Welcome Home Braves

Welcome Home Braves

While most New England small college teams were fighting to stay in shape over the semester break, the Husson College Braves were busy with 10 games against unique opposition.

On December 31, the Bangor team left for a 15-day tour of the British Isles which included games against English and Scottish professional teams.

Husson finished the trip with a 7-3 record and what coach Bruce MacGregor terms a series of accomplishments.

"There is no question that the trip brought the team very close together," says MacGregor, "and that will be a major advantage in our attempt to succeed this year."

Husson has an 8-0 record in the United States this season and is currently leading the nation in NCAA Division III scoring and scoring margin.

"I think that we matured a great deal because we were in some very tough situations but didn't give up."

In the finals of the South Yorkshire International Tournament in Doncaster, England, on January 11, Husson fell behind by 18 points to the host Panthers at the mid-point of the first half. They fought back to go ahead by four early in the second stanza before eventually losing by four in the closing seconds of the contest.

MacGregor also points to a wide range of offenses and defenses facing the Braves as being possibly beneficial to the future fortunes of his team.

"We saw a variety of play, big and small, good shooters and strong rebounders and were able to adjust in most cases," says the Husson coach. "We had an extensive and taxing schedule that helped mature many of the players faster than would otherwise be expected."

Even with the accomplishments on the playing court, MacGregor claims that the highlight of the trip was found in the educational experiences of the trip. The players spent nights in a wide range of accommodations from European- and American-style hotels to English players' homes.

"We were intrigued to see the lifestyle of other countries. Also, we saw firsthand the historic landmarks of the region and the pride and determination of the English people," explained MacGregor.

Because there were no language barriers, Husson players were able to engage in an exchange of ideas with the English at many of the eight cities visited by the Braves.

"I think it goes without saying that this is an experience that will not soon be forgotten by the players," says MacGregor. "In fact, players that made the trip in 1978 claim that it was the high point of their college careers."

And how well did this team represent Husson College overseas? Good enough to be invited to tour Australia and Taiwan.

Dean's Message

By Dr. S. Bruce O'Donnell

In these pages a few months back, I had the opportunity to discuss some questions along with some theoretical possibilities facing the "new dean." The time has now come to discuss how some of that verbiage is being translated into actuality, at least insofar as the question of alcohol is concerned.

Over the summer of 1980, the Office of Student Life developed a plan for implementation in the fall relating to alcohol. The posture of the College was predicated on a simple philosophical statement:

> If you, as a Husson College student, choose to consume alcoholic beverages on campus you must do so within the provisions of the laws of the State of Maine and the City of Bangor and with a common sense realization of the rights and sensibilities of others.

This statement developed into a series of positions which, in effect, (1) reiterated the College's ban on sale of alcoholic beverages on campus, (2) limited the consumption of alcoholic beverages to private areas and public areas by permit only, and (3) acknowledged the State's minimum drinking age of 20.

From the perspective of the Dean's Office, the initial reaction of the student population was one of grudging acceptance, with perhaps more than a minor emphasis on the "grudging." With the passage of time and with increased experience with the new system, a few student proponents began to speak out, some minor modifications were made to correct some oversights in the original plan, and the general mood settled into one of acceptance with some support. As of this writing (late November), the mood of the campus appears to be one of general acceptance with increasing support.

Although it would be dangerous to infer a cause-effect relationship, other observations for the fall semester which may be related to the College's posture on alcohol include:

- reports from the faculty that class attendance has improved;
- reports from the student body that the residence halls generally are quieter, cleaner, and more conducive to study;
- a decrease in the campus vandalism rate;
- a decrease in the rate of overt interpersonal conflicts;
- a possible (the data is somewhat suspect) decrease in the sheer consumption of alcohol.

Enrollments

Enrollments at Husson College have topped 1400 making 1980-81 the biggest year in the 89-year history of the business college.

Husson has 758 full-time day students, 571 Continuing Education and Extension Division students and 85 graduate students.

Husson president Delmont N. Merrill noted the change in student demographics this year compared with the past.

"National estimates call for the average student age to increase as more nontraditional students enter college, and much of our increase can be traced to this trend," said Merrill.

Merrill also credited personnel in the three Husson divisions with the overall increase.

