Husson's New South Campus Now Open In Portland

by James M. Davis, Associate Administrator for Development

You are driving on Interstate 295 around Portland and your radio is tuned to WJBQ or WYNZ and you hear ... "Visit the Husson College South Campus at 901 Washington Avenue in Portland today, or call 774-2895. That's 774-2895. ... Remember, tomorrow's leaders are at Husson today."

After the amazement and surprise wear off, you wonder what the Husson College South Campus is all about.

Husson's South Campus, after much market research and location shopping, became a reality in August, 1984. Husson President Delmont N. Merrill cited the "homework" done by the College when he said "having determined need, we were delighted to find that Andover College, a new and extremely well-equipped facility, had space available for our programs. Furthermore," he added, "it allows us to practice the sound management technique of sharing resources."

With Andover, the South Campus of Husson College can be found on Washington Avenue in Portland. And, according to Greg Vermette '74, associate director for admissions, "We are serving a need in all three divisions not served by other institutions in the area." Vermette is coordinating the South Campus activities which include the Continuing Education Extension Division's popular College on Saturday program, the Graduate Division--which offers classes evenings and Saturdays, and the baccalaureate completion program.

"The baccalaureate completion program is not offered by any other institution in the area through a modular system," Vermette said. The modular system is an academic calendar of six eight-week modules through the year. The modular system permits students with an associate degree to acquire a baccalaureate degree in a little over one year.

Part of Husson's homework for the South Campus was done by Acting Dean for Academic Affairs, Philip C. Grant. "We did a survey at Andover and 56 percent of the present students expressed interest in Husson's baccalaureate program and most of them still prefer the modular daytime program," Grant said.

As Husson searched for a location in the Portland area, Lee Jenkins, the president of Andover College, telephoned Husson President Merrill to discuss the possibility of colocating the South Campus at Andover. Through their negotiations, an agreement was made formal in early August. Later, the New England Association of Schools and Colleges approved the arrangement and Husson's accreditation was extended to include the undergraduate and graduate degree programs offered at the South Campus.

The first programs to get underway at the South Campus were the Continuing Education Extension Division's College on Saturday program and the Graduate Division program with its courses held evenings and Saturdays. These programs began in September, 1984, and involve over 100 students in the two programs.

As the new year dawned in 1985, Greg Vermette officially opened an office at the South Campus. Greg coordinates the baccalaureate completion program--the junior and senior years. These comprise the third division of the South Campus. With his Administrative Assistant, Mary Bauerle of Portland, Vermette "hit the ground running." On January 10, they held a reception for prospective students and the first module began on January 14, 1985.

Greg Vermette at the entrance to South Campus, located in the Andover College building on Washington Avenue in Portland.

"The first mod went splendidly," says Vermette. "I've talked with current students and faculty and they are all excited about the program." Vermette also said that the program is building quickly. "It is fantastic, we have had over 150 inquiries since we opened our office in January, and the overall response is very, very good." Mary Bauerle decided to practice what she preaches--after answering so many telephone inquiries about the degree completion program, she decided to do it herself--and she became a full-time student in March!

That response has not come without some hard work from Vermette and Bauerle. They have sent mailings to target groups, placed radio and newspaper advertisements, and, in early March, held their second reception. If that is not enough, the South Campus office handles the scheduling, registration, and financial aid procedures for the students--following the same guidelines as the Day Division uses on the Bangor campus. Those efforts are paying off. As the second module of courses begins in early March, the South Campus has 100 students enrolled.

The first module of South Campus undergraduate courses involved four courses: Managerial Accounting, College Algebra, Personnel Administration, and Ecology. The second eight-week session offers Principles of Insurance, Advanced Communications I, and Labor Economics in the daytime and Principles of Economics II, American National Government, and Ethics during the evening. "We think our program will appeal to a person who is interested in career advancement and upward mobility," says Acting Academic Dean Grant.

Greg Vermette is very optimistic. "We know now the real interest and demand for this type of program," he says. Husson Alumni interested in either the baccalaureate completion or graduate degree programs should contact Gregory Vermette, Husson College South Campus, 901 Washington Avenue, Portland, Maine 04103 or telephone the South Campus Office at (207) 774-2895.

Alumni Giving Doubles For 84-85 Annual Fund

by James M. Davis, Associate Administrator for Development

Excellence. Excellence is our goal for Husson College and its pursuit encourages us to do better than ever before.

This year's annual fund campaign among Husson Alumni is a tale of excellence. To date the Husson Alumni have pledged and donated almost $21,600. More important than that, over 190 of you have given or made a pledge to the Alumni Annual Fund. For that, all of you deserve a hearty Thank You!

The scope of that accomplishment becomes apparent when we compare alumni giving statistics from 1984-85 with 1983-84. At this time last year (the beginning of March), the College had received gifts and pledges from 86 alumni for a total of $4,714.55.

Most impressive is the incredible increase in the numbers of alumni who have supported the College thus far. Over twice as many alumni have contributed to the College in 1984-85 as did in 1983-84! In addition we are more than $3,200 above last year's total amount raised by the alumni. On June 30, we will wrap up the 1984-85 Annual Fund.

And the best news of all is that the total numbers of gifts and pledges for the Annual Fund this year is $82,973 from 322 donors! Last year at this date the College had received $30,694 from 177 donors. It is a testament to your support that alumni are leading the way in the annual fund.

There are reverberations from this kind of participation that you should know. Other donors, individuals, foundations, and corporations all inquire "How well do Husson alumni support the College?" We can answer that question emphatically--"Very well, indeed!" And we have the facts and figures to emphasize the point. This year's level of participation spells out a very strong message to those individuals outside the "Husson Family." It is a message that Husson Alumni increasingly care about their College and it is a message that a Husson education continues to be a wise investment.

In other areas of the annual fund, gifts from foundations and trusts are more than double those of last year at this time. Corporate and business gifts and pledges are well ahead of last year and employee gifts show an increase over last year at this point. Additionally, one notable gift is worth mentioning.

The George I. Alden Trust from Worcester, Massachusetts has always been a generous supporter of the College. This year the trust increased its gift by 50 percent over previous years' donations. In the past four years, the trust has supported data processing equipment, transcription machines for the Office Administration department, science laboratory equipment, and microcomputers. This year's gift will again assist the Office Administration department.

As successful as this year's annual fund drive may appear to be on the surface, there is always room to improve. Remember that excellence encourages us to pursue ever higher goals.

Alumni Association President Clara L. Swan, '33, said it very well in her appeal letter to alumni--"There is little doubt about it--Husson is setting a new pace for schools of business and professional studies. I can tell you unequivocally that one of the reasons for this is the support we have received from alumni for the Annual Fund. It is gifts from thoughtful alumni such as yourself that will continue to give us that margin of excellence."

Your Annual Fund contributions provide opportunities for scholarships, faculty development and resource materials for our students--three excellent reasons to continue your support or to start a good habit.

Excellence. It is our goal at Husson College and its pursuit encourages us to do better than ever before.

Army National Guard Attends Husson Computer Seminar

Too few people trying to do too much work was a complaint, which is as old as paperwork itself, voiced time and time again during a recent seminar for 37 of the Maine Army National Guard's high ranking officers at the Husson Microcomputer Center.

The seminar was designed to get those officers thinking about another means of processing the paperwork required to move troops and to feed them and clothe them and, most importantly, pay them.

Although the term has certainly been a part of their vocabulary for years, the officers were introduced to ways in which computers can help them do their jobs efficiently.

"People can be apprehensive about this technology," Baker said. "But then they discover in two or three hours that the average person can do this stuff."

It was called the Automation/ Computer Literacy Seminar. It was a three-day program which Husson College has also conducted for executives from such companies as the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad and Guilford Industries.

"It amounts to cramming 10 pounds of material into a five pound bag," according to Jesse Baker, the featured lecturer and director of Husson's expanding Microcomputer Center.

"Before any business uses this technology, management has to be trained. Oftentimes, computers hit management from the bottom up," Baker remarked during a break after one of his lectures.

Col. Linwood Feeney, who is directing the development of computer information systems at Camp Keyes in Augusta, the Maine Army National Guard's state headquarters, wants to make sure that the appreciation for what computers can do works from the top down.

