Husson opens Ronan Center for Financial Technology

On August 29, Husson University held a ribbon-cutting ceremony to open the Ronan Center for Financial Technology at its Bangor campus.

"The facility has a unique design," said Husson University College of Business Dean Marie Hansen. "While traditional classrooms have a 'front' and 'back,' this space allows instructors to stand with any of the walls behind them or deliver presentations from the center of the room. Creating a facility with a capacity for 360-degree learning is another example of how Husson University delivers innovative, groundbreaking, professional education."

The new center is possible thanks to the generosity of Bob '79 and Linda Ronan. Bob is a retired senior vice president of technology with Fidelity Investments, while Linda is currently a vice president in Fidelity's technology area.

"Our hope for this Center is that it creates another opportunity at Husson University for students to utilize experiential learning to enhance their classroom experience," said Bob Ronan. "I fully expect that one day we'll have successful graduates who, when they think about their Husson experience, will remember the time they spent in this center."

"As a champion of education and a member of our Board of Trustees, Bob is helping our students prepare for professional success in today's competitive global economy," said Robert A. Clark, Ph.D., CFA, president of Husson University. "His support led to the creation of a new, innovative educational facility that, in the coming years, will educate the next generation of accomplished financial professionals and investors."

Husson supports equal opportunity in recruitment, admission, educational programs, and employment practices, and complies with all major federal and state laws and executive orders requiring equal employment opportunity and/or affirmative action.

Dear Alumni and Friends,

Welcome to the fall/winter edition of the Ledger. This edition is one of our best yet! It contains 48 pages of great stories and captivating photos, along with a list of the many donors whose generosity and support are helping Husson University transform students' lives.

During the past 14 months, there have been a number of donors whose philanthropy and vision have made them especially noteworthy. In Fall 2013, we celebrated the generosity of the Darling family and the creation of the Edward O. and Mary Ellen Darling Learning Center.

This past August, Bob and Linda Ronan enhanced the Darling Learning Center's facilities with the addition of the Ronan Center for Financial Technology. This advanced interactive learning environment provides students with the modern resources necessary to access current financial data in real time.

Most recently, Randy and Angela Wadleigh funded the Wadleigh Academic Center in the Newman Athletic complex – a new facility dedicated to the academic success of our student athletes.

Our campus continues to grow. Our Fall 2014 first-year enrollment increased by five percent. In order to meet the evolving needs of our students and the demands of employers for a knowledgeable, job-ready workforce, we must continue to upgrade, renovate and create new facilities. Your support helps us to provide our state, and the world, with well qualified professionals who possess the knowledge and experience required to be successful.

If you are a donor, I would like to thank you. The progress and achievements of our students would not be possible without you. If you are not a donor, I invite you to consider a gift in support of the exciting learning opportunities that are taking place on our campuses. Take a tour and talk with our students and faculty. It is clear that Husson University offers an exceptional value to students interested in pursuing rewarding careers in today's rapidly changing global economy.

Thanks,

Robert A. Clark, PhD, CFA
President

Science is often thought of as a way to understand the physical and structural processes that govern our world. We see it as a way to explain our natural history, our current environment, and predict the consequences of our actions. But in truth, science is much, much more. Today, science and technology are part of nearly every business enterprise.

The new discoveries that researchers generate make the greatest impact when those with expertise in business apply them in ways that affect the lives of everyday people – often through the delivery of new or improved, products or services. Healthcare, environmental science, and computer science are just a few of the many fields that have benefited from new thinking.

Teaching science and the applications of science to business requires facilities, technology and access to knowledgeable faculty members who can help bridge the gap of understanding from the incomprehensible to the profound.

As we look ahead, Husson University sees a future where the improvements in our collective quality of life and the growth of our economy will be based on the applications of science. Further, it is the highly skilled and knowledgeable employee, who understands these applications, that will be in demand by future employers.

Our University exists to "prepare students for professional careers in current and emerging fields within the context of an education informed by the sciences and humanities." By investing today in modern equipment and educational resources, we help ensure that our graduates will be fully prepared for jobs upon graduation and for jobs in emerging fields that will employ our students in the decades to come.

And for that, we thank you.

Best Regards,

Thomas A. Martz

Accomplishments, events and items of note happening at Husson

Husson Signs Agreements with SMCC and YCC to Facilitate Credit Transfers

Husson recently entered into agreements with Southern Maine Community College (SMCC) and York Community County College (YCCC) to facilitate the transfer of course credits to Husson's degree programs. For SMCC students, this includes programs in computer science, computer technology, and other fast-growing fields. YCCC credit transfers are for students pursuing degrees in accounting, business administration, software development, criminal justice, and hospitality and tourism management. These new agreements will enable students from both community colleges to more clearly plan their path to a professional degree from Husson University.

Husson Expands Study Abroad Opportunities

Through partnerships with two organizations, CIEE and API, Husson now offers year, semester, and short-term study in nearly 50 countries and more than 70 cities around the globe. From public health in Thailand to environmental studies in the Netherlands to media and web design in Brazil, students can pursue their passions and interests in a culture and landscape that enhance their degree programs at home.

Husson Honors Retirees with New Tree Planting Tradition

Husson initiated a new campus tradition on May 29 with its first tree-planting ceremony to honor recent retirees. The six individuals who were honored with a flowering crabapple tree had served Husson for a combined total of more than 100 years.

The honored retirees are:

- Elizabeth-Ellen Clark, Ph.D., director baccalaureate nursing program and associate professor of nursing, School of Nursing
- William Devine III, director of career services, New England School of Communications (NESCom)
- Benjamin Haskell, executive vice president and dean of students, NESCom
- John Rubino, vice president of student affairs
- Michael SanAntonio, director of dining services
- John Senter, Jr., maintenance worker

College of Business Richard E. Dyke Center for Family Business

Conversations at the Dyke Center: Dennis Lewin

Dennis Lewin spoke at the Dyke Center on Sept. 17. Lewin had a distinguished career with ABC Sports (1966-1996) and then the National Football League until 2006 and currently serves on the international board of directors of Little League Baseball & Softball. At ABC, he produced such shows as Monday Night Football and the World Series, helped produce eight Olympic Games, won 13 Emmys, and in 1986 became ABC Sports' senior vice president of production. At the NFL, he was senior vice president of broadcasting, responsible for working with the league's partners and overseeing its annual playing schedule. Lewin served as the chairman of the board of Little League Baseball from 2007-2012, the first graduate of the Little League Baseball program to do so. He remains on the board.

Conversations at the Dyke Center: James F. Dicke II

On Oct. 23, Husson students, faculty, and members of the public heard James F. Dicke II, CEO of Crown Equipment Corporation, share his thoughts about his more than 34 years of experience as president and CEO of this American success story. The format was similar to the town-hall style of events held at Columbia University with Bill Gates and Warren Buffett.

This unique interaction connects students with successful professionals as part of their education. Students must complete background preparations before an event and prepare pre- and post-visit papers. In addition, some got to "pick the brains" of the guest business leaders over lunch.

Big Gig Announcement: More Big Gigs Coming Up!