"There is no doubt that as the eighties progress, the number of potential students will decrease and competition among colleges for those students will be keen, " explained the Husson president. "I feel very confident beginning the decade with two consecutive years of increased enrollments."

Many Husson students cited a desire to attend a business college and Husson's high percentage of placement as primary reasons for entering the Bangor College.

Husson Cooperative Education

There were a number of changes in the Husson Cooperative Education last fall, not the least of which is an increased enrollment.

During 1980, 72 students in the program compared with 51 a year ago.

Robert H. Thomas, director of the program is optimistic about the future of the co-op at Husson in light of a $27,573 grant from the U.S. Office of Education.

The one-year grant runs from September 1, 1980 to August 31, 1981 and will fund continued expansion of cooperative education at Husson. Through co-op, students receive work experience in fields relating to their academic major. With the grant, Husson has employed a job developer who will seek and plan jobs that incorporate business learning experiences taught at Husson.

According to Thomas, his program will soon be able to place students in positions across Maine as a result of the grant and job development that the grant will bring. He also expects the number of students participating in co-op will increase with the number of attractive positions.

Thomas noted that large numbers of students work while attending college and said that co-op can be applied to make outside work a learning proposition that can be a valuable component of their total education while at the same time providing qualified personnel to participating employers.

Computerization

Computerization has hit the Office Administration Department as a result of the College's purchase of a CPT 8000 word processor a year ago and a word processing concentration being added to the curriculum last fall.

"Word processing has been slow in coming to Maine but is catching on now," says Janet Kinney, department chairperson. "As a business college, we must be able to offer a program that will meet the personnel training needs of the progressive businesses that invest in computers."

A word processing computer stores contextual material on discs allowing the operator to recall the information on a visual screen to make editorial changes.

By using a high speed printer, multiple copies of the material can be made. Kinney maintains that the two year associate degree program in data processing is unique for two reasons.

While most two-year programs require 12 credit hours of liberal arts courses, the data processing concentration requires 18, with 12 hours coming in English.

"It is obvious that the word processing specialist is going to need an extensive background in English in order to make the necessary editorial changes with the computer," explains Kinney.

Husson also places an emphasis on computer programing in the word processing curriculum because of the compatibility of the two systems. Many firms using the word processor are doing so in conjunction with their computers.

Many Maine companies and organizations are beginning to realize the potential of word processing, says Kinney. Eastern Maine Medical Center in Bangor is currently installing the equipment and has hired a recent Husson graduate as its operator.

There are indications that students also realize the potential of this training. Kinney reports that six Husson students who received their degrees last May returned in September to enroll in word processing.

Special Student Assistance

Husson College will be able to continue special student assistance projects as a result of a $70,791 grant from the U.S. Department of Education.

The grant provides funding for the third year of the College's Special Services to Disadvantaged Students (SSDS) program.

SSDS aids students to develop study skills, to adjust to college life and to overcome any unusual conditions that might affect their academic and social success.

"We were able to show that when coupled with other programs in existence at Husson, we could significantly increase the services provided to students," says Eleanor Horner, Director of SSDS. "Our whole purpose is to assist students in completing their career goals and, consequently, to retain them as students."

Development: The Effort To Go Ahead

William W. Cook
Director

In the past twenty or so years, there have been some major changes in the way institutions of higher education are administered. Gone are the dreaded Deans of Men and Women. In their place is a modern specialist, a Dean for Student Affairs, whose responsibility is helping students to develop positively as people.

Another interesting addition to the administrative scheme of things is a tier of boxes on the typical college wiring diagram. Those boxes are inhabited by vice presidents for and including, but not limited to, academic affairs, finance, research, and development. The vice presidents are followed by a new breed of directors for functions as diverse as student financial aid, institutional research, placement, and counseling.

One of the newest, and probably the least understood, offices at Husson College is the Development Office. Just what is institutional development? It's a fair question and one which I would like to try to answer. Institutional development has been generally defined as the effort to go ahead. A development office performs, for example, those tasks which will keep the college a dynamic and growing one. But such a general definition isn't a very useful one even though it has a noble sound.

At Husson College the Development Office has three official and discrete functions which are fund-raising and fund management, public information and alumni affairs. In short, the office deals with a world which is external to the College. To those official functions I would add the "utility" function, that is, the performance of tasks which no one else performs.