Even Brig. Gen. Richard D. Sylvain, Maine's Deputy Adjutant General, attended the seminar.

"We are trying to get them to think computers," said Baker, who explained he has worked in the microcomputer field for five years and was participating in his fifth Husson seminar for management people.

"People can be apprehensive about this technology," Baker said. "But then they discover in two or three hours that the average person can do this stuff."

Although the officers did perform some classroom exercises at computer terminals during the three days, the seminar was geared more toward informing them how computers can be a management tool than it was to how programs are written.

It was pointed out, after all, that specialists and sergeants would do most of the work at the keyboard and that programs already exist for just about anything that a military organization would require.

"We're not teaching them programming and computer language," Baker explained. "We're teaching them how to apply programs already in existence to their needs."

Alumni President's Column

by Clara L. Swan '33

On this beautiful wintery day, I am thinking of all the Husson Alumni spread from the tip of Maine to California. In this corner of the United States, we are having beautiful weather with enough snow for the many winter sports. Oh yes, we have bold, cold weather, too, but nothing as drastic as this year's deep snows and torrential rains in the West.

All is well at the College. A good number of new students entered in January. The second semester has begun and Class of 1985 is looking forward to graduation and the future. The men's varsity basketball team has had its "ups and downs" with one Senior, a couple of Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen keeping the basketball dates. This surely is a building year. The effort and will to win is there. The outlook for 1985-86 and the future is positive with sophomores like Jay Moore of Bucksport and Tony Michaud of Caribou, who will both be returning.

The women's basketball team is doing very well and has played some great games at home and away. It has been a good year with more wins than losses. A free sports pass is available for Alumni. Do you have yours?

Many alumni use the Newman sports facility at noon and in the evening. The public also enjoys the pool and the gym, sauna and exercise facilities. President Merrill joins the basketball team each noon when he is not off campus. Professor Bill Read swims each day, and Dr. and Mrs. Philip Grant also exercise daily.

Plans are being made for a gala October 18 and 19 Homecoming with many and varied events of interest to both young graduates and older alumni. Mark your calendar and plan to attend the many activities this fall.

The Greeks are active on campus and pledge week has been as busy as usual. Congratulations go to the Epsilon Tau Epsilon sorority for winning the Academic Trophy for the last three years.

My personal thanks go to the many alumni who have answered the annual appeal letter. As a result, gifts are running over three times those of last year and more than 190 alumni have responded. I certainly appreciate and am pleased to read all the personal notes to me. It looks like the letter is successful and the Husson Alumni have joined ranks to raise the largest annual gift ever. Thank you all on behalf of the College and your Alumni Board.

Spring is on its way and Alumni Board members are looking forward to planting the first "flowering tree" along the Bell Tower walk to Newman Gymnasium. This tree will be planted to honor the services of your past Alumni President, Shirley Kimavicz Richard, '55. I hope it will be in bloom for commencement.

There are two new faces on campus who are bringing a great deal of experience to Husson College. Benita Deschaine heads the Development Department. Benita is dynamic and very interested in the promotion of your college. Patrice Krant is Director for Alumni Affairs and Public Relations and is constantly in touch and working with the Alumni. The Alumni Board enjoys Patrice's support and excellent advice.

Changes in the College's image and promotion are the result of Deschaine and Krant working together. They are a good team and the 1985-86 Homecoming will be better for their efforts and advice.

If you have not yet mailed in your Alumni Information Data Sheet and a contribution, it is not too late. Remember, we hope to increase the number of alumni participating this year. It is your College and we need you to keep the College healthy.

Keep in touch with your Alumni Office. I hope to see you on campus this fall at Homecoming.

Alumni Association President Clara L. Swan '33

16 Husson Students Listed in "Who's Who"

Sixteen Husson students have been listed in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," an annual directory of national outstanding students.

The directory has been published each year since 1934, and includes the names of students nominated for academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success.

The students are: Lisa A. Bombaro of Scarborough, Tami T. Ward of Fort Fairfield, Martha S. Robb of Calais, Scott A. Reed of Watertown, CT, M. Lynn Picard of Lincoln, Mary E. Lingley of Dover-Foxcroft, and Robert A. Berg of Brownville.

Also: Shelley M. Killian of Manchester, Clark D. Hemingway of New Lebanon, Lynn M. Gerry of Westbrook, Tanya J. Busch of Minot, Robert C. Bruder of Lewiston, Lester Lebel of Millinocket, Eloise Boss of East Millinocket, Mariette Sinclair of Greenville, and Deborah J. Wilson of Mars Hill.

Sidney Arey '83 Goes To Khamis Mushayt

Sidney Arey '83, who served 17 years in the Marine Corps and four overseas tours of duties, has an interesting goal--to return overseas to experience culture and customs in the Middle East.

When he learned that the United States Sports Academy was seeking a business manager in Saudi Arabia, Mr. Arey applied for the position. After all, he was well suited for the position. He received a degree in Business Administration from Husson College. He also spent time in the military as a fiscal comptroller.

"I have many friends in the Middle East. They tell me the culture there is similar to the Oriental way of life--something I am familiar with after Marine duty in the Far East. I guess the best way to find out is to experience it myself," Mr. Arey said. "It's a great opportunity."

Mr. Arey spent 10 days in Mobile training for his assignment in Khamis Mushayt, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and departed for the Middle East early this year.

The United States Sports Academy--America's College of Sport Science--is an accredited, graduate sport college with quality programs of instruction, research, and service. It is a global leader in the operation of sport training, development, and fitness programs.

The Academy provides graduate studies leading to the Master of Sport Science degree in Sport Coaching, Sport Management, Sports Medicine, and Fitness Management.

Sidney's mailing address is: United States Sports Academy, P. O. Box 1288, King Khalid Air Base, Kamis Mushayt, Saudi Arabia.

Petrone has been a business educator for sixteen years. He has worked with students, educators, administrators, the community, business and industry in all aspects for the improvement of Business and Office Education. In March 1984 Joe was awarded the Administrative Management Society, Hartford Chapter, Educator of the Year Award.

Joe resides in Southington, Connecticut with his wife, Patricia and three children, Mark, Christopher and Andrea. Joe is involved in a variety of community events including Little League, soccer, and basketball, as well as being a member of the Southington Conservation Commission. He is a member of the Connecticut Approved Baseball Umpires Association and the Central Connecticut Board of Approved Basketball Officials.

Alumni Star in Husson TV Spots

If you live in either the Bangor area or the Portland area you've surely already seen at least one of our six new 30-second T.V. commercials. Part of the College's overall image enhancing strategy, the first three "public awareness" spots began airing December 24, and a second set of them began during the recent high school basketball tournaments.

Each spot features a prominent Husson graduate who has achieved excellence in his or her career and is an active member of the community.

Husson's rising new T.V. stars are:

Jim Mallar '72, Discount Martin, Bangor

Chris Smart '63, Webber Oil, Bangor

Nancy Randall Clark '62, State Legislator, Freeport

Erin Durkin '81, Downing and Peters Reporting Associates, North Windham

Ken Hews '70, Eastern Maine Medical Center, Bangor

Rod Irish '67, Berry, Dunn, McNeil & Parker, Portland.

A True Fabric Bonanza

We recently received a nice letter from another of our successful Husson Alumni.

Joel Fishman '69, president of Fabric Bonanza, Inc. "Maine's Largest Fabric Store," in Rockland, Maine writes:

"I began this business in October 1976 in 1800 square feet of rented space. In 1979 we grew to fill a 4000 square foot space, and today I own an 8,100 square foot former supermarket building.

"I am proud to say that our customers travel to Rockland from all over the state. This store has won local Chamber of Commerce awards and has been the subject of a study in "The Homesewing Trade News," a national, industry-wide trade publication. Needless to say, this business has become a source of great pride.

"Speaking of pride, the wall directly behind the desk in my office has two framed items hanging on it: the first dollar I took in in 1976 and the first dollar I took in in my new store in 1983 are in one, and my Husson College diploma is in the other."

Mentoring - Taking Positive Action at Husson

Believing that college retention is directly affected by the amount and quality of student advising, faculty and staff at Husson College are learning to be better mentors - advisors who are available to help students develop and mature. Mentors serve as role models for Husson students: monitoring student progress, counseling, and guiding students in academic, social, and personal directions.