The Big Gig committee has set the dates for its business plan pitch contests for the coming year. This is a collaboration between Husson, UMaine, and the towns of Orono and Old Town. Husson's own Dr. Karl Bishop will be a Big Wig, and Husson alumnus Joe Cyr plans to be in attendance. The Husson community can participate in the audience or by pitching a business idea. Visit www.biggig.org to learn more.

School of Education

In March, the School of Education participated in a three-day program review conducted by the Maine Department of Education. In addition to meeting all of the standards, the school received many commendations for their standards alignment, plans assessment, practicum supervision quality, diversity focus, student support, and their meaningful and ongoing collaboration with other schools and colleges at Husson University.

School of Nursing

In July, Husson's School of Nursing received two substantial grants as part of the advanced nursing education program available through the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Health Resources and Services Administration. Husson was the only Maine university to receive both of these prestigious grants.

A $684,000 grant will help support the education of more than 40 full-time graduate students in Husson University's family and community nurse practitioner program over the next two years, through a combination of tuition support and stipends.

A $753,000 grant, will expand the scope of a course that helps increase understanding and communication between aspiring healthcare professionals in different disciplines. The grant also funds training programs which included a statewide consortium on interprofessional education that was held at Husson University in October.

The School of Nursing also received a $75,000 grant from the William Randolph Hearst Foundation. Thirty-six low-income, first-generation undergraduate students in Husson's School of Nursing will be eligible for scholarships of $1,000 to $2,000 each year for up to three years.

School of Pharmacy

Conrad Dhing, Ph.D., assistant dean, School of Pharmacy, is one of the 30 pharmacy educators selected for the next cohort of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy's academic leadership fellows program. Now in its 11th year, the program seeks to develop the nation's most promising pharmacy faculty for roles as future leaders in pharmacy education and beyond.

Lanorris Carey, Scott Milton, Dr. Brian Piper, Samual Valley, and Whitney Jandreau represented the School of Pharmacy at the University of Utah's Annual School on Alcoholism and Other Drug Dependencies, which was held from June 15-20 in Salt Lake City.

Whitney Jandreau, a Doctor of Pharmacy student, was selected to serve as a member of the National Education Standing Committee for the American Pharmacists Association – Academy of Student Pharmacists for the coming 2014-2015 academic year. The APhA–ASP is the largest and most prominent pharmacist and student-pharmacist organization in the country.

Kaysie Pelletier, a second-year pharmacy student, was accepted as a participant in the highly selective Rite Aid Corporation summer internship program in Camp Hill, Penn., over the summer. Pelletier attended the eight-week internship, working with Rite Aid executives and touring east coast stores, learning how the corporate and retail side of pharmacy works. (You can read more about Pelletier in a story on page 33.)

HUSOP Academy of Student Pharmacists Wins Region I Award

Scott Milton, '16, chapter president of the Husson APhA-ASP Chapter, accepted the 2013-2014 Region 1 Operation Immunization Award at the Region I APhA-Academy of Student Pharmacists midyear meeting in October in Albany, N.Y., with 12 of his fellow HUSOP chapter members in attendance. The chapter focused on improving community health by educating 500-plus patients about the importance of vaccinations, and worked with students from the New England School of Communications to develop a public service announcement that aired on local radio and news to advertise their flu shot clinics, reaching over 100,000 people. HUSOP now competes for the national award, to be announced in March.

School of Science and Humanities

In April, Husson announced the launch of a new Bachelor of Science in health sciences degree. With its emphasis on chemistry, biology, and physiology, the program is suited for a student interested in becoming a doctor of medicine, medical specialist, veterinarian, dentist, speech pathologist, chiropractor, radiologist, or physician's assistant.

Patricia Bixel, Ph.D., associate academic dean and professor of history at Maine Maritime Academy, has been named dean of the School of Science and Humanities at Husson University. Bixel, who succeeded Dr. Francis Hubbard on July 28, graduated cum laude from Rice University with a Bachelor of Arts in history, obtained her Master of Arts in history from Duke, and completed her Ph.D. at Rice.

Dr. Karl Bishop, associate professor of chemistry at Husson, and his colleagues at the company he co-founded, Cerahelix, presented a poster at the 13th International Conference on Ceramic Membranes in Brisbane, Australia on July 7. This conference is the premier venue for reporting and discussing the latest developments in the field of inorganic membranes. The poster ("DNA Templated Ceramic Nanofiltration Membrane," by authors T. Kirkmann, K. Bishop, S. MacKay, and D. Cassidy) presented the latest results in the testing and evaluation of a revolutionary patented membrane technology that uses DNA to template pores in a ceramic material.

Husson Students Experience Summer Success at HETL Lab

Charles Tapley and Ryan Bourret worked as laboratory technicians at the Maine Health and Environmental Testing Laboratory in Augusta this past summer. Other schools, such as Colby and Harvard, sent students, but Husson's were the only ones invited back for future employment. As a result of their exceptional performance, Husson is being given the first shot at filling upcoming positions.

These types of experiential learning opportunities are invaluable to science students. Charles got hands-on experience with a wide variety of instrumentation this, along with his work in a professional lab environment, solidified his desire to work in this field.

Australian Scholar Speaks on Democracy and the Great Recession

The School of Science and Humanities and the Maine Chapter of the Fulbright Association sponsored "Rebuilding Democracy: Political Consequences of the Great Recession in Australia and the U.S.," a lecture by Fulbright Scholar Richard Eccleston on Oct. 24. in Kominsky Auditorium. Eccleston, the founding director of the University of Tasmania's Institute for the Study of Social Change, talked about the implications for state finances in the United States and Australia following the 2008 recession, and explored what it might mean for the two nations going forward.

Students Preparing for Second Trip to Dominican Republic

When Husson student Mariah Arno was accepted to go on a trip to the Dominican Republic last year, she was nervous. She was the first Husson occupational therapy student to ever participate in an opportunity like this, and it was way outside her comfort zone.

"I thought, 'What did I get myself into?'" Arno recalled. "How was I going to make a difference?"

The trip was through a University of Southern Maine program, Partners for Rural Health in the Dominican Republic (PRHDR). During the 2013-2014 winter break, four nursing students, one physical therapy (PT) student, one occupational therapy (OT) student, and one nursing faculty member from Husson joined other USM students, nurse practitioners, doctors, volunteers, and Peace Corps translators in an effort to provide much needed medical care in this Caribbean nation.

The team spent two weeks in the rural mountains of the northwestern Dominican Republic, holding medical clinics for more than 2,000 patients in 15 rural mountain villages. The students were responsible for their own travel costs. They also raised funds to provide six months' worth of medications.

For Arno, whatever trepidation she'd felt about the trip quickly vanished.

"The most important thing I took away from my experience was the confidence that, though I might not be able to make a difference noticed by the entire world, I can make a difference in individual patient's lives," she said. "The pure joy and appreciation the Dominican people had for the PRHDR group was astounding. Pushing myself outside of my comfort zone to help others benefited me more than I could ever imagine."

Husson's participation in the program, which has visited the Dominican Republic every six months for nearly 20 years, will continue. In January 2015, six senior nursing students, one OT student, one PT student, and two faculty members will return.