The most important fund-raising vehicle for the College is the annual fund in which alumni and friends are asked to participate. This office also prepares proposals for foundation and corporated donations as well as federal programs other than student financial aid. At present we have three such federal programs which provide funds in excess of $400,000.

Public information, or public relations as it is more usually called, is the effort to "tell the Husson story" to the public. It is not merely an attempt to glorify the college nor to glass over undesirable events. Public relations is the responsibility of everyone connected with the College although a comprehensive public relations program may be coordinated by a single person.

In the area of Alumni Affairs, we are working to develop a program which will; first, locate lost alumni; second, bring news of the College to all alumni; and third, serve our former students. Locating lost alumni is a difficult task. Those who know say that the alumni list at any given college is twenty percent inaccurate at any given time. Perhaps that is a comment on the mobility of our society.

We need to know who our alumni are so that we may communicate with them. The document which you are now looking at is our attempt at communication. We serve as well as a clearinghouse for alumni news and publish as many class notes as we receive.

Finally, our Director for Alumni Affairs, Mrs. Edna Edes, is now working to establish Alumni Association Chapters in several areas, and the number of them will expand over the next several years.

These, then, are the things we do on a formal basis. I spoke earlier about what I called the utility function or the performance of tasks which no one else performs. One of my annual chores (really, it's a pleasure) is writing honorary degree citations. I may find myself editing copy for the College catalog which our office publishes. Last winter I even wrote a self-study for the re-certification of one of our academic programs.

Development work is hectic and frequently frustrating, but it is never dull. I probably still have not defined development very well, but at least you have some idea of what we do.

Continuing Education and Extension Division

Starting last fall, Ellsworth-area residents have been able to attend Husson College without leaving Hancock County thanks to a new Continuing Education and Extension Division site at the Ellsworth Boggy Brook School.

Looking at the potential in the Ellsworth area, Husson officials found one of the largest population centers in Maine where there were no offerings in higher education. According to Lindon Christie, co-director of CEED, Husson officials felt that college courses would be completely justified in Ellsworth and, that, "Husson could fill a need that exists in that part of the state."

Market research in the area provided sufficient evidence of the educational need and Husson is offering six courses this fall including courses in accounting, business law, economics and business organization.

"Judging from the response that we've gotten from workshops and seminars that we have held in Ellsworth in the past, we felt that there was a desire among residents for sound business education," says Christie. Also, area businesses have been very receptive to a Husson site in Ellsworth."

Christie noted the centrality of Ellsworth and said that an extension site there draws students from Blue Hill and Bar Harbor as well as other communities.

Sixty students have enrolled in Ellsworth classes this fall and most are in degree programs.

"Of course, we encourage students to enroll in an associate or bachelor degree program instead of as special students," says Christie. "In Ellsworth we have found that most of the students want to enroll in degree programs."

Christie also says that most students want accounting and other technical business subjects.

"Students usually like to jump right into the business fields as a way of beginning their programs. Since we are known for the business courses, that is only natural. They realize that they will need other subjects to complete their degree but they often choose to take those courses later in their program."

Husson alumnus Wayne Wadman '58 has been hired as the Ellsworth site coordinator and steady growth is expected at the site.

Statewide, CEED enrollments are up over a third this fall, to 571 spread out over seven locations.

Attending Husson extension site courses are veterans, many of whom select business as a post-military career, small business owners, former Husson students and others who have never attended college. While students are of all ages, most are between 30 and 40.

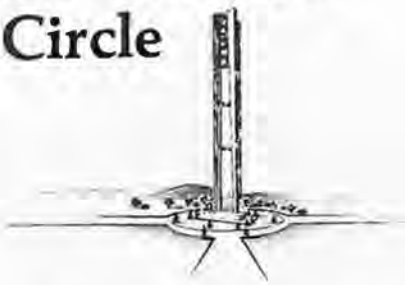

Christie noted that Husson alumni often take advantage of CEED to stay in touch with new innovations like computer technology and in some cases people with A.B.S. degrees are returning to a four year program.

"It is vitually impossible to categorize our students into any one type because situations and reasons for enrollment are different with every student." Christie does report that many students are female and express a high degree of job dissatisfaction.

