobscot River behind the hospital. But not necessarily in that order."

An avid outdoorsman, Hews likes hunting, fishing and all sports. But it is the pursuit of the Atlantic salmon that brings out the tales.

"For thousands of years the salmon have been coming back to spawn at the exact spot they were born. They have specialized in a way. You can tell which rivers they were born in by their size, shape, and coloration. And fishing for them goes beyond just eating a delicious fish. Nature keeps the species strong by making the fish swim upstream and over obstacles that seem insurmountable — fallen trees, small falls, rapids. The weaker ones don't make it.

"But those that do make it are the strongest, the fittest, and they continue the species in their image. That's why when you hook a strong, healthy adult salmon on his way upstream, you sometimes let him go," Hews said. By Stan Dziedzic

College Kicks Off $2.5 Million Fund Drive

Capital needs such as endowment, renovations, and equipment cannot be met with annual fund gifts. Additional resources are needed as Husson College educates its students for the twenty-first century. In order to meet the educational challenges of the future and to continue to develop as an institution of high caliber, the College must raise $2,000,000 in capital and endowment funds and $450,000 in current funds over the next three to five years.

This spring, Husson began the first phase of a $2.5 million fundraising campaign — the Twenty-First Century Fund. In part, the campaign gifts will be used to make capital improvements in the campus dormitories, gymnasium and dining hall.

Husson College hopes to raise $1.5 million in endowment funds. The establishment of an endowment fund will provide the College with an additional and permanent source of income. The interest this money accrues will provide a cushion of funds which will be used for new academic programs, financial aid and professional development.

A third component of the campaign, $450,000, is earmarked for current use.

Campaign Progress

The campaign is already well on its way to being a success. With only the first phase of the Twenty-First Century Fund completed, Husson has raised over $830,000 from the Husson family — trustees, advisors, employees, friends, and a few alumni who came forward early to pledge their support.

In the employee campaign, 92% of Husson's 152 employees contributed $104,300, for an unprecedented average gift of $745. Both the percentage of donors and the size of the average gift represent overwhelmingly strong support from the College's employees.

Husson's Trustees and Presidential Advisors have also shown heartwarming support for the capital campaign. The Trustees alone have pledged more than $400,000, and to date the Advisors have pledged $104,995.

Alumni appeal letters and a record-breaking phonothon were conducted under the "current fund" component of the Twenty-First Century Fund. A total of $30,285 was raised from 350 alumni. $7,341 of that was raised during a phonothon held earlier this summer.

White joined The Institute in 1969 and is currently a member of the North Jersey Chapter. Previously, he was a member of the Philadelphia and Detroit chapters.

He has served as Chairman of the International Relations Committee and Vice Chairman of the Education Committee.

President's Corner

by Delmont N. Merrill '54

As memories of graduation fade and we prepare for another year at Husson College, I have been reflecting on how much education has changed in recent years. Every institution of higher learning is faced with the challenges of the technological revolution, changing demographics, and the national financial aid crunch.

Husson is rising to these challenges by treating them as opportunities for growth and new vision. The College is committed to finding new and better ways to provide quality business and nursing education. We encourage everyone associated with Husson — students, faculty, staff, alumni, members of the community — to help us find these ways. We believe when everybody has an active voice, the best ideas will naturally rise to the top.

Here on campus all of our faculty and administrators have an open-door policy and encourage students to share their concerns. In addition, many committees are staffed by a mix of students and administrators. Husson students also serve as a vital link to the community through the cooperative education program. All of these methods, both formal and informal, keep communication lines open and allow Husson to evaluate the needs of its many publics.

One exciting result of this assessment has been the creation of the Computer Information Systems Department. Rapidly evolving technology demands that today's computer instruction programs be continually updated. Husson is responding by providing up-to-date equipment and skilled professors.