Arno, in her fifth year of Husson's OT program, will soon be going out on her Level II clinicals, and she'll apply what she's learned in the classroom to real-life situations. The Dominican trip has capped an educational college experience that has included four years of field hockey and broad involvement in the Husson community.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed my educational and social experiences at Husson University and I'm excited to carry these skills over into my future career," she said.

Wherever she lands professionally, Arno's Dominican trip will be with her forever.

"Sometimes I felt like the Dominican people gave more to me than I could ever give to them," she said.

South Korean Students are Enriched by Husson Program

Eighteen students from Kookmin University in Seoul, South Korea learned English and got a first-hand look at America as part of the Summer English Enrichment (SEE) program at Husson University. The enrichment program ran from July 5 until August 2, and many of the students concluded their experience with several weeks traveling through the United States.

Each morning, students spent three hours studying the English language. In the afternoons, they participated in activities that helped them learn more about American culture. Over the course of the program, they had the opportunity to visit Acadia National Park, go shopping in Freeport, travel to Portland, and take part in a ropes activity course.

The SEE program is part of an ongoing exchange program partnership with Kookmin University, a private university located in Seongbuk-gu, Seoul, South Korea.

As part of the exchange program, Husson University has hosted two Kookmin students and will be hosting another two in the fall. Taylor Evans, a Husson University senior, is currently studying at Kookmin as part of the Fall 2014 semester with the assistance of two scholarships.

Evans has been blogging about her experiences in South Korea. Her blog addresses cultural differences from the U.S. as well as what's going on in Korean pop culture. She frequently mentions her friend EunJi, who spent time at Husson, and posts photos and videos of her experiences. Evans has blogged about a wide range of things: religion, tourism, foreign influences in Korea, local food, sights to see, customs, and more. She gives readers a deep insight into her experiences there.

"By participating in exchange programs like the one we have with Kookmin, Husson University is giving our students the broad cultural perspectives they'll need for the jobs of tomorrow," said Colleen Grover, director of international initiatives at Husson University.

Evans has gone from a nervous traveler to a dedicated Korean visitor in just over two months of her four-month stay.

"To be honest, I am scared," she wrote in her first blog post. "But even through the nervousness, I know I wouldn't give this up. This has been a moment I have dreamed of for years."

It doesn't take long to see how incredible her journey has been. You can read about Taylor Evans' experiences in South Korea on her blog at lightaheadi.wordpress.com.

Husson Group Enjoys 12-day Travel/Study Trip to China

On May 13, 20 students from Husson departed for a 12-day travel/study course to China, accompanied by Dr. Tom Fitzpatrick of the College of Business. After an 18-hour flight, the students weren't disappointed.

"The trip to China was amazing," said Benjamin Robinson, an accounting major who graduated in 2014. "It was truly the trip of a lifetime. We packed more unforgettable moments into 10 days than I ever thought possible."

They visited Beijing, Huainan, Shanghai, Hong Kong, and Macau, traveling by bullet train, rickshaw, hydrofoil, and ferry across much of northeastern and southeastern China. They saw cultural icons like the Forbidden City, Tiananmen Square, the Summer Palace, Beijing Olympic Park, the Jade Buddha Temple, and toured many other places.

"From walking up a mountain on the Great Wall to watching horse races in downtown Hong Kong, this trip is a must for anyone interested in traveling and learning about cultures outside of ours," Robinson said.

The group was treated like a foreign trade delegation at the Huainan China Reconstruction Bank, where the bank chairman hosted an authentic Chinese lunch that took two days to prepare. The students toured the bank, listened to a presentation on microlending, and exchanged gifts with the staff.

The students also visited and met students at the Shanghai Foreign Language Institute and the University Macau. At the University of Macau, Fitzpatrick and Professor Stephanie Shayne met with the associate dean of the College of Business to discuss a foreign exchange program between the two schools.

The students also took in a Chinese acrobat show in Shanghai and a kung fu show in Beijing. In Hong Kong, they saw pandas at Ocean Park, toured one of the largest aquariums in the world, and rode a roller coaster off a mountain's edge. On the final morning before heading home, many students swam in the South China Sea.

Robinson said the trip was even better thanks to the group's experienced tour guide.

"Dr. Thomas Fitzpatrick is a great tour guide with plenty of connections and a wealth of knowledge on foreign economies and customs," he said. "This was truly the most memorable class of my life."

Fitzpatrick has led three groups of students to China, and he'll lead another one from May 18-29, 2015. The trip is open to undergraduates, graduates, alumni, faculty, and staff. For more information, email fitzpatrickt@husson.edu.

"Our program does an outstanding job of preparing students for rewarding and high-paying careers."

Husson School of Pharmacy Receives Full Accreditation

In July, Husson's five-year-old School of Pharmacy was granted full accreditation status by the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE). ACPE accreditation is the hightest level available for pharmacy schools and certifies that a school has met a series of rigorous standards. It is not available until the program has graduated at least one class of students. The School of Pharmacy is also accredited, along with every program at Husson University, by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

To date, this rigorous program has graduated 95 students. One hundred percent of the students who completed their Doctor of Pharmacy degrees at Husson University passed the national board exams required of all practicing pharmacists.

"This class demonstrated that our program does an outstanding job of preparing students for rewarding and high-paying careers as professional pharmacists," said School of Pharmacy Founding Dean Rodney A. Larson, Ph.D., R.Ph.

Pharmacy is a rapidly growing career field. The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that the employment of pharmacists will increase 14 percent between 2012 and 2022. In addition, pharmacists earn, on average, $116,670 per year.

With the new ACPE accreditation in hand, Husson's pharmacy students and graduates are poised for great things. In fact, more than 75 percent of Husson's first graduating class received job offers before graduating, and 100 percent were employed within six months of finishing the program.

The new program also stands to benefit rural communities in Maine, where many of Husson's graduating pharmacists intend to practice.

"In small towns across our state, rural pharmacists are administering vaccinations and monitoring the blood pressure of thousands of individuals who might not otherwise seek out medical attention because they live in remote locations," said Larson. "In helping to bring knowledgeable pharmacists to those in need, we're not only improving healthcare, we're providing the business community with workplace-ready employees who can contribute to making retail pharmacies, rural hospitals, and grocery stores more successful. Everyone benefits — the graduates who get great jobs, the businesses that hire them, and the rural communities they serve."