"Quite a few students are using the program for career advancement. For example, there have been many cases of people with associate degrees or no college degree at all, returning to school because they have found that their advancement possibilities are limited without additional training."

What kind of a track record do CEED students have in the classroom? From last year's graduating class, the valedictorian David LaJoie attended classes in Westbrook and the Salutatorian Watson Clark studied in Rumford.

Around the Circle

The former director of the Northern Maine Vocational Technical Institute has been appointed co-director of the Continuing Education and Extension Division.

Harold L. Mailman has assumed the duties of on-campus director for the Division which is responsible for external site programs and workshops. Mailman will direct all activity at the Bangor site and handle all internal management of the division.

After receiving a B.S. degree from the University of Southern Maine, Mailman earned an M.S. degree at the University of Maine and did doctoral work at Pennsylvania State University.

Mailman taught at Camden and Madawaska High Schools and at USM before serving as the top administrator at NMVTI for 10 years. He has also served as the Coordinator of Maine Vocational Technical Schools for the State Department of Education as well as the State Director of Trade and Industrial Education and as the State Director of Manpower Development.

David L. Pelton of Lewiston has been appointed to the newly-created position of Associate Director of Intramurals, Recreation and Sports.

Pelton will be responsible for the nonintercollegiate programs for Husson students and will coach soccer in the fall and softball in the spring.

After receiving a B.S. degree from the University of Maine at Presque Isle in 1974, Pelton spent three years at Van Buren High School where he coached soccer, track and field, and junior varsity basketball.

He then moved to Richmond High School where he coached the state soccer champion in 1978 and 1979. After compiling a 38-2 record in two years he was named the 1979 "Coach of the Year" by the Maine State High School Coaches Association. He is also serving as president of the Maine State Soccer Coaches Association.

Joining the faculty in the Business Teachers Education Department is Dr. Kenneth Hallgren.

Hallgren will be teaching undergraduate methods courses but his main emphasis will be with the graduate program, says Dr. Jay L. Fennell, Vice-President and Academic Dean at Husson.

Hallgren received B.A. and M.A. degrees from Wayne State College and Ed.D. degree from the University of Northern Colorado. He has teaching experience at the University of Northern Colorado, Southeast Community College and various Nebraska high schools.

John H. Bubar of Winterport has become the head of the Accounting Department and joined on the accounting faculty by Dewey Martin.

Bubar served as a staff accountant for Berry, Dunn and McNeil in Bangor for 19 months following completion of a tour of duty in the U.S. Air Force. He has taught courses in finance at Husson and MacIntosh Junior College in Dover, N.H.

After receiving a B.A. degree in business administration from Colby College in 1968, Bubar earned an M.B.A. degree from the University of New Hampshire in 1970 and an M.S. degree from the University of Southern California in 1975.

Martin has worked as a tax manager for Price Waterhouse in Boston since 1977. Prior to that, he served as an accounting supervisor for the Harris, Kerr, and Forster Company.

Martin received a B.S. in accounting in 1971 and an M.S. in taxation in 1977 from Bentley College.

The Husson Court and Conference Reporting Program also has a new instructor with the appointment of Cynthia Wisser.

Wisser will be responsible for the court reporting program which trains students to record events verbatim.

A member of the National Shorthand Reporters Association, Wisser was an intern at the Kalamazoo (Michigan) Circuit Court and received an Associate of Applied Science degree from Ferris State College prior to coming to Husson.

Media Program

In an attempt to be responsive to the needs of the employing community, Husson College has established a series of programs implemented last fall.

Included in the academic innovations at Husson are a media communications minor and a word processing concentration.

Developed by a committee of Bangor area media professionals, the media communications program has resulted in a "rare affiliation between town and gown" says Eddie Owen of Bangor radio station WPBC. "Many schools claim to get input from the community, but here is a case where a group from the community actually prepares an academic program."

"The media program is light on the theory element, concentrating on practical applications of various skills," says Robert Diebold, Head of the Liberal Studies Division. "This approach makes the program consistent with the academic aims of Husson and distinguishes it from other media programs in existence."

The program was first suggested by Diebold, who queried Bangor advertising, radio, television and newspaper personnel about the feasibility of such a venture.

As the development of the program progressed, the original 10-member committee expanded to 16 volunteers and a steering committee had to be formed to work on various aspects of the program proposal.