Filling another gap is Husson South, which is expanding both in terms of size and curriculum. The Portland campus has moved to 222 St. John Street, a facility which is bigger than our present headquarters. We've increased our course offerings in the south market by introducing business teacher certification and four year accounting and business administration programs.

Husson has recently joined seven colleges in a collaborative effort to promote eastern Maine as the educational heartland of Maine. The consortium of area college presidents was formed to educate the public about the diversity of educational, environmental, and cultural advantages that eastern Maine has to offer. The consortium's first goal has been accomplished: an attractive brochure spotlighting each college's best features has been produced and distributed. The other seven colleges in the consortium are: Bangor Theological Seminary, Beal College, College of the Atlantic, E.M.V.T.I., Maine Maritime Academy, Unity College, and the University of Maine.

In the face of innovation and adaptation, Husson has received solid proof that we're doing things right. As other schools deal with declining enrollment, Husson has maintained a stable enrollment for the 1986/'87 school year. Part of this success can be attributed to the fact that the core of Husson's character never changes — people know what the College stands for. Husson has a tradition of providing students with a well-rounded education. Our gradutes have the academic, social, and leadership skills they need to succeed.

Having you, our alumni, stay in touch with the College tells us what we are doing right and what needs to be changed. The many success stories we hear about our alumni have given us a clear message that we're on the right track. And we plan to stay there.

Memory Lane Photo Contest

Out of the shoebox ... we pulled this photo out of the shoebox in the attic for the Third Memory Lane Photo Contest. The first person to drop a note to the Alumni Office identifying at least four of the seven people in the picture will win a set of Husson wine glasses. Send your entry to Memory Lane Photo Contest, Husson Alumni Affairs Office, One College Circle, Bangor, ME 04401.

Johnson Chosen for Quebec Seminar

Kenneth M. Johnson, Ph.D., chairman of Husson's Department of Arts and Sciences, has been selected to participate in the ninth Annual Quebec Summer Seminar. Only 30 faculty members from across the United States are chosen each year. The grant was awarded by the Center for the Study of Canada at SUNY-Plattsburgh and the Quebec government.

Dr. Johnson was chosen to participate in the seminar, which will be held in June of 1987, because of his efforts at Husson to promote the study of Canada. Over a period of two years, he developed a course entitled "History of Canada." The course was first offered in 1981. His goal for this course, Johnson said, is "to instill an awareness of and appreciation for the Canadian national experience."

This is the second award Dr. Johnson has received in the area of Canadian studies. In 1981, he was the recipient of a research fellowship sponsored by the Quebec Ministry for Intergovernmental Affairs.

The annual seminar will be held in Montreal and Quebec City and will include discussions about the history and sociology of Canada and its people. Participating in the discussions will be the seminar guests, politicians, media and business people, and cultural leaders. Some of the guest speakers in past years have included Robert Bourassa, Gerald Godin, Lise Bissonnette, Louis Laberge and Roch Carrier.

Richard Begin '58 Named Dean at Thomas

Thomas College President Cyril M. Joly, Jr., has announced that the Board of Trustees has appointed Husson graduate Dr. Richard L. Begin as Dean of the College.

As Thomas' chief academic officer, Dr. Begin is responsible for all undergraduate and graduate academic programs, student affairs, admissions, and financial aid. In addition, the library, registrar, faculty and veterans' affairs are included as Dr. Begin's areas of responsibility.

Dr. Begin, 50, joined the Thomas staff in 1966 as an instructor in the Business Division. Since then, he has taught a wide range of management and business law courses in the undergraduate, graduate and continuing education divisions. He was promoted to the rank of Associate Professor in 1977 and became a full Professor in 1982.

In addition to his teaching duties at Thomas, Dr. Begin has served as Director of Teacher Education, Business Division Chairman, Director of Academic Advising, and Director of Undergraduate Enrollment. He was also the first president of the Faculty Senate.

Dr. Begin received a B.S. from Husson College in 1958. He earned Masters degrees in Business Education and Business Administration from UMO. In 1980, Dr. Begin was awarded a Ph.D. in Educational Administration from Walden University.