"The whole idea," according to acting Academic Dean Philip C. Grant, "is to pay attention to student needs as the number one priority around here ... and help students wherever possible."

Since September, 1984, training sessions have been conducted for faculty and staff. Students, too, have been made aware that mentors are available to them, and that all students have the right to initiate and build mentoring relationships with faculty and staff. In addition, promotional materials have been prepared and distributed to students on what mentoring is and how to search out and find a mentor.

The first mentoring training session centered on the role of a mentor. A rather comprehensive profile of a mentor emerged during the session. Participants agreed that a mentor is selected by the student, sincere, a resource person, approachable, supportive of the student, listens, is seen outside the classroom situation, keeps matters and conversations confidential, and sets an example/serves as a role model for the students. A mentor is not: autocratic, one who is assigned, antagonistic, a surrogate parent, too busy to help, or overly judgmental.

The next two training sessions will center on the mental and emotional stages a beginning freshman student experiences, and improving one-on-one counseling techniques.

Mentoring is "an old idea, an old term, but something most colleges neglect," said Grant. He plans to "make mentoring a matter of school policy, put it in the catalog and student handbooks so students know they can expect mentoring at Husson College."

To support the faculty and staff in their desire to initiate mentoring relationships with students, the College has set aside a fund which, according to S. Bruce O'Donnell, Dean for Student Affairs, has been used to send a faculty member and students to a performance of "Annie Get Your Gun;" to sponsor a nonalcoholic cocktail party; and to help fund a dinner party hosted by a faculty member for his class at his home.

The mentoring fund has also been used to send two faculty members and a group of students to an out-of-town professional meeting in the College van and to fund a student-faculty trip to a performance of the "Nutcracker."

Ronald E. Bishop, '60, CLU, ChFC, has been elected to the board of directors at National Life of Vermont and named a vice chairman.

Bishop began his National Life career as an agent in 1960 in Bangor, Me., where he became general agent three years later. He joined the company's Vermont agency at Burlington in September, 1970 and became its general agent five months later. The agency went on to earn three major performance awards under his leadership. Bishop was named senior vice president - marketing operations at the home office in 1976 and executive vice president in 1983.

In 1979 he was named the outstanding alumnus of Husson College's Alumni Association.

A chartered life underwriter and chartered financial consultant, Bishop has been active in a number of life insurance industry organizations. He is a past president of the Vermont CLU chapter, a founder and first president of the Vermont chapter, General Agents and Managers Association, and a past president of the Maine State Association of Life Underwriters.

He is a 27-year veteran of U. S. Army Reserve service and retired in 1980 as a colonel. He is also active in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

He lives in South Burlington, Vt.

Bruce Abell '84 has joined the Norstar Bank trust department in Bangor as an account executive.

Brian O'Donnell '73 has been promoted to associate of the 21-person firm of Terrien Architects. His principal project responsibility is programming and feasibility studies, renovation design, and architectural support for major grant applications.

Joyce Perry '79 is the new postmaster in Brewer. Joyce joined the postal service twenty-seven years ago as a substitute rural carrier, and was postmaster in Bucksport prior to her recent promotion.

Norma M. Breton '81 MSB has joined the staff of Coastal Real Estate Agency in Ellsworth. She is a licensed real estate broker.

President's Corner

by Delmont N. Merrill '54

As the end of yet another academic year approaches, it is again my pleasure to send greetings to all of our alumni and those in the Husson College community. The year has been one of change, a healthy situation for any institution. I would like to tell you something about some of the changes that have taken place.

For some time now, we have been concerned about an unacceptably high attrition rate among our students. While our rate has not been as high as that nationally, we have been concerned because an uncompleted college education represents not only a failure on the part of the student but on the part of the institution as well. Last fall, in an effort to increase student retention, we instituted a "mentoring" program in which faculty, administration, and staff voluntarily "adopt" a student in order to give that student encouragement, advice, and support. The program is distinct from academic advising and shows real promise of accomplishing its objective.

We have a completely new team in the Development Office. Benita Deschaines, Administrator for Development, and Patrice Krant, Director for Alumni Affairs and Public Relations, have brought to that office some new and exciting ideas for the development of the College. I note with pleasure that Clara Swan, the new President of the Alumni Association, has undertaken her office with characteristic vigor and is carrying on the excellent work of past president Shirley Richard. This spring the tennis court project, originally that of the Alumni Association, will be completed.

This year for the first time we have initiated a television advertising campaign. The purpose of the campaign is not to inform the public about specific programs but, rather, to enhance the image of the College. It has been said that Husson is the best kept secret in the State of Maine. We feel that the time has come to tell our story, and we are doing so with television spots featuring our alumni. No one could tell our story better. Ultimately, the success of any institution must rest on the success of its graduates. In that respect, we are certainly coming into our own.

Finally, this year we have greatly expanded our presence in the Portland area, the largest population base in the state. We now offer our graduate program there as well as a junior-senior year day division program. Our Continuing Education and Extension Division program there remains highly successful.

It has been a year of change, good change, and we are thankful for the challenges we have had to face.

Maine Business Teachers Form Scholarship to Curb Teacher Shortage

The Business Education Association of Maine has recently founded the Business Education Association of Maine Business Teacher Training Scholarship for the purpose of encouraging talented high school graduates to become business educators.

About one hundred business educators are expected to retire in the State of Maine in the next five years. The only two colleges in Maine training business educators, Husson College and the University of Maine at Machias, have had low enrollments in their teacher training programs in recent years--averaging six to 10 graduates per year combined. Compounding the teacher shortage is that trained business educators are attractive candidates for jobs in industry. In 1984, sixteen business educators left education for jobs in business and industry. In addition, a few more business teachers left the State of Maine to teach in other, better paying states.

The response from business educators has already been very good. Money keeps coming in every day.

The committee for the scholarship is chaired by Mrs. Lynn Brooks, a business teacher at Brewer High School who is assisted by Pat Trask, an Orono High School business teacher, and Judy Watson, business teacher at Old Town High School. BEAM's representative on the committee is the present president of the association, Raynald Martin of Brewer High School. Nancy Inman, a business teacher at Hampden Academy, also served on the committee but she is presently on leave.

The committee is looking for interested donors to the fund; from business, colleges, retired teachers, and from the alumni. Husson College has already agreed to match each scholarship up to $500 per student. A large contribution has already been donated by the University of Maine at Machias, the money coming from a private non-State fund.

Although a deadline for this year's fund raising has been set for March 1, any contributor giving a donation during the remainder of this school year will be considered a charter member. Anyone wishing to make a contribution can send their tax-deductible check made out to BEAMBTTS c/o Miss Judith Watson, Old Town High School, Old Town, ME 04468. The club membership is as follows:

B usiness Club	--	Up to $25
E ducator Club	--	$26 to $50
A ssociate Club	--	$51 to $100
M aine Club	--	$101 and up

All contributions are welcome.

Business Breakfast Briefs

If you would like more information about the Husson Business Breakfast Series, contact the Development Office at 947-1121, ext. 267.

Commissioner Seeley Lodwick of the International Trade Commission

November

Seeley Lodwick, one of the five commissioners on the International Trade Commission, was the speaker for the November Business Breakfast. Commissioner Lodwick confirmed reports that the ITC would reopen its hearings on the issue of shoe imports and their effect upon domestic shoe manufacturers. In an earlier decision the ITC ruled against the U. S. footwear industry, despite several Maine footwear plant closings. The new hearings will be based upon the 1984 Trade Act.

Charles Devoe, Chairman of the Board, State Compensation Committee

December

December's Business Breakfast speaker was Charles Devoe, chairman of the state Workers Compensation Commission. Chairman Devoe alluded to changes proposed for the workers compensation law. These are being considered by the current session of the legislature. Devoe, chairman of the Workers Compensation Commission since 1980, is a former Maine assistant attorney general and has served on the Advisory Commission on the Institute for Maine's Economy.

Bob Masterton, President, Maine Savings Bank

January

Robert R. Masterton, president and chief executive officer for the Portland-based The One Bancorp and Maine Savings Bank, started 1985 off as the first Business Breakfast speaker of the year. Masterton told the audience that bank mergers were a result of high Federal Reserve Bank interest rates and other industry pressures. Masterton told the large gathering that the mergers should give the firms better management and result in more services for Maine businesses.