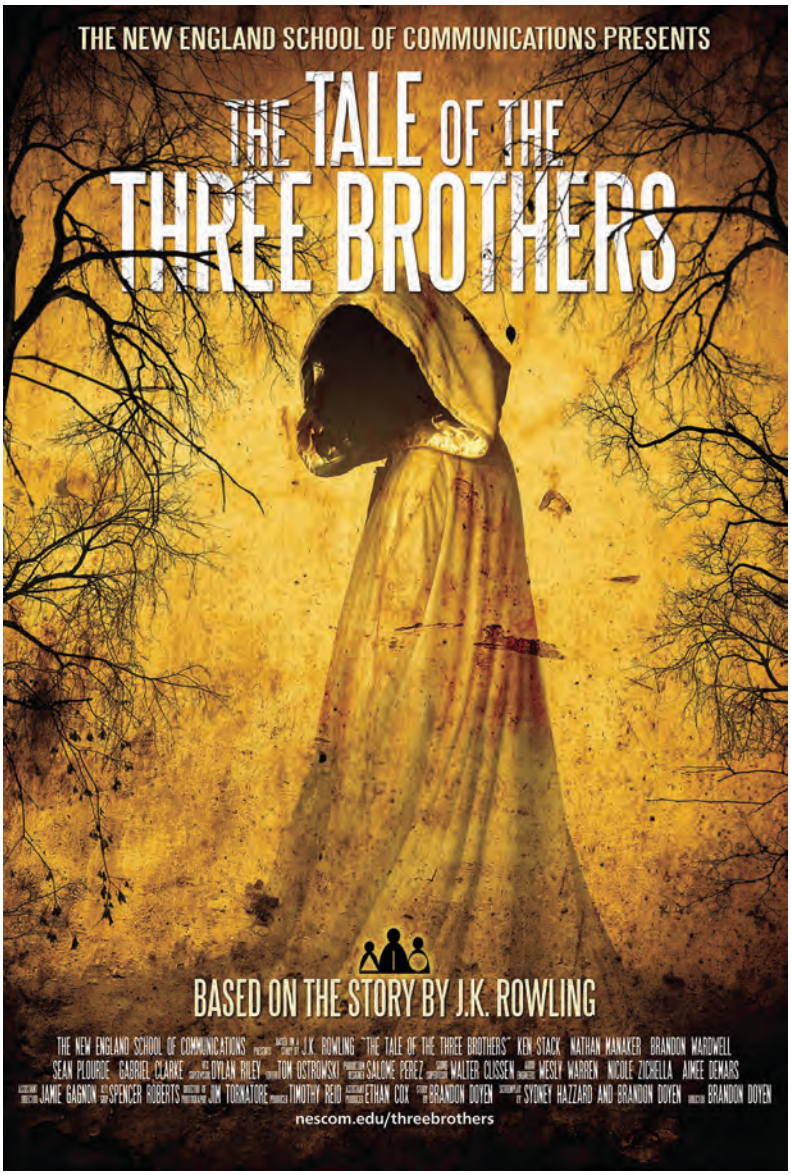

Husson Pharmacy students participate in a community health project at Penobscot Nation. Here Husson pharmacy student Sarah Deng provides instruction on diabetes testing equipment.

EXPERIENTIAL LEARNING

Husson Film Expands Harry Potter Universe

In May, the Gracie Theatre on Husson University's Bangor campus hosted a preview screening of the new 22-minute, student-produced movie The Tale of the Three Brothers. A special 12- to 15-minute behind-the-scenes feature followed the film. The film was adapted from a story by J.K. Rowling, with permission from Warner Brothers. The original story featured in the seventh and final Harry Potter novel, The Deathly Hallows, and later released in a series of short stories entitled The Tales of Beedle the Bard.

"We are so proud of our students," said Thomas Johnston, dean of Husson University's New England School of Communications (NESCom). "Writing, producing, directing, editing, animation and special effects — they were responsible for everything necessary to take this film from initial concept to finished product."

"This film project allowed so many of our students to work as a team, gaining real world experience and creating a wonderful finished product," said Frank Welch, the NESCom instructor who led the student project. "It allowed them to use all of the skills they have learned in their years here at Husson, and is something they can take with them out into the work force to show their abilities."

"The results are magnificent," Johnston said. "The outstanding creativity and production values inherent in this student project are a testament to the quality of media education available to aspiring film and television professionals through the New England School of Communications at Husson University."

This is not the first time NESCom has shared an outstanding student production with the public. In 2011-2012, the students of NESCom completed an adaptation of Stephen King's short story "The Last Rung on the Ladder," which went on to win "Best Film in Maine" at the Lewiston-Auburn Film Festival.

The short-film adaptation of The Tale of the Three Brothers was filmed in various Maine locations during the Fall 2013 semester, with post-production and editing completed in the spring of 2014.

To see The Tale of the Three Brothers trailer, visit NESCom.husson.edu/threebrothers. As of press time, the YouTube version of the trailer has received nearly 118,000 views.

ACADEMICS AND THE ARTS

Gracie Theatre: What's Happening this Season

The Gracie Theatre, now entering its third season, is quickly becoming a premier destination for arts and entertainment in the Greater Bangor Region, with a reputation extending well beyond the Husson community.

With growing audiences and star-studded entertainment, the Gracie is known for presenting top-notch performances in an intimate venue.

"This season has a broad appeal with a local star, a children's favorite, a legendary icon, and a soulful songwriter," said Jeri Misler, managing director of the theater. "At the Gracie, fans can see these stars up close and personal, and every seat is a great seat."

The Fall 2014 lineup of shows, sponsored in part by founding sponsor Bangor Savings Bank, has been packed with an exciting blend of music, comedy, and theater.

In October, the popular New York City touring production of the children's musical Pinkalicious, based on the popular children's book series by Elizabeth and Victoria Kann, brought plenty of songs, laughter, and pink cupcakes to Bangor. Children were delighted to watch Pinkalicous sing and dance her way to a cure for "pinkititis," a condition caused by eating too many pink cupcakes.

The Gracie helped kick off homecoming weekend on Oct. 17 with a musical theater tribute by three Broadway stars performing in Oh What a Night!, a revue that features the music of Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons.

Popular musician and singer Howie Day, a Brewer native, performed at The Gracie on Oct. 24. Known for his energetic, heartfelt shows, Day connects with audiences through the strength of his songwriting and his quirky sense of humor. His concert showcased favorites such as his top-10 hit "Collide," as well as new material from his upcoming studio release.

During the entire season, NESCom students will be busy working behind the scenes in a variety of technical capacities. Students manage the lighting and sound while also providing stage management and stage crew services. The valuable experience they gain by working on the professional touring productions will prepare them for jobs in the entertainment industry. The recent move of Maine's late-night talk show, The Nite Show with Danny Cashman, from its former location in Brewer to the Gracie Theatre also provides an exciting opportunity for the video majors to work on an ongoing television production.

Hosting a variety of student activity events, community-focused programs, and scholarly lectures, the Gracie is a vibrant meeting place to celebrate academics and the arts.

May 2014 Commencement

Husson held its 115th Commencement Ceremonies on May 11, 2014 for the Bangor campus at the Cross Insurance Center and on May 17, 2014 for the Southern Maine campus. At these two ceremonies, the university awarded degrees to more than 800 undergraduate and graduate students, the largest number of degrees awarded by the educational institution since its founding in 1898.

HUSSON GRADUATION

Honorary Degrees

Mary Prybylo, RN, MSN

In addition to delivering the keynote address, Mary Prybylo, RN, MSN, president and chief executive officer of St. Joseph Healthcare/St. Joseph Hospital received an honorary Doctor of Public Service degree in recognition of her lifelong commitment to serving the community and her support of access to quality health care and patient dignity.

Royce M. Cross

Royce M. Cross is the president and CEO of the Cross Insurance agency, one of the largest independent insurance providers in New England. Cross received an honorary Doctor of Business Administration degree in recognition of his dedication to integrity, hard work, loyalty, and community leadership.

Southern Maine Commencement

On May 17, 2014 the Southern Maine Commencement Ceremonies were held at Woodfords Congregational Church in Portland. Westbrook Mayor Colleen Hilton delivered the keynote address and received Husson's 2014 Chesley Husson Award.