Committee chairman Hal Wheeler, president of Hal Wheeler and Associates Advertising Agency, said that the committee took a very pragmatic approach to the program, dealing with a short-term, easily implemented program and a larger program to be incorporated in the future.

Bob Cardin of Cardin Advertising Agency in Veazie served on the committee even though he didn't think the program would directly benefit him.

"A program like this is valuable to the media industry as a whole and everyone involved in the media has a stake in it at least indirectly," says Cardin.

"We certainly should be willing to become involved ourselves if that's what it takes to train high-caliber people for the profession."

Cardin feels that a media communications minor together with a business major will give students two options in the job market. Entering the business world, the students will have an understanding of media that will foster better working relationships. Cardin also points to the possibility of students entering the media field and, with their business training, being able to advance to management ranks in the future.

Even though the media program is in operation, the media professionals are not through with the project. All courses are being taught by committee members.

Business Teacher Education . . . Coaching

Students in the Business Teacher Education program at Husson College can now receive an academic background in coaching.

According to Business Teacher Education department head Dolores Renaud, a new coaching option has been developed that students can take in addition to their regular curriculum.

"This is an area that we feel will make our students even more marketable as business teachers because of the need for coaches in Maine high schools."

Renaud cited cases of Husson graduates being hired as business teachers partly because they had played a particular sport in college and could coach that sport in the high school.

"This program does not mean that our students will be certified as coaches because there is no mechanism for certifying coaches in Maine," cautioned Renaud. "But it will provide them with another advantage when competing for teaching jobs around Maine."

Husson College Trustees

The Board of Trustees at Husson College in Bangor has two new members following the appointment of Francis B. Sprague and James B. Coffey, Jr. to the governing board at their annual meeting on November 8.

Sprague is the former Director of Eastern Maine Vocational Technical Institute in Bangor. He graduated from Middlebury College and received a masters degree from St. Lawrence.

Sprague has been active in civic affairs, serving as vice-president of the Katahdin Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Coffey is currently serving as director of Community Relations and Development at Eastern Maine Medical Center. He has a BA degree from the University of Massachusetts and a masters degree from the University of Maine at Orono. He has also served with the Eastern Maine Development District.

Coffey is a member of the executive committee of the New England Association for Hospital Development as well as many other professional and civic organizations. He is also the recipient of the 1980 Vernon P. McFadden Award for Community Service.

Chairman of the Husson College trustees, Malcolm Stevenson cited the experiences of both new trustees as being valuable to the board.

"Francis Sprague, because of his role in the creation and early development of EMVTI will be able to provide good insight into many of the problems facing higher education in the coming years," said Stevenson. "Jim Coffey, with his background in development, will be able to assist with the fund raising and the marketing of the College."

In other business, the Husson trustees reestablished two standing committees dealing with the academic and development areas of the college and reelected the officers of the college corporation for another term. Those reelected were Stevenson, Chairman; John E. Hess, Clerk; Delmont N. Merrill, President of the College; James F. Jaffray, Treasurer and Vice-President for Financial Affairs; Norman Lydick, Controller; and Jay L. Fennell, Vice-President and Dean for Academic Affairs.

A Message From Epsilon Delta Alumnae Sorority

Epsilon Delta Alumnae Sorority is a social-service organization of women who attended or graduated from Husson College. Many of the members are former sisters of Epsilon Tau Epsilon and Delta Sigma Delta, chapters of Pi Rho Zeta that are still active on campus. The sorority extends a cordial invitation to any alumnae of Husson to attend its programs. Membership dues for the year are $2. For further information, contact Joyce Goodine, 945-5641, Extension 202; Marlene Lloyd, 945-5641, Extension 311; or any officer of the group.

Officers for the year who were installed at the September meeting are: Marion Currier (Mrs. Harold), President; Marlene Lloyd, Vice-President; Della Gleason (Mrs. Michael), Secretary; Bonnie Bunch, Treasurer; Esther Kennett (Mrs. Ronald), Sgt.-at-Arms/ Historian.

A night on the Town will occur on January 28. A place or activity is selected for the meeting for this month and the date might be changed accordingly. We have enjoyed good meals, plays, and civic programs in past Nights on the Town.