First District Congressman Jock McKernan

February

The headline read "McKernan: Tax reform unlikely." First District Congressman John R. McKernan, Jr. February's Business Breakfast speaker, said that tax reform stood a "slim to maybe" chance of passage in Congress this year. McKernan told the audience of 205 "there is nothing simple about tax simplication." Business taxes will likely increase under any reform proposal, McKernan said. He indicated that investment tax credits and accelerated depreciation are two areas slated for elimination.

Overview: The 1984-1985 Basketball Season

Men's: Under the leadership of tri-captains David Adams, Randy Wadleigh, and Tim Mayhew, the 1984-85 edition of the Husson Braves finished the season with a 15 win, 11 loss record. The team averaged 82.7 points to their opponents' average of 80.2; averaged 36 rebounds to opponents' 33; and shot 73 percent from the foul line to opponents' 69.7 percent from the charity stripe.

Senior Tim Mayhew was the floor leader of the Braves, amassing 228 assists in the 26-game season. The Doug Flutie-sized point guard who majors in Business Administration shot 49 percent from the field and 71 percent from the foul line. When Mayhew graduates, Coach Bruce MacGregor will probably look to Jay Moore.

Moore, a 5'10" guard from Bucksport, led the Braves with 82 steals and was a distant second to Mayhew with 81 assists. Moore averaged 14.1 points per game shooting, 47.6 percent from the field and 69 percent from the foul line.

Center and tri-captain David Adams copped the high scoring honors. In the front court the Eddington junior scored 436 total points on the season with an average of 17.4 points per game. The 6'6" business administration major averaged over 9 rebounds a game, while shooting 51 percent from the field and 74 percent from the foul line.

Right behind Adams was team rebound leader Paul Claude. The 6'6" New Yorker averaged 9.5 boards a game. In addition to his defensive skills, Claude scored an average 14.8 points per game by shooting 50.8 percent from the floor and sizzling the cords from the foul line at 81.3 percent.

The fiercest competitor on the team, according to MacGregor or anyone who watched the team, is Randy Wadleigh. The 6'3" swing man from Veazie sank an average of 14.4 points per game--48 percent from the floor and 74.8 percent from the foul line. Coach MacGregor describes Wadleigh as a sound player in all aspects of the game, as his 40 steals, 52 assists, and third highest rebound average of 6.6 will attest.

Assuming that the team will lose only Tim Mayhew through graduation, the even dozen players returning should pose an awesome threat in the NAIA and Western Maine Athletic Conference in the 1985-86 season. The improvement from a subpar record to a winning record this year carries with it the hope that better seasons are ahead.

Women's: The women's final overall record was 12-9, and Coach Merrill "Red" Wilson says he feels good about the season.

Shara MacDonald of Greenville was the team's top scorer with 369 points for an average of 17.6 per game. Shara hit 55 percent from the floor and was 74 percent from the line. She was also the team's second leading rebounder with 249.

Lynne Michaud of East Millinocket was the Lady Braves' second leading scorer with 266 points for the year. She averaged 13.3 points per game from her guard position and led the team in steals with 51.

The third leading scorer was Gail Corey, who averaged 12.9 points per game for a total of 271. Gail was second best from the line, hitting 69 percent of her free throws.

Center Jo Anthony of Westbrook was the team's top rebounder, pulling down 266 while averaging 10.9 points per game for a total of 228.

The team assist leader was Sandy Roberge of Biddeford. Sandy had a total of 173 assists while averaging 6.5 points per game.

The Lady Braves disappointment of the season was in not being selected for the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics tournament in February.

Trafton President of Cavaliers

Thaxter Trafton '61, will be named President of the Cleveland Cavaliers and Richfield Coliseum, according to published reports in the Bangor Daily News.

The Bath native has been executive director of the Arizona Veterans' Memorial Coliseum and the Arizona State Fair in Phoenix since 1980 when he left Bangor. He had been director of Parks and Recreation, the Bangor Auditorium, and the Bangor Fair.

The Cavaliers are owned by the Gund family in Ohio. Trafton's position will combine roles currently held by Gordon Gund and his brother George Gund III. The Gund family purchased the Richfield Coliseum in 1981 and acquired the Cavaliers in 1984. The Richfield Coliseum was built in 1974 and can seat 19,548.

Trafton grew up in Bath and graduated from Husson in 1961. He taught and coached basketball at John Bapst High School until 1965 when he accepted the parks and recreation position with the City of Bangor. The combined parks and recreation-Bangor Auditorium position was created in 1967. In 1975, Trafton was named director of the Bangor Fair.

Trafton is married to the former Mona Hebert of Bangor. They have four children, Tony, Teresa, Mark, and Alan.

Loring Air Force Base

"One of my biggest concerns about finishing up my degree is that there are so many more Husson courses that I want to take ... I love Husson. Husson has become a very important factor in my life, and I realize that I am going to miss taking courses." That's one example of the many testimonials heard about Husson College on a recent snowy trip to Loring Air Force Base in Limestone, Maine.

The Continuing Education and Extension Division program at Loring has been active since 1978. At Commencement this May, the total of Loring site graduates will rise to 74.

During the term just ended, 170 students were taking Husson classes. This number includes active duty military personnel, military dependents, and civilians from the Limestone/Caribou area.

Depending on who one asks, there are between 3000 and 10,000 residents at Loring Air Force Base. The discrepancy occurs because some people are counting only military employees, some are including the military dependents, and some must be including the civilian workers, too. At any rate, a good percentage of them happen to be Husson students, and very proud of it.

Located three and a half hours north of Bangor, Loring Air Force Base is a mini-city, complete with its own stores, banks, and a gymnasium complex that rivals any in the area. Since the decision was reached to keep Loring an active base, a major renovation of the military housing for enlisted personnel and their dependents has been undertaken.

Theresa Faddis recently won the Non-Appropriated Funds (NAF) Employee of the Year Award. Her goal is to be a Certified Public Accountant. She credits the classes she is taking for a new level of self-confidence, self-confidence she feels contributed to her winning the NAF award.

"The courses I'm taking are directly related to my job," she said. "It helps me in my job when I can apply what I'm learning to what I'm doing. Now I have more confidence in myself when I go to work in the morning."

As Chief of Funds and Inventory Control, Theresa's duties include a large amount of accounting, and she has taken two accounting courses each term whenever she could, planning to leave her liberal arts courses to the end of her program. She feels she would not have been promoted to her present position without the college courses she is taking at Husson.

Originally from Tennessee, Theresa has maintained her southern accent in the six years she has been at Loring. She started the Husson degree program three years ago, and takes two classes each term. Considering that she works full time and has two children at home, taking two courses per term is as commendable as her Employee of the Year Award.

After nine years at Loring Air Force Base, Deborah Clark was lining up job interviews in Orlando, Florida at the time of the interview. Like Theresa, Deb credits her Husson education for her new-found employability.

After an unsuccessful attempt at college immediately following high school, it was twenty years before Deb again determined she would complete her college education. She will miss Commencement in Bangor, but will receive her Business Administration sheepskin in sunny Florida, where she expects to be already working. And this woman who "never thought I had the brains to get a degree" is going to enroll in an M.B.A. program as soon as she is settled in Orlando.

Like all of the Loring students interviewed, Deb credits Site Coordinator Robert Wunderlich with helping her to reach her goal. Bob and his wife Theresa, herself a Husson degree student, form the support structure upon which the Loring site thrives.

Bob retired from active duty at Loring just when C.E.E.D. Co-Director Lindon Christie was looking for a coordinator. Familiar with the military, well-educated, personable and enthusiastic, Bob has such an encouraging positive attitude about the potential of the Husson students that they don't dare let him down.

Understandably, Deb Clark was anxious about returning to college after twenty years. But she started slowly, just taking one class, and received the characteristic encouragement from Bob Wunderlich.

"Between Lindon telling me I could do it and Bob telling me I could do it," she said, "I really felt at home with Husson. And I knew that if I had a problem, somebody was going to be there to help me with it."