HUSSON GRADUATION

NESCom Commencement

The New England School of Communications (NESCom) held its 32nd Commencement Ceremony at the Newman Gymnasium on May 10, 2014. Carol Kanar, chair of Husson University's Board of Trustees, delivered the keynote address. The Outstanding Alumni Award was presented to Samantha Hammond, '00. Hammond is currently employed at WLBZ 2 in Bangor.

Husson Honors Alumni Hall of Fame Winners

Husson University recently honored a number of alumni and friends of Husson with inductions into the school's Hall of Fame. Learn more about the winners.

Alumni Hall of Fame

Robert "Bob" Merowitz '72 was born in Needham, Mass. in 1950 and was a first-generation college student. He graduated from Husson in 1972 with a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration. He served as vice president of his class and a member president of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He got involved in real estate development immediately after graduating from Husson and launched his own condo-conversion development firm, Universal Realty Corporation, in 1981. He's since had ownership stakes in dozens of condo units, nightclubs, hotels, and other businesses. Recently, his company converted Boston's Wonderland Ballroom into a 12-story hotel. Merowitz and his wife, Myrna, are active philanthropists, serving various charities in the New England region. He serves on the board of Tufts Medical Center and its Floating Hospital for Children, the board of the American Liver Association, and the board of directors for the Landmark School in Beverly, Massachusetts.

William Goodwin '63 graduated with his Bachelor of Science degree in business administration. He was a member of the Mu Sigma Chi Fraternity. Goodwin went on to receive a master's degree in management from Webster College in St. Louis, Mo. He joined the Air Force in Bangor and served for 30 years. During this time, he served in both domestic and overseas assignments, including in Vietnam, Japan, and Korea. He worked in air traffic control, eventually rising to the rank of colonel, and serving as commander of the Communications Group at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio. Since retiring, he has volunteered at the local Military Officers Association of America chapter, the local Optimist Club, and his church.

Honorary Alumni Hall of Fame

Bette Philbrick Grant was a lifetime Bangor resident, active community member, and philanthropist. Bette married her high school sweetheart Judson "Bud" Grant following their high-school graduation in 1949. The couple worked together to develop several businesses beginning with Fairmount Terrace Motel. Later ventures included The Cottage Restaurant, Broadway Furniture, and Kev-Lan. Bette worked in all facets of the business, including maid service, front desk clerk, decorator, and baker. Bette and Bud built a beautiful life together that included a very strong and personally important link to Husson: The institution's 208-acre campus was originally the Hillman Family Dairy Farm where Bud's mom grew up and the Grant family created cherished memories. Bette was very active in the Bangor community, serving as a lifetime member of the Pine Tree Women's Association, also known as The Patawa Club, and received the Abe and Freda Miller Award for her generosity to Camp CaPella. As a member of the Women's Philanthropy Council at Husson University, she strongly supported the mission to inspire and develop women leaders in philanthropy for current and future generations. Bette passed away in September 2014.

Young Alumni Hall of Fame

Tami (Wagstaff) Hilton '98 graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration with a concentration in finance from Husson College and started her career with Bangor Savings Bank in the Loan Servicing/Processing and Internal Audit areas until 2001. She then continued her mortgage/banking career with Merrill Merchants Bank as mortgage operations manager. Her career continued with a transition in 2007 to U.S. Bank Home Mortgage based in Minneapolis, Minn. She started in the Client Services/Pricing area for Correspondent and Wholesale Lending and was recently promoted to vice president. In the first quarter of 2014, she received the Circle of Service Excellence Award from a pool of 65,000 employees from U.S. Bank for the strong role she played in the creation and implementation of a new channel of business with a goal set for $1 billion in production the first year. Outside of her professional duties, she enjoys running, fund raising, and volunteering for Susan G. Komen; maintains family support for her husband's National Guard unit; serves as treasurer for the school PTA; and most of all enjoys spending time with her husband, Mark, and eight-year-old daughter, Grace.

Alumni Hall of Fame Service Award

Jackie Emerson '64 was extremely active in the Husson community while completing her B.S. in business education degree. During her time on campus, she participated in the Epsilon Tau Epsilon sorority, the women's basketball team, The Spectator, and the Yearbook Club. A retired educator, she remains highly engaged with the Husson community. She recently created a gift annuity to benefit a student scholarship, and she sponsored an interactive video screen for the D. Bruce MacGregor Sports Hall of Fame Room to showcase Husson athletes' accomplishments. A resident of Corinna, Maine, she frequently travels to Husson to attend athletic events, and helped gather fellow alumni together for a successful 50th reunion at the school. Emerson is involved with many nonprofit organizations in her region, and she was awarded the Joyce Packard Community Spirit Award this year for her generosity and involvement with numerous volunteer programs.

Women's Philanthropy Executive Council Honor New Members at High Tea

As Husson University President Robert Clark welcomed members of the Women's Philanthropy Council to a high tea service at the Darling Atrium of the Beardsley Meeting House on May 19, he shared an old Tibetan saying: "A mind without thoughts is like tea without leaves."

Thanks in large part to the volunteer work done by members of the council, Husson's team of educators have been able to help their students develop "a potent brew that leads to career success," said Clark.

During the opening remarks of the tea service, which was attended by approximately 40 guests, President Clark honored members of the Women's Philanthropy Council for their contributions to the school over the past year.

Chief among these achievements was the formation of a new scholarship fund with an initial $25,000 endowment. This scholarship will provide needed financial aid each year to a student who might not otherwise be able to afford to attend Husson University.

Additionally, the Women's Philanthropy Council has launched a new annual speaker series. In April, Husson hosted a lecture by alumna Saundra Pelletier, the CEO of WomanCare Global, an organization that provides affordable contraceptives to women in developing countries. In her presentation "From Girls to Great," Pelletier spoke with the Husson community about how empowering women is a key to global health and sustainability.

Following President Clark's introductory remarks, honorary alumna Susan Carlisle took the podium. Carlisle, a Husson Trustee, and her husband David have established an endowed scholarship at Husson that is awarded to a student from northern Penobscot County, Maine. Her speech spotlighted the importance of investing in education, and in providing mentorship for young women.

"What we are celebrating, in addition to recognizing our own strong personal investment in education, is our commitment to mentor, befriend, and share with women of all ages and all walks of life, whatever kernels of knowledge or seeds of inspiration we possess, so that they may cultivate and nurture their own journeys," she said.

Carlisle then shared a heartwarming anecdote: While attending an organizational council meeting two years ago, she was discussing her reasons for setting up a scholarship fund when she noticed that the young woman seated beside her was crying. After she'd finished talking, the young woman, Amanda Cummings, leaned over to tell her that she had been the beneficiary of the Carlisles' scholarship.

"This incident gave a face and a new meaning to philanthropy for me," said Carlisle. "Since then, Amanda and I have become good friends, and I cherish her friendship and take pride in how well she has used our gift."

Cummings, who is pursuing an MBA at Husson and who now works as the university's alumni director, was the next person to address those attending the high tea. As an active member of the Women's Philanthropy Council, "being part of this group of talented, intelligent, generous, and powerful women has helped shape my future," said Cummings. "I've learned how to be a selfless leader and what it truly means to give back to an institution that I hold near and dear to my heart."