In February a pot-luck dinner is planned for 7 p.m. on February 25. A guest speaker is planned for this evening.

March 25th features another guest night with members being encouraged to bring guests to the meeting. Our speaker is to present the subject of gravestone rubbing, and the members hope to provide a meal of a diet-de-lite sampling smorgasbord. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m.

In April the sorority plans to have the on-campus sororities of Pi Rho Zeta, Epsilon Tau Epsilon and Delta Sigma Delta, as guests. The program is planned to include folk music, dessert and coffee, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The May 27th meeting is traditionally a picnic off-campus. The weather has been most uncooperative for the last several years, but members have enjoyed eating indoors at the Teepee. We will try for a real picnic to start the summer season—weather cooperating.

Please consider joining us at any or all of the meetings the remainder of the year. All meetings are held in the Teepee (faculty dining room) in Peabody Hall, Husson College, except January and May meetings. We look forward to seeing new faces at our meetings—you'll meet both old friends and new if you join us.

Husson College Alumni Association Reunion

Designed to credit non-alumni in areas stressed by the College, the awards were presented in the four Husson academic disciplines as well as athletics. According to Larry Richard, Alumni Association president, the Association felt a need to recognize some of their outstanding professional colleagues and he was "very pleased with the award's initial recipients."

Dorothy A. Neal, chairperson of the Sacopee Valley High School business department in South Hiram was presented an Honorary Alumna Award from the business teacher education department. A graduate of the University of Maine at Machias, Mrs. Neal has been a high school business teacher since 1966 and has published several professional articles in national journals. Mrs. Neal has been active in numerous professional organizations and was recently elected president of the Eastern Business Education Association.

The award in the accounting department went to Frank M. Carter of Bangor. A C.P.A. since 1956, Carter is currently a partner in the accounting firm of Brooks and Carter and has been a member of the 108th and 109th legislatures. He worked with James B. Longley on the Maine Management and Cost Survey in 1973 and later served as chairman of the Governor's Task Force on Tax Reform in 1976. Carter has been active with the American Institute of C.P.A.s and the National Association of Accountants and is currently the vice-chairman of the Husson Board of Trustees.

Catharine "Kay" Lebowitz, also of Bangor, became an Honorary alumna because of her accomplishments in the field of secretarial science. A native of Winchester, Massachusetts, and Belfast, Mrs. Lebowitz has worked as a secretary for Moore Business Forms in Boston, former Massachusetts Governor Alvin Fuller, and the firm of Coffin and Wimple. Prior to her retirement in 1979, Mrs. Lebowitz served as the deputy clerk of the northern division of the U.S. District Court.

Among her many civic affiliations, Mrs. Lebowitz is currently on the Board of Directors of the Bangor Community Theater and the Symphony women. She is also involved with the Penobscot County Legal Secretaries Association and the Penobscot Republican Women.

Kay Lebowitz

Following his 1961 graduation from the New York University School of Law and his 1962 admittance to the Maine Bar Association, he joined the Bangor firm to be known as Rudman, Winchell, Carter and Buckley. He remained with the firm until Gene Carter, Esq.

Governor Brennan appointed him to the bench this fall.

Carter has served on the Supreme Judicial Court's Advisory Committee on Maine Rules of Civil Procedures for 14 years and has been affiliated with local, state, and national bar associations.

Bangor Municipal Golf Course pro Austin Kelly received the athletics Honorary Alumnus Award for his 16 years at Bangor Muni.

Kelly, a Connecticut native, served as an assistant pro at the age of 14. He came to Maine 24 years ago to become pro at the Pinewood Golf Club in Lucern, where he remained for eight years before moving to Bangor Muni.

Kelly also serves as coach of the Husson golf team.

House speaker John L. Martin, in an address to the reunion audience, praised the five awardees for their "desire to achieve more than they have ever been asked to."

"While there are some rewards for going beyond the call of duty there are also many, many sacrifices that these individuals have made over the years," said Martin. "Their professions and, indeed, the state of Maine have been the beneficiaries of these sacrifices."

Martin praised the Husson Alumni Association for presenting the awards in honor of individuals who have earned the recognition of us all."

Held in conjunction with the annual Parent's Weekend, the alumni reunion represented a shift in the major alumni weekend from spring back to fall.