Loring Air Force Base CEED site coordinator Bob Wunderlich

Theresa Faddis concurred when asked why she chose Husson instead of the other colleges with programs at Loring. "Bob, basically," she said. "We were just visiting one day and started discussing the College. I had been wanting to go back for years, just never had the money or the opportunity. But I talked to Bob, and then I just went for it." Now that's what we call recruiting!

E-6 Tom Tucker agrees about the influence Bob Wunderlich has on the success of the Husson program and on every student at the Loring site. "There has never been a counselor in the many schools I've attended who has been more single-minded about helping students," Tom said. "That's his big purpose in life. He's one of the reasons that students come over to this education wing--they see and feel this helpfulness from Bob and Theresa Wunderlich."

Tom Tucker's approach to his education is one of the most intense imaginable. The military calls his program "bootstrap," and for Tom this is a way to pull himself up by the bootstraps and become a commissioned officer. In the "bootstrap" program, Tom has been relieved of his usual job duties on the base, and attends school full time. More than full time, actually, for Tom has been known to take six and seven three-credit courses in a single 12-week term. And he will graduate this May with a 3.95 grade point average.

Tom, a career military man, has a new goal now that he has completed his bachelor's degree with Husson: Officer Training School. This goal would not have been possible for Tom without his degree, for a minimum of a Bachelor's degree is required to apply for a commission.

"School is a key," says Tom, "that comes about not only from the knowledge you get and are able to apply to your life and to your profession, but it is a key to unlock the door to opportunities for people. It qualifies you for certain positions that otherwise you wouldn't be qualified to even want."

But like Theresa Faddis and Deb Clark, receiving that diploma

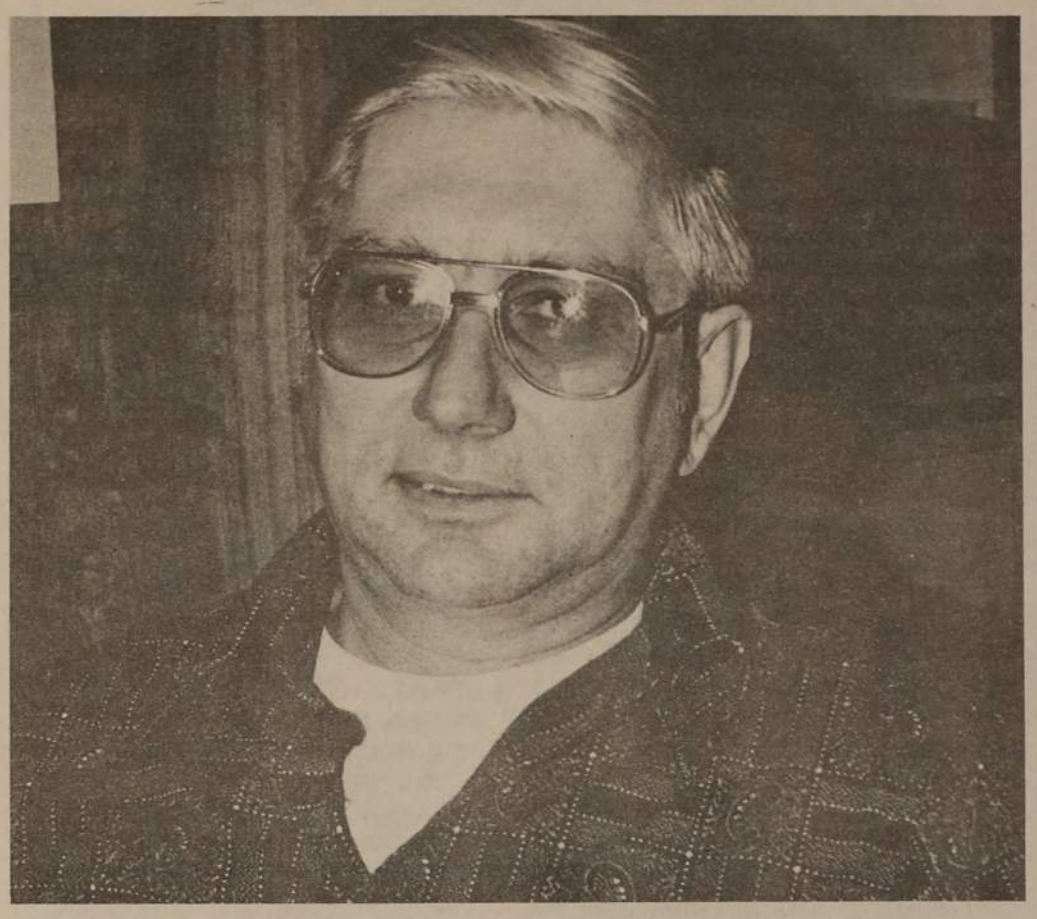

Tom Tucker '85

"One of my biggest concerns about finishing up my degree is that there are so many more Husson courses that I want to take ..."

Husson's North Campus

Deborah Clark '85

will mean more to Tom than just a new job opportunity. "My goals when I got in were just to get a degree and try for a commission. My goals have changed in that I appreciate myself a lot more, and have more confidence in what I can do, in what I can achieve -- I've seen that I can achieve."

31-year old Tom has finished the courses for his bachelor's degree and is now busily working on his master's degree through Embry Riddle University, which also has a program in the Loring education building. A more dedicated student is rare--Tom says he is at school by noon each day, and leaves about 10 P.M. It's not surprising that he says 4 year old Trixie and 2 year old Eve seem to have grown an inch every time he turns around!

Steve and Lynda Breault are an enlisted couple who met and married since they came to Loring, and who are each going to finish a degree this Fall. Lynda will finish her Husson degree just as Steve finishes his master's in avionics with Embry Riddle. Steve completed courses for his Husson degree in October, 1984, and began his master's immediately. He has been enrolled at Loring since the Summer term in 1981 and has missed only one term. He finished his Husson program with a 3.67 GPA. Both Steve and Lynda are nearly finished with their enlistment and feel that Husson has opened up doors for them as they prepare to return to civilian life. Steve will be able to use his master's degree in avionics to help him find a job with one of the airlines, or he may decide to use his business degree and nine years in medical supply to start a new civilian career in the purchasing department at a hospital.

For a young married couple, working full time during the day and then going to school full time at night means putting a lot of recreation out of the picture.

"It's a sacrifice now," says Lynda, "but it will be worthwhile in the future for us." Avid racquetball players, Steve and Lynda try to fit in a game or two when their schedules permit. Lynda also takes an exercise class on the nights she doesn't have to go to class.