Carlisle and Cummings' speeches spotlighted the human side of philanthropy by showcasing the impact that the Carlisles' scholarship gift made on Cummings' life. More than simply an opportunity to network, the high tea helped the members of the Women's Philanthropy Council see the true rewards of their important work.

50th Reunion Reception Brings Together Alumni from Across the Nation to One College Circle

Over 40 Husson alumni from the class of 1964 gathered for a reception at the newly renovated D. Bruce MacGregor Sports Hall of Fame Room in the Newman Gymnasium in June. For many of those in attendance, this was the first time they had reconnected since graduation over 50 years ago. Over the course of the evening, alumni took an enjoyable trip down Memory Lane over Bordeaux and Champagne.

Paul Husson shared a poignant reflection on life in 1964, which filled the room with palpable nostalgia and spirited laughter. Jackie Emerson and Jim Carlisle rose to the occasion and challenged the class of 1964 to raise $64,000 by the close of 2014 to create and endow a scholarship for a Husson business student. Within one hour, nearly half of the challenge amount was raised.

We invite all alumni of the class of ‘64 to participate in this opportunity to enrich the Husson experience for a deserving student. Please send your gift intention to the Class of 1964 Scholarship Challenge and proudly display your Husson pride. We thank you for your support.

And for the members of the class of 1965, it’s not too early to begin thinking about next year’s reunion. Mark your calendars and plan to join us on campus June 26-27, 2015. It’s a great opportunity to see old friends and rekindle your connection with Husson University.

Husson Announces the 2014 Sports Hall of Fame

Husson University is pleased to announce the 2014 Sports Hall of Fame class. This year's class includes field hockey and softball player Dawn Doucette-Kaplan; volleyball's Anne Polk; Tom Coughlan from men's basketball and soccer; baseball's James Zukowski; football's David Chase; and the 1989 men's basketball team. The group was inducted on Friday, Nov. 21 at the Sports Hall of Fame Dinner at the Hilton Garden Inn in Bangor.

"We are excited to announce this year's Sports Hall of Fame class," said Husson University Director of Athletics Frank Pergolizzi. "This group constitutes individuals and a team that hold special places in Husson's athletic history. We enjoyed the evening with them."

"I am pleased to announce that the Husson University Sports Hall of Fame Committee has selected five outstanding student athletes and an equally outstanding team for this year's induction into its Hall of Fame," said Husson Sports Hall of Fame Chairman Bruce MacGregor. "David, Anne, Dawn, James, and Tom not only excelled in their respective sports, but they also served as role models for future student-athletes. The 1989 Men's Basketball Team — with a 35-3 record — set high standards for future teams, and it is fitting that this team returns to campus for induction on its 25th reunion year."

1989 Men's Basketball Team

Hall of Fame head coach Bruce MacGregor's 1989 Husson men's basketball team notched a program-record 35-3 season, reaching as high as fourth in the national rankings.

The team reeled off 16 straight wins to open the season, and went on to win the Western Maine Athletic Conference title, the NAIA District V title, and advance to the NAIA National Tournament. The team averaged over 101 points per game while outscoring their opponents by an average of 35 points.

The team featured four Husson Sports Hall of Fame members: Mark Taylor, the leading scorer on the team with 22.2 points per game; Buster Frederick, who nearly averaged a double-double with 14.7 points and 9.8 rebounds per contest; Shawn Bolden, who pitched in with 10.4 points and 8.7 rebounds; and Bobby Campbell, who had eight points per game.

The team still holds school records for total points scored in a season (3,860), most field goals made (1,531), most attempts (3,084), highest three-point percentage (43.9 percent), most rebounds (1,766), most assists (988), most steals (561), and most 100-point games (22).

Anne Marie Polk

Women's Volleyball

Polk was a three-time First Team All-NAC selection (2003-05) on the women's volleyball team. During those three years, the team achieved a record of 57-30, with Polk leading the team to the NAC semi-finals on three occasions.

She holds the school record for attack percentage with 40.1 and is second in aces with 307. Polk also ranks third in program history with 821 kills and is seventh in total attacks with 1,625. Her 386 kills in 2005 are still a program record, as is her .483 attack percentage in 2005 and her 132 aces in 2004.

Polk graduated from Husson in 2007.

Dawn Doucette-Kaplan
Field Hockey & Softball

Doucette-Kaplan was part of the program's first field hockey team in 1997 and led the team to winning records in three of her four years. She was named to the MAC All-Conference teams in 1999-2000, including earning Player of the Year accolades in 1999. She notched 20 goals and 20 assists in 33 games played while serving twice as team captain. She was also named All-Conference in softball in 1998 and was a two-time captain. Doucette-Kaplan is the first field hockey player to be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Despite only playing in 33 career games, Doucette-Kaplan ranks third in career assists (20), seventh in game-winning goals (six), eighth in points (60), 10th in goals (20), and sixth in season assists with nine in 2000.

Off the field, Doucette-Kaplan was a four-time member of the dean's list and earned Husson's Business Award in 2001 while serving as the student government president in 2000-01. She graduated in 2001.

Tom Coughlan
Men's Basketball & Men's Soccer

Coughlan was Husson's starting center on the Northeast College Conference championship teams in 1963 and 1964. He was named the winner of the Nelson Degrasse Award for outstanding senior on the team after averaging 15.5 points per game during the 1964 season. He also set records at the time for most free throws made (10 vs. Ricker) and most rebounds in a game (22 against New Haven College) during his senior season.

Coughlan also starred on the soccer team as a senior. He was the starting goalkeeper and led the team to a 6-1 season while making 70 saves with an 89.7 save percentage and a pair of shutouts. His save percentage ranks third in program history. Thanks to Coughlan's outstanding play, Husson captured the Northeast College Conference title. He is a 1964 graduate of Husson.

Coughlan is being inducted posthumously. Coughlan's wife and daughters received his posthumous award.

James Zukowski
Baseball

Zukowski, a pitcher, led Husson to the MAC Championship as a freshman in 1997, recording the win in the Championship contest. As a sophomore, he was named an NAIA All-Region and led the then Husson Braves to a second conference title. The following season he was named All-Conference, All-Region, and honorable mention NAIA All-American as Husson finished as the MAC runner-up. As a senior, he helped lead the team to another spot in the MAC Championship game.

Zukowski is tied for third all-time at Husson for wins in a season (six in 1999), third in complete games in a season (seven in 1998), tied for fourth in career wins (20), fourth in complete games (18), and fourth in innings pitched (221.2).

He graduated from Husson in 2000.

David Chase
Football

Chase was a two-time captain for the Eagles football team in 2005 and 2006 and led the team to a win over Division I-AA LaSalle in 2006. He is the all-time leader in pass attempts (573), pass completions (256), passing yards (3,450), passing touchdowns (31), and passing yards per game (104.5).

Chase is a 2008 graduate of Husson.

Save the date! Next year's Sports Hall of Fame weekend events will be December 4-5, 2015.