His professional memberships include the North Atlantic Regional Business Law Association, American Business Law Association, New England Conference on Business Administration, and the Academy of Management. He has also served as chairman of the State of Maine Insurance Advisory Board and Director of S.A.D. #74. In 1984, Dr. Begin was awarded the Husson College Business Teacher Education Award by the Alumni Association.

"In his 20 years at the College, Dick has served in a variety of capacities and has been a member of every academic committee," stated President Joly. "This active involvement means he's thoroughly informed and knowledgeable about the character and mission of the institution. In addition, his professional memberships make him aware of trends in the higher education community. With this combination of knowledge and experience, I am confident Dr. Begin can provide the internal management necessary to ensure that, in this changing and challenging environment of higher education, Thomas remains an academically rigorous, economically viable institution."

According to Dr. Begin, one of his priorities as Dean of the College is faculty and staff involvement in decision-making. Along with input from the relevant faculty and staff committees, he plans to review Thomas' academic programs in order to "enhance the business character of the College and improve communication with different market areas." Dr. Begin added that he will review recommendations made by the New England Association of Schools & Colleges and develop concrete long-term strategies for maintaining Thomas College's primary objective of offering higher education for business and the professions throughout Maine and New England.

"My goal is to build the future in the areas in which Thomas is well-respected, namely the quality of the faculty, the ever-increasing academic strength of its students, and acceptance by the business community as indicated by the College's consistently high placement rate," Dr. Begin stated.

Notes From Clara

Alumni Association President

Dear Alumnus:

From my easy chair at Green Lake, I'm penning my last official column as president of the Alumni Association. Since this is my last column with a "presidential seal" on it, I'm going to take advantage of my captive audience and fit in everything I want to say.

Serving you the past two years has been a joy and your loyalty to our alma mater has been overwhelming. You made me proud when several of you volunteered your time during the busy summer season to staff Husson's 1986 phonathon. And those of you who were contacted by phone showed how much you support Husson with dollars and cents. Over seven thousand dollars! The money raised in just two nights by our volunteers was the largest amount ever pledged in a phonathon. You have my heart-felt thanks.

Last spring many of the Bangor area alumni gathered for two luncheons at Benjamin's Restaurant. We had a wonderful time. About 50 alumni had an hour each time to get caught up on news after the long winter.

The guest speaker at the first luncheon was Bud Leavitt, Maine's "Mr. Outdoors." After entertaining us with anecdotes from his long career as a sportsman and writer, Bud answered some burning questions like where do you find the biggest Atlantic salmon? We were lucky to get some of his time now that Bud is a big celebrity doing commercials with Clara "Where's the Beef?" Peller.

Our second luncheon was just as much fun. George Hale told us sport stories that had us all in stitches. And he told us the best high school basketball referee he ever saw — a man who could bring players and coaches back into line with one commanding look — was our own Del Merrill '54. Del never put up with any foolishness; I think he learned some of that at Husson under Chief's watchful eye.

I hope to see those of you in the Bangor area at the next luncheon scheduled for this fall. Watch your mail for details. And those of you in other parts of the state — we haven't forgotten you. If you have any ideas on how we could bring a group in your area together, drop a line to the Alumni Office. They would be glad to organize a breakfast, luncheon, or whatever.

Homecoming is only a few months away. Start making your plans to return to Husson on October 24 and 25. If you're like me, you can't wait to visit with classmates, friends, and teachers. The program is super; your Alumni Board is planning another action-packed weekend full of surprises for you.

It will make my weekend if I can say a personal "thank you" to each one of you for making the past two years happy ones. I remember all of you fondly. Along with all your successful careers, marriages, and children, I often think of your escapades while at Husson. We made time to have fun while you received an excellent education. That's what makes Husson special.

So long for now. You may think this is my "swan song" but, watch out. You never know where I'll pop up. Hope to see you in October.