Alumni President's Message

On October 18, we gathered at the Ramada Inn in Bangor to hold our annual meeting and present our annual awards at Homecoming-Reunion '80.

It was the consensus that this was one of our finest programs ever. The improved and expanded awards program was extremely well received. The recipients were very complimentary about Husson College and its alumni and the contributions that both have made to this area.

Not unlike many similar undertakings, now that we've finished this year's it is time to begin work on next year's Homecoming. Present plans call for it sometime during the middle of October, 1981. Mark your calendar now! October 3, 4, 1981.

It will be a very special Homecoming (Class Reunions) for those who were graduated during the following years because it signifies an important anniversary:

1971-10th	1946-35th
1966-15th	1941-40th
1961-20th	1936-45th
1956-25th	1931-50th

Many of you haven't attended a Husson College Alumni Association Homecoming in years, some have never attended one. We invite you to become a part of the 1981 program, it will be an event you will enjoy and be proud to attend. It is a time to renew acquaintances with old friends and make new ones.

Particularly if your class is one of the "anniversary" classes (mine is), this would be the year to be sure to attend. There must be some people you would very much like to see again and we may be able to assist you in accomplishing that.

If you are like most of us, you've probably lost touch with these people and if you would write to us at the college, we would be glad to furnish, via class agents, their current addresses from our roster. Then you could contact them and make plans to get together at Homecoming '81. OR, you and your class agent prepare a notice or letter and the Alumni office would see to sending it out. Contact Edna Edes, Alumni Director, for details.

As your representatives, we need your assistance in our awards program. We need your nominations for the following awards to be given at the Homecoming '81:

A. Outstanding Alumnus
B. Honorary Alumnus—Accounting
C. Honorary Alumnus—Business Administration
D. Honorary Alumnus—Business Education
E. Honorary Alumnus—Secretarial Science
F. Honorary Alumnus—Athletics
G. Service Awards

In order to be truly representative of all alumni, the greater the input we have from you, the better. What is needed besides the obvious is biographical data and a summary of their accomplishments. If you truly feel that someone you know has done an outstanding job in one of these areas, here is a meaningful opportunity to show them how you feel through the vehicle of our awards program. It only takes a little of your time and we do the rest. The deadline for submission of entries is April 1, 1981.

As I mentioned before, I was graduated in the class of 1956 which is celebrating its 25th anniversary at Homecoming '81. I was fortunate enough to be elected class president in 1956 and in that capacity—I'd like to issue a challenge to the class presidents (or their duly designated surrogates) of the other "anniversary" classes.

I'll buy a steak dinner for any anniversary class president whose class has more graduates in attendance at Homecoming '81, than the class of 1956.

I feel confident in issuing this challenge because I'm certain that our class will have more attending than any class before us or since!!

So, if your class feels "up" to this challenge, simply pick up the gauntlet by contacting the Alumni office.

But you better do it NOW, because you are going to need lots of time to mount a campaign that will attract more graduates than our class.

STEAKS AT STAKE?

The other day our roving reporter caught up with Alumni Association President Larry Richard and recorded the following interview:

Q. Is it true, Mr. Richard, that you have issued a challenge to each of the other "Anniversary Year Class Presidents" (1976, 1971, 1966, 1961, 1951, 1946, 1941, 1936, 1931, etc.) that is if more members of their class attend the 1981 Homecoming than members of your 1956 class you would buy those presidents a steak dinner?

A. That's correct, but I don't think the mid-western steakyards will have to begin any immediate expansion programs.

Q. We understand that the price of beef may skyrocket by October, 1981. Aren't you worried about having to take out a second mortgage on your home in order to pay for all these dinners?

A. Not really, you see if any of these other class presidents do accept this challenge, our class will clobber them.

Q. But how can you be sure, your graduating class of 100 was small compared to the size of classes in recent years?

A. Biggest doesn't always mean best. The Class of 1956 was always a closeknit group. We attended the "old" campus and there was a great "family" atmosphere there, so our members will be coming from far and wide to celebrate our 25th anniversary. The other classes don't have that kind of motivation.

Q. What about the class of 1976, it's their 5th anniversary and they were graduated most recently?

A. They won't be able to find babysitters, besides,—they spend all their disposable income on quadraphonic stereos, electronic games, health food and pampers!