Donors and Scholarship Recipients Celebrated at Luncheon

The Women's Philanthropy Council hosted Husson's 2014 Scholarship Recognition Luncheon. At the luncheon, its members got together to celebrate student achievements.

In 2013-2014, Husson University awarded $7.5 million in institutional and endowed financial aid. Endowed scholarships are a vital source of support for our students.

"This talented group of community leaders, alumni, and friends of the university inspires women to give of their time, talent and resources to our educational institution," said Husson University President Robert A. Clark. "They also help develop women as philanthropists in an effort to benefit today's students — as well as future generations."

"The scholarship event was an overwhelming success," Clark said.

> The investment you make in today's young people is an investment you make in your community.

Clark noted that 96 percent of Husson undergrads have financial needs, 85 percent receive some kind of aid, and 17 percent come from households with adjusted gross incomes of $25,000 or less.

"Donor generosity provides students the support they need to get a great education," he said.

Featured at the luncheon was student Kaysie Pelletier, whose battle against flu-induced heart failure at age 17 inspired her to pursue a career as a pharmacist. Pelletier's emotional presentation hit home with luncheon attendees. (You can read Kaysie's inspiring story in this issue of the Ledger on page 33.)

"To all the donors who are here today, I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart," Pelletier told the crowd. "Because of you, students like me have a chance to have a great life. We wouldn't be nearly as successful without your generosity."

Alumna Sue Cyr spoke to the crowd about the life-changing power of education. Cyr and her husband, Joe, who own Cyr Bus Lines, created the Thomas E. Thornton, Jr. Husson Alumnus Endowed Scholarship Fund, which this year provided financial support to over 40 students. The Cyrs both attended Husson and have since gone on to build the family's business into Maine's largest school bus company, also offering charter coach service in Maine and beyond. Cyr spoke of the importance of what the council does.

"Were it not for the generosity of our Women's Philanthropy Council and other donors, many Husson students wouldn't be able to afford to go to college," she said. "They'd be denied all of the opportunities that education provides."

Cyr said that 350 Husson students received special scholarships this year, with many of them in attendance at the luncheon. She asked for others to join their efforts to increase that number.

"Husson University is a vital part of our community — just as scholarships are to the students who need them," she said.

According to Cyr, the students supported today will be the leaders of tomorrow.

"They'll influence everything we see and do," Cyr said. "The investment you make in today's young people is an investment you make in your community, in your state and in your country."

Successful Graduate Advises Students to Seek Opportunity

Jack Lynch has donated to Husson nearly every year since he graduated in 1963. From the start, this made sense. Lynch started out life as a young man who dropped out in the 10th grade. While serving in the military, he had an epiphany.

“I saw people who had education just marching right by me,” he said. “A light bulb turned on. I thought, ‘Wow, education’s the key.”

He started at Ricker College in Houlton but quickly moved to Husson for a deeper concentration in business education while his wife finished her nursing degree at Eastern Maine General Hospital. The education he received at Husson completely changed his life. While his friends took their graduation summer off, he wrote letters to the biggest companies in the nation – and Ford Motor Company offered him a job. At the time, he was the highest-paid Husson graduate ever.

Ford wanted talented employees who could move quickly, embrace change and ride the company fast track. But after a few years, by then with two children, he declined a major promotion to return to New England for something more important.

“Ford was wonderful, but it was not going to be right for my family,” he recalled.

After managing various factories that produced potato chips, shoes, and shirts, Lynch went into corrugated packaging. After a merger eliminated his position around 1980, he and two friends continued in that business together until the early 2000s. Since then, he’s worked as an independent medical products representative.

Lynch has served on Husson’s alumni board and as its president, and he shared the dais with Sen. Edmund Muskie when the new Husson campus was dedicated in the 1960s. He’s seen it grow into the university it is today.

“They’ve done wonderfully,” he said. “They’ve had some good leadership.”

Now 79, ready to ease up after such a successful career, he has some advice for current students.

“There is opportunity if you go seeking it, but it means rolling up your sleeves,” he said. “It’s not going to come to you. You’ve got to go find it.”

Brush with Death Inspired Standout Pharmacy Student

As a junior at Caribou High School, Kaysie Pelletier hadn't decided on a career. But she clearly remembers the day that she made her decision.

That day, the 17-year-old athlete couldn't run one lap around the school's track. She was run down, tired, and not feeling well. That night, she began having trouble breathing, and was rushed to the ER.

Kaysie had the flu, but the virus had attacked her heart, resulting in fluid build-up. At age 17, her heart was failing. She was transferred to Eastern Maine Medical Center in Bangor. In a drug-induced fog, she remembers two things clearly. One was the doctor telling her parents that she would feel as if she were going through a war. The second was what she asked her mother.

"I said, 'Mom, am I going to die?'" she recalled.

She pulled through, but her close call resulted in a career epiphany: The medications the doctors had given her had saved her life, and she knew that she wanted to be a pharmacist. After graduation, Kaysie enrolled in the pre-pharmacy program at the University of New England. But she felt out of place there, so after two years transferred to Husson. It was closer to her small, northern-Maine hometown, was more affordable, and had smaller classes where she got to know her classmates and instructors.

The comfort level might have helped her success. Kaysie is a standout student, vice president of her class, vice president of the Phi Lambda Sigma pharmacy leadership society, a member of the Phi Delta Chi professional fraternity, and a member of the American Pharmacists Association Academy of Student Pharmacists.

Last summer, she was one of 10 students out of thousands nationwide that Rite Aid accepted as corporate interns in Pennsylvania. She worked with Rite Aid executives from June through August, touring the East Coast and learning the medical and operational sides of the pharmacy business.

"The fact that they selected someone from Husson says a lot about our program," Kaysie said.

Kaysie has an interest in working with the elderly, and will do a rotation this winter at the Maine Veterans Home. In 2016, she'll earn her Doctor of Pharmacy and expects to begin working in a community setting in northern Maine. One day, she'd like to be a regional manager for an organization like Rite Aid and influence other Maine pharmacists.

The way she sees it, a donor who supported a pharmacy student indirectly made her survival possible. Kaysie hopes that Husson alumni understand the value of their donations to students.

"It's making a difference," she said. "It's helping educate the future. A potential donor could be giving money to a future pharmacist who could maybe catch a drug interaction with their prescription. You never know."

Excitement Building for the New Wadleigh Academic Center

The new Wadleigh Academic Center, under construction now, will give students a comfortable place to work and study in the Newman Gymnasium. Once completed it will be an open, well-lit, comfortable room with glass doors into the lobby, nearly double the size of the old room and designed to emphasize learning and collaboration.

The new center is being made possible through the generosity of donors Randy and Angela Wadleigh. Randy, a 1987 graduate of what was then Husson College and current university trustee, is the son of the founder of Governor's Restaurants, a popular Maine chain based in Old Town. After growing up in the family business, he enrolled at the University of Maine to earn a business degree and to play basketball. But he soon found that he was just a number in big classes with hundreds of students.

"I didn't feel like I belonged, so I transferred to Husson mid-year and played under Bruce MacGregor," he recalled. "Bruce is an icon. That's what really brought me to Husson."

Twenty-seven years later, he runs the family business, and he's used the degree he earned at Husson every day to create success for his chain. He noted that, while he recalled being anxious to get out of school in 1987, today he looks back with appreciation for the education that he received.