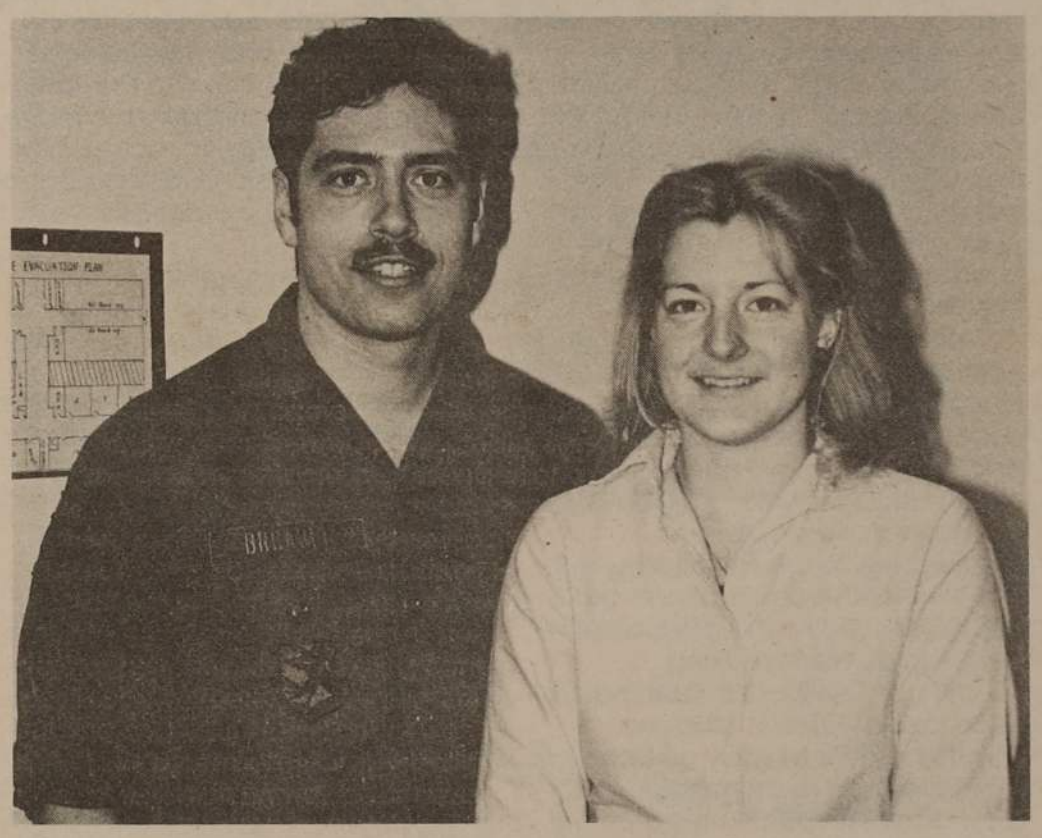

The most poignant testimonial about the Husson experience at Loring Air Force Base came from Harold Flynn '84, who is presently working on his M.B.A. in order to attain a new goal--to teach in the Husson College degree program at Loring.

"I enjoyed the time I spent at Husson, all the instructors were good and all the subjects were good, and I think that kind of pushed me into the master's program," Harold said. "Bob Wunderlich and I discussed it,and he said it was kind of like not knowing the last chapter of a book ... you're missing the boat by not going on to the end."

For the 74 Husson graduates and the many more students currently enrolled in the Husson program at Loring Air Force Base, the atmosphere is supportive, the dedication is exciting, and the pride about Husson is contagious. And with the help of Bob and Theresa Wunderlich, each student gets closer to the conclusion of that book every day.

Four degrees are offered at Husson's Loring Air Force Base site: Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, B.S. in Business Administration with an Accounting concentration, and Associate of Science degrees in Accounting and Business Administration.

"School is a key, that comes not only from the knowledge you get and are able to apply to your life and to your profession, but it is a key to unlock the door to opportunities for people."

Steve and Lynda Breault

Theresa Faddis, Loring student

What Are You Going To Be When You Grow Up?

by Diane Ebert May, Ph.D.

The question of what a person is going to be when they grow up is most often associated with the uninhibited fantasy of children. However, I must admit that I still reflect on this question at frequent and regular intervals, usually when I am not immersed in the day-to-day struggle to survive at Husson or at home. Does this mean that for all practical purposes, I am still a child and have not grown up? Notwithstanding age, I hope the answer to both questions is yes. I say this because children are uninhibited, inquisitive, unbiased, receptive to new ideas and experiences, and eager to learn. These are characteristics that we should all have in order to respond the best possible way to life's challenges and to manage them in our professional and personal lives. Unfortunately, the process of growing up often results in our becoming just the opposite: reserved, set in our ways with inherent biases, and so greatly overcommitted that it is difficult to seek new knowledge or find the time to question old values. An analogy can be made with the ecological processes in forests, young forests are green and growing while mature forests are in equilibrium and nearing degradation.

Here I want to offer my thoughts concerning the value of continuing to seek knowledge and to think critically. Philosophers, psychologists, and educators have all laid claim to the concept of thinking critically. Each group uses different approaches to critical thinking but agrees that the concept can generally be defined as the use of intelligence in decision making.

As one result of educational experiences at Husson, students should be able to carry on levels of mental activity more complicated than simple recall and restatement of ideas and facts presented by the instructor in lectures or in textbooks. After gaining knowledge in a new area, students are able to comprehend, analyze, synthesize, evaluate and come to their own conclusions about an issue.

Why am I concerned about thinking critically? I doubt that I have to convince you that thinking critically is an important commodity in a highly sophisticated technical society. We are living with an "information explosion" which is essentially the result of new knowledge discovered through the process of research. A constant stream of claims in the name of research bombards us daily in the media. We are told that "research has found ...," "research has just discovered ...," and "research proves ..." We are asked to believe these claims, to buy these products, and to base our decisions on the "research."

Do not regard research as sacrosanct. Research is a way of thinking. It is a means of gaining new information via the scientific method of identifying a problem, collecting relevant data, formulating an appropriate hypothesis, testing the hypothesis, and drawing valid conclusions. We can use the same process to think critically and make judgements based on factual information. It can help us ask intelligent questions about our profession and our future.

Again I refer to children who begin questioning and seeking the truth at a very early age. Last Christmas my five-year-old daughter observed that Santa Claus used the same kind of wrapping paper that we did--the first step in the scientific method. But clearly, no five-year-old "zealot for Santa" would consider going beyond that first step. My point is we all began to question and exhibited the early stages of thinking critically as children. My challenge to you is to continue to think critically throughout your professional careers. Do not spend your time simply "rearranging old furniture" nor blaming inadequacies on low salaries, the bureaucratic system, poor textbooks and ineffective teachers in college, or poor administrators. A creative and responsible professional requires creative commitment and that only comes from real thinking.

Please let us know your new whereabouts. Otherwise, your Ledger probably will not reach you.

A Winning Weekend Quebec Winter Carnival

by Clara L. Swan '33

An opportunity for a great weekend came along when one of Husson's alumni contacted Roland Landry, Coordinator for Maine Canadian Affairs. Mr. Landry, a prominent worker of Governor Brennan's executive staff, invited Husson alumni to join the Maine Delegation in attendance at the "Maine State Weekend" at Quebec Winter Carnival on February 15, 16 and 17, 1985 in Quebec City.

After sending the fee for the trip, much thought was given to packing a suitcase for Quebec - the cold, cold winter wonderland and its fun-filled weekend of the CARNIVAL. Long johns, wool socks, wool cap, mittens and boots were gathered together.

The morning of departure arrived. At 7:30 a.m. this adventurous trio (myself, Kay Brugman '57 and Bunny Thompson) met the others at Cyr Bus garage on outer Ohio Street and in the vicinity of 8:00 a.m., we were off for Quebec. The Bangor group totaled 15.

A stop for coffee, etc., was made at McDonald's in Skowhegan and then again for a luncheon smorgasboard in Jackman at Briarwood Mountain Lodge. There were so many buses stopped there for lunch that our group had to wait to be seated. Shirley K. Richard '55, past president of Husson Alumni Association, was with the Augusta group as husband, Alex, is a state legislator. We talked of the weekend ahead. Shirley had been to the Carnival last year, and was able to tell us much about what to expect.

At the border, we were asked for identification and we all passed! Shortly after the crossing, the champagne was passed out by our leader, compliments of the Cyr Bus Company. The party had begun!

Around 3:00 p.m. the bus arrived in Quebec. The city was awesome in its Carnival splendor - flags, banners, posters, snow sculptures and lots of people!

School librarian Bunny Thompson was my roommate. We were to stay on the seventh floor. Kay Brugman had a single room on the 12th floor. The Auberge des Gouverneurs hotel is a modern hotel with fine rooms, banquet halls, restaurants, etc. Everything a guest could want was furnished, including toothbrushes with built-in toothpaste! Oh yes, in Quebec the Canadian Exchange on the dollar was 32%.

On Friday night, the Maine Dinner and Reception began at 6:00 p.m. Attorney General James E. Tierney was the guest speaker. Several Canadian officials attended. Corsages were distributed to the ladies for a festival touch. At all times we wore identification badges showing that we were members of the Maine State Delegation. The "C'est Si Bon" band from Lewiston played before, during and after dinner. There were two dance floors in the banquet room. The music was lively and the legislators, their spouses and guests enjoyed the dancing. It was at this affair that beautiful ceramic deer, fish, ducks, bases, etc. were presented from Maine to their Canadian counterparts. During the evening, three prizes were awarded. All those who registered for the weekend (over 280) had their names placed in a box for drawing. The first free weekend in Quebec at the Auberge des Gouverneurs went to a legislative couple. I nearly fell off my chair when the next names read were mine and my roommate's. We won a weekend reservation, good until Jan. 1, 1986. The third prize was the return of the money paid for the trip to Quebec, and a legislator and spouse won it. Seated at our table that evening were a former legislator from Oxford county and his wife, and two young men, one from Bucksport and one from Blue Hill. From there on, I was known as "Lucky." First thing I ever won in my whole life.