Q. Then what about the class of 1971, there were 217 in that class.

A. They're all too busy climbing the corporate ladder, attending PTA meetings and studying Yoga or what-have-you to attend. With all those years of rock and roll music, they're saving their money for hearing aids.

Q. The class of 1966 seems to have been an active group, won't they outnumber your people?

A. Sure, they were active, but have you seen any of them lately? Most of them have started working on their second million dollars, they gave up trying to make their first. Besides, they've got an old movie they have to watch on their video cassette recorders that night—they're just too busy to take time out to see old friends and recall all the good times they had with them.

Q. Aren't you worried about the class of 1961 though, that class had a lot on the ball and I've heard they plan to show up for their 20th class reunion en masse?

A. That group's a "piece of cake," you see they've got a boy on the football team or a daughter who is a cheerleader so they couldn't possibly get away. On top of that, the kids wouldn't let them use the car that night anyway.

Q. But what about all those other classes after yours—1951-1946 etc?

A. I can see you haven't been to many of our Homecomings. Except for Clara Swan, who's never missed a homecoming that I know of, the rest of those people can't leave the rest homes on Saturday night. I understand that most of them are trying for the Guinness World Book record for attending the most consecutive number of Bingo games in a row without a miss. Besides, we couldn't get Lawrence Welk's band for the dance, so they won't show.

NO, The Class of 1956 will be the winner. You see we're all at the right age now to enjoy a good Homecoming and our 25th Class Reunion. Our kids are mostly grown up now, we've gotten one or more through college, some of us have even survived becoming grandparents, we've worked hard these last 25 years and we deserve a good time.

And getting a chance to see that old crowd. But most of all, it's the friends we made with the students, teachers and other members of the "Husson Family" that will bring us all back together again. Some of us haven't seen each other since graduation day. We'll be digging out those old yearbooks, etc. and reminiscing soon about those good old days.

YOU SEE, we've got a lot more to remember than these other classes, that is why we'll have the largest representation there at the 1981 Homecoming.

Q. Well, you've convinced me, I guess I shouldn't have bothered you about this. You do think the class of '56 will show up in large numbers, don't you?

A. Oh, sure they will, at least I think they will, at least I hope they do. My God, what have I gotten myself into!! Perhaps I could change my name or grow a beard. I suppose I could pretend to be sick that night. Or I suppose we could move again, but I just got my first order of personalized stationery the other day, so that's out.

ED. NOTE: The last time we heard from Larry he was trying to get some unfriendly nation to hold him hostage until after Homecoming, 1981!!!!!

Presentation of Chesley H. Husson Memorial Endowment

Presented by Paul Husson, son of the first college president, to Delmont N. Merrill, President. The proceeds from the endowment which will be used to benefit the Husson College Library.

Sports

Husson College accepted full membership in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) and competed in the Association's Division III beginning last September.

Husson will remain a member of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) for post-season play.

In making the announcement, athletic director D. Bruce MacGregor said that admission to the NCAA was a step forward for not just the athletic program but also for Husson in general.

"This acceptance into the NCAA adds another degree of respectability to the College and to the athletic program. We are always looking for the strongest possible schedules and should be able to pick up some of the better Division III teams in the area."

Admissions Referrals . . .

by Paul E. Husson
Director of Admissions

Wouldn't it be nice to be able to make a $20,000 contribution to your alma mater? Is a donation of that size unrealistic for most Husson College alumni? Not really. Four-year resident students at Husson contribute that much to the College during their collegiate years. Therefore, for every student that is referred to Husson by alumni, there is a potential of $20,000 being contributed.

The College encourages all alumni to take a moment to fill out the referral card below with the name and address of any young person who you are acquainted with, possibly through work, church, civic or other organizations. You supply the name and we'll do the rest. Husson can be a realistic choice for most students regardless of their financial circumstances.

Last year, a number of students were referred to the College by its alumni. I can't over emphasize the importance of these referrals to our recruiting efforts as many are current students at Husson.

There are many ways that Husson alumni can help ensure continued success at the College and participating in a referral system is one of the easiest but most effective ways.

When you are in Bangor, please drop into the Admissions Office for a visit. There are a number of exciting programs and developments that I would like to discuss with you.