"The lessons I learned from athletics were tremendous. They gave me a lot of the leadership skills that I have now – and use every day," Wadleigh said. "Also, the classroom made me more disciplined, and made me realize there's a lot more to learning than just working all the time."

While the school is extremely pleased with the donation, Wadleigh avoids the spotlight and doesn't feel that his name needs to be on anything.

"It will be cool on one hand, but it's humbling," he said. "It's all about the school. It isn't about us. It's about student athletes."

Potential donors, he says, should remember to keep Husson clearly in mind.

"It's their legacy," he said. "I think most alumni, like me, appreciate how far the university has come."

Director of Athletics Frank Pergolizzi is excited about the new center, which he says is going to be a fantastic addition to the Newman Gymnasium.

"It's a place where our athletes – or any student, really – will feel comfortable," Pergolizzi said. "It [will be] a really great academic resource and a place where our students like to be and want to be."

Executive Director of Development Warren Caruso, who is also the men's basketball coach, says that the center joins several recent campus projects that add value to the university's educational experience. And to see an academic center when you first walk into the Newman Gymnasium, he said, sends a strong message.

"That's the ultimate piece that really adds value to the mission statement for the university," he said.

Randy Wadleigh agrees.

"When people come into the lobby, that'll be one of the first things that you'll see," he said. "Before you even step into the gym you've got to go by an academic center. That's what it's all about."

Class of 2014

We gratefully acknowledge the graduating seniors of the Class of 2014 who united together in support of Husson University and who are contributing to the institution's future success.

Where will the Husson Eagle land next?

1. Cut along the dotted line with some scissors. Be sure not to ruffle the Eagle's feathers by cutting too close!

2. Bring the Eagle with you and take pictures of him wherever you go. The Eagle likes local, national and international travel.

3. Post your photos for all to see at facebook.com/hussonalumni. Photos must be in good taste.

4. Join us on Facebook to see where the Husson Eagle has landed and share his travels with your friends.

Homecoming 2014

Make your way home – you're always welcome!

This year's homecoming brought more joy and excitement than ever before. As people filled the parking lots, we welcomed new and familiar faces home for an eventful weekend.

On Friday, the Scholarship Appreciation Luncheon honored donors and their recipients. After a campus tour and an evening cocktail social, alumni and friends enjoyed Broadway Pops' "Oh What a Night! Billboard Hits of the 1960s" at the Gracie Theatre, and enjoyed hors d'oeuvres by Winterport Winery, owned by Mike Anderson '75.

On Saturday, 293 alumni, students, parents, and friends attended the President's Breakfast at Dickerman Dining Commons. Jackie Emerson '64 earned the Presidential Outstanding Alumni Service Award for her contributions of time, talent, and treasure, and student Colette McKeen earned the Presidential Future Alumni Award for her community volunteer efforts.

The Dean's Seminar Series highlighted Husson's accomplishments and initiatives, and everyone admired the new Ronan Center for Financial Technology. After the Top Chef Cook-Off and the Greek Games competition, Winkin Stadium roared as our football team defeated Gallaudet 12-6, putting them at the helm of the ECFC entering post-season. A big hit following the game was the screening of NESCom's film production, The Tale of Three Brothers. Homecoming ended with four inductions into the Alumni Hall of Fame.

Homecoming weekend is dedicated to all of our Husson constituents. If you didn't join us this year, we look forward to seeing you next year!

Alan Zoccolillo, '67, has been inducted into the Iona College Goal Club Hall of Fame for his successful career as a baseball coach at the institution. Zoccolillo was the fourth head-baseball coach in the college's history, and served for 18 years from 1988 to 2005. He posted 378 victories for Iona and 206 in the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. In his 25 seasons as an NCAA head coach, he led the Gaels to nine straight postseason MAAC appearances, four MAAC South Division titles, and two MAAC regular-season championships. In 1992, Zoccolillo led the college to its first MAAC baseball championship and trip to the ECAC Finals. During his time at Iona College, he was named the MAAC Coach of the Year three times, and coached 30 players who went on to professional baseball careers, including Chicago White Sox starter Mike Bertotti and 2011 World Series Champion Jason Motte.

Life in Color has become part of the biggest movements in dance music to date.

Lance Cowan, '09, has been named Old Town (Maine) High School's new head football coach. He'd worked for five years as the assistant coach there before serving in a similar capacity at Brewer (Maine) High School. He is also a veteran youth baseball coach with time spent at the middle school and senior league levels in Old Town and Bangor, assisting in Bangor's Maine District 3 champion all-star squad's title game of the 2010 Senior League World Series. He plans to take a balanced approach with his team, by blending elements of run-oriented attack and passing game components he learned earlier in his career.

Zach Schmesser, '09, is the coordinator of the BikeMaine Trek for the Bicycle Coalition of Maine. During last summer's BikeMaine Trek he noticed that showering bicyclists could quickly use up hot water in hotels. This sparked an idea for New England Mobile Showers, which will provide 16 shower spaces with changing and waiting rooms. With a grant from the Libra Future Fund, he has turned his idea to reality. The shower trailer could provide 85-100 showers per hour and can be hooked into local utilities or run independently.

Billy Shannon, '09, has been promoted to head coach for the Bangor (Maine) High School boys' varsity soccer team. After serving for three years as the sub-varsity coach at Bangor, he will fill the coaching vacancy this fall. Having played four years of soccer at Hampden Academy and two at Husson, with four years of coaching, Billy has had extensive experience on and off the field. He hopes to keep Bangor near the forefront of Class A soccer while ensuring each student fulfills his or her academic responsibilities.

What we've been up to...

Alumni at our Southern Maine Networking Social on November 6 at the Southern Maine campus in Westbrook.

Nursing alumni gathered around to learn more about Mr. SIMS on their tour of the SIMS Lab in O'Donnell Commons.

Alumnus Mike Anderson and his wife Joan are the proud owners of Winterport Winery and Penobscot Bay Brewery. They won 2014 Food Producer of the Year from the Maine Grocers and Food Producers Association.

Director's Corner

Season's Greetings to all of our Alumni & Friends

The Alumni Relations office has been busy planning various events around the country. We will be making our annual stops in Florida to The Villages, Daytona Beach, Naples, and Fort Meyers this winter. We also have a few new areas on the docket as the men's basketball team will be in Las Vegas, NV and the women's basketball team will be in Florida over Christmas break.

November proved to be a great month for Husson this year. The Alumni Board hosted a gathering at a Season's Grille and Lounge in Bangor that brought 50 alumni in the room to share stories and reminisce about their Husson experience. Southern Maine invited alumni and friends to the Westbrook campus for a networking social. And, the football team made history hosting the first ever NCAA playoff game!

As supporters and champions of this institution, I want you all to know that in the upcoming months, I plan to continue strengthening the bond between Husson University and our alumni. I want to create programs that match YOUR interests and needs as we develop a culture that teaches our younger alumni to be more involved in the Association. Exciting new things are on the horizon for Husson and the Office of Alumni Relations. I can't wait for you to be a part of it. Please feel free to give me a call or stop by One College Circle. My door is always open!