Saturday's breakfast was a self-serve breakfast of bacon, sausage, scrambled eggs, muffins, rolls, orange juice, fruit - you name it - it was there! After breakfast, we joined

those legislators who were going to the Quebec Government Buildings for the formal meeting of Attorney General Tierney and the Mayor of Quebec. The room was filled with Quebecoix, State of Mainers, and Canadians from other provinces who came for the ceremonies. Gifts were exchanged and speeches were given in both French and English. The famous Carnival Snowman Bon Homme was there in person. He wore the insignia of the Winter Carnival - red sash and cap.

At noon, we attended the now famous Chicken Barbecue, which Dick Newcomb '80 masterminded with the food tech students from EMVTI in Bangor. "C'est Si Bon" played again and over 2500 people were served. Clam chowder, baked potato, chicken, apple pie, coffee, tea or milk were served by numerous volunteers dressed in the red shirts, jackets, and the Bon Homme Sash for the Carnival.

Saturday afternoon it was cold-cold-cold outside. However, we dressed warmly, long johns and all, and viewed the Snow Palace and Ice Sculptures. There were thousands of people, including children wrapped in scarves, colorful hats, mittens and boots - some were even in lovely sable coats and hats. We visited the many boutiques, which were underground, and were quite shocked at the prices for clothes, shoes and gifts.

Saturday night five of us ate at the Hotel Restaurant. There was a huge smorgasboard of hot and cold foods, and a table of delicious desserts. As I was sitting at the table, a young lady came over to see me - she was a Husson student in 1967, and resides now in Portland. She, her husband and friends were up for the Carnival.

Saturday evening's big Carnival event was the Parade: bands, floats, horses and riders, etc. Thanks to Kay, who roomed on floor 12, we had a bird's eye view of the Parade. At 1 a.m. we decided to go back to our rooms. At 2:20 a.m. some fun-loving Carnival weekenders called our room! So much for sleep.

On Sunday there was a brunch for all of us before departing back to Maine. It was snowing hard in Quebec and we were happy not to be driving!

We ran into Roger Daigle '72 just as we were leaving. Thanks to Roger for helping us to join the Maine Delegation with all these events planned for the participants.

The five of us who breakfasted together have made plans to return next year.

It is my fondest hope that many of you will join us for the 1986 Winter Carnival. Oh yes - forgot to mention that the champagne and drinks were delicious!

Spotlight: Ted Barber '58

Theodore Barber '58 was honored with an outstanding appointment in the Air National Guard. This article about Ted is a reprint from "The Maineiac" with permission from Ted.

Chief Master Sergeant Theodore M. Barber, of the 101 Combat Support Squadron Legal Services Office, has been appointed as the first Senior Enlisted Advisor to the National Guard Bureau Judge Advocate General Policy Council.

The Policy Council is charged with the development and dissemination of policy matters in the Air National Guard and is responsible for coordinating the creation and implementation of such policies with its active Air Force counterparts.

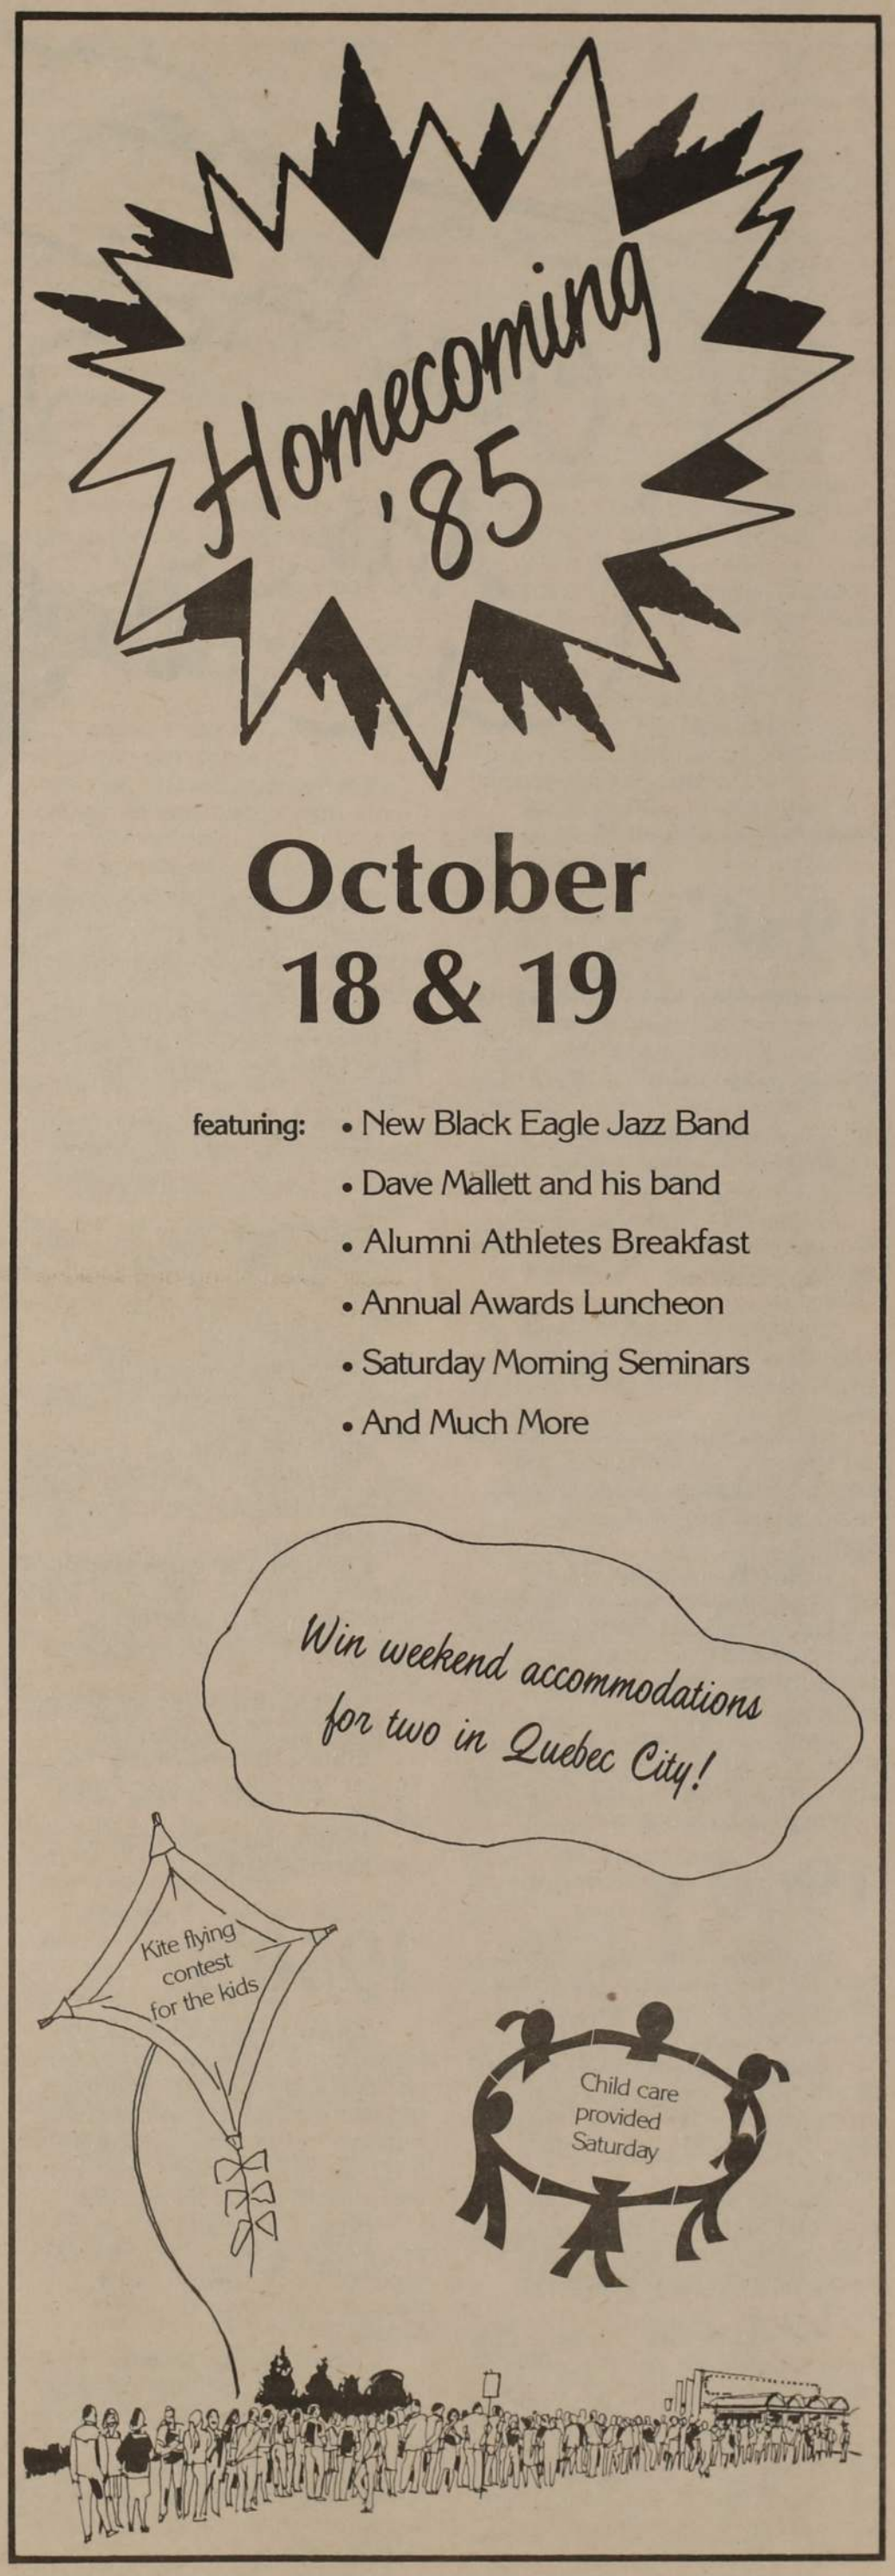

Chief Barber has accepted this additional duty as Senior Enlisted Advisor to the Policy Council after some eight years of experience with the Legal Services Office at the 101st. His position as advisor to the Policy Council is national in scope and will require him to participate in the formulation of policy that will influence the training and performance of legal specialists throughout the Air National Guard. His participation on the Policy Council will enhance the monitoring of paralegal training and the competency of paralegals in the Air National Guard in the event of mobilization and utilization in an active duty environment.

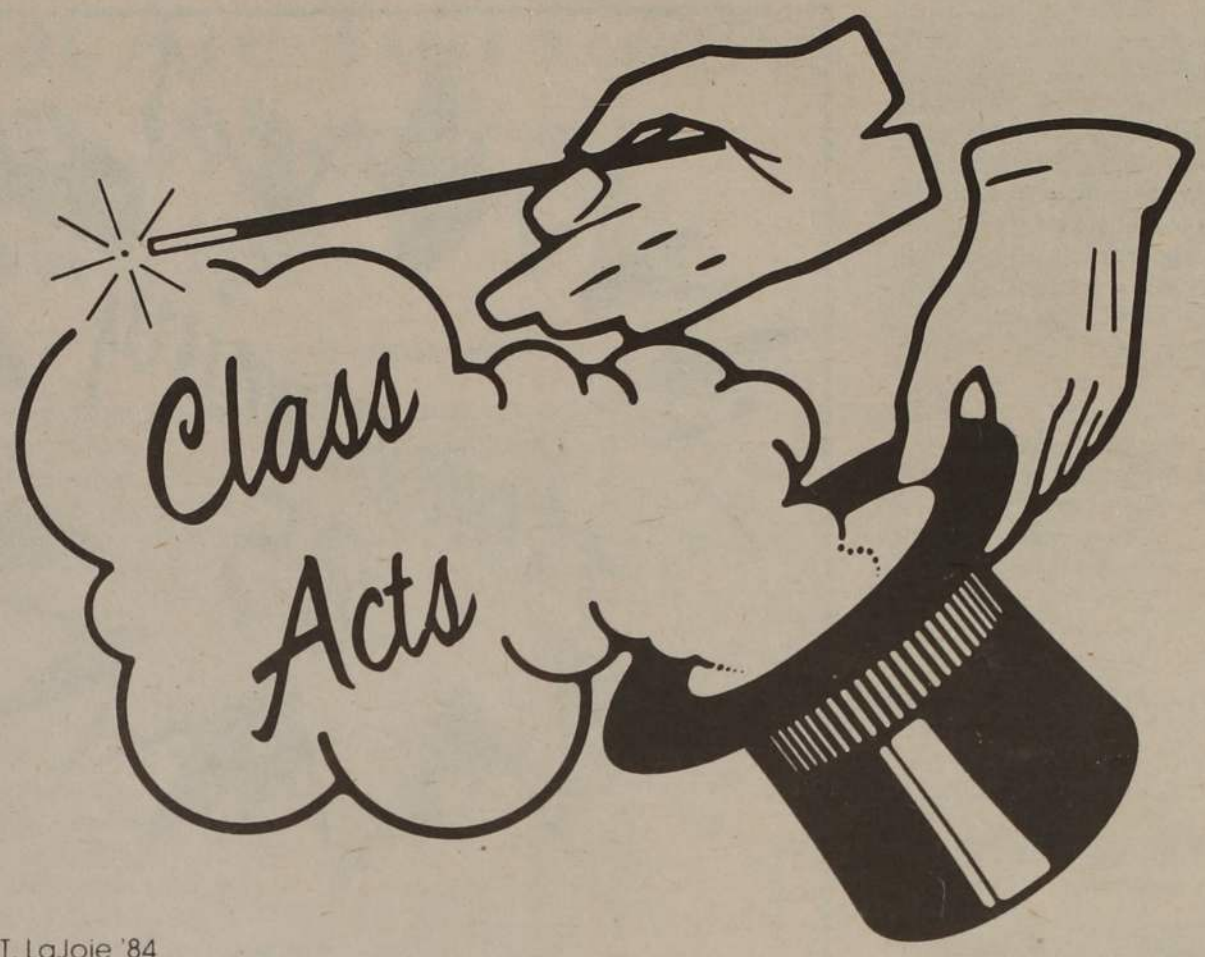

In addition, Ted has received the Air Force Commendation medal for Meritorious Service for the last three years.

Ted is a graduate of Bangor High School, Class of 1948. He attended Husson two years before enlisting, completed his program in the evening division, and was awarded a B.S. degree in Accounting in 1958.

Ted married Edwina Thomas in 1949, a Husson graduate. They are the parents of four sons, David, employed by the Bangor Daily News, Peter, employed by Grant's Dairy, Stephen, employed in Virginia, and Wayne, a student at UMO.

Ted was employed as an accountant by Fox and Ginn from 1949 and with Cole's Express until recently. He is second vice president of the Alumni Association Board of Directors.

Appeal to Athletes

Harry Greenfield '66

I flew in from New York for Homecoming '84 with expectations of meeting many of my former Husson College team players—where were you?

We have reached a point in our lives where renewing the past for two days can be very exciting. During my Husson baseball years, 1962-66, I made many close friends, and I was hoping to see some of you. In this same period, we had great times watching the fantastic basketball games and partying afterwards. Let's rekindle the old times, fun and camaraderie of the past. Let's meet at Homecoming '85 next October 18 and 19. Please contact all former soccer, basketball, baseball, etc. players and let's party in 1985. 1985 will be the 10-20-30 year reunions (class 76, 65, 55) and there will be ample notice so that our teams may meet again. Please write to me and let me know where you are so I can be sure you get all the Homecoming information. Let's get together like we did in those competitive days while we were on the fields or courts during an exciting moment. Let's relive that hit or shot that won the game for Husson—at Homecoming '85.

Harry Greenfield '66
87-40 117th Street
Queens, NY 11418

Ed. note: If you know of any Husson athletes who do not receive The Ledger, please let us know. We would like to gather all former Husson athletes for a special tribute at Homecoming '85.
