Husson University Inaugurates 6th President

INSIDE

Dear Alumni and Friends,

As I write it is with deep appreciation to the Husson community for the wonderful inaugural celebration that we have just completed. I am humbled and honored to serve you as Husson's sixth president.

Looking ahead we know that education is the most powerful economic development tool in shaping our future. The Lumina Foundation recently reported that more than 37 million Americans, about 22 percent of the working adult population, have attended college but not completed a degree – 200,000 in Maine. To this end Husson has worked hard at creating opportunities for students – of all ages as they develop their skills.

As we serve this diverse population of students we recognize that we seek to strengthen our experiential learning opportunities and enhance our students' global understanding. I have challenged the faculty to think broadly about experiential learning to ensure that every Husson graduate has an experiential learning experience by 2015. To this end the trustees have created an Experiential Learning Endowment that will enrich our students and enable them to broaden their perspectives. (Donations to grow this endowment are always welcome!)

I am so pleased to join Husson University at such an exciting time of growth and opportunity. Although I am one of the many new faces in the Husson community, it already feels like home. I have been fortunate to meet many Husson alumni and friends in the past few months and all have welcomed me with warmth and kindness. Your enthusiasm for Husson is infectious and it's truly a pleasure to be a part of it.

More than ever, there is an opportunity for alumni and friends to be involved in all aspects of the University. Whether you volunteer to help students move into the dorms, greet fellow alumni and friends at Homecoming events, or serve on one of our volunteer committees, you are making a lasting difference in the lives of our students.

Husson is growing strategically by leaps and bounds, and your support is needed now more than ever. Our mission as an institution is to transform student lives by providing a quality education leading to a professional career. Your support, whether it is $10, $1,000, or even more will bring increased value and quality to the Husson experience for our students and to the degrees that you and your friends received.

However, we cannot achieve all of the experiences on our campus. We recognize that a holistic education is one that acknowledges that not all of the lessons our students learn are in 50 minute classroom blocks. To reach our 100 percent goal we seek and appreciate the support of the broader community, hosting internships and practicum, serving as mentors and educators in ways that support our traditional classroom instruction.

Our second major opportunity is to empower our students through a greater understanding of globalization. Globalization is not just a geographical issue – but a state of the mind. Our world is rapidly changing and the Husson of tomorrow that we envision will be adaptive and responsive to those challenges. Adaptive learners never lose their edge in a changing world.

As we move forward with these two significant initiatives we seek your support and counsel as together we make a difference in our students' lives. Thank you for your energies on behalf of our students.

With Appreciation,

Robert A. Clark
President

I look forward to being a partner with you in securing Husson's future. Please stop by the Cyr Alumni Center any time – I'd love to meet you.

Sincerely,

Thomas A. Martz
Vice President for Advancement

Husson University: Looking to the Future with President Clark

By Kathryn Hawkins

Over the past 102 years, Husson University has transformed itself from a small college to a university. In the following pages, the new university president, Dr. Robert A. Clark, shares his remarkable vision for the school's future.

Husson University is no stranger to change: When the school was founded 102 years ago as Shaw School of Business, there were only enough students to fill a single floor of a building in downtown Bangor. The school's enrollment began to grow in the years after World War II, with returning soldiers using the G.I. Bill's education benefits to learn the skills that would help them become successful in business. After a change of name to Husson College, the school transformed an old dairy farm to a campus in the 1960s, and changed the pastoral setting into a quickly growing educational institution where students could learn an essential mix of liberal arts and professional skills.

Two years ago, Husson changed names yet again, transitioning from a college to a university to showcase the school's growth. Now, with five schools and a new leader, Dr. Robert A. Clark, Husson University is on the brink of a bold new era in education.

The new president

Dr. Clark replaced former president William Beardsley in January 2010, but while he may be a new face at the school, he has longstanding roots in Maine. Dr. Clark grew up in Albion, and attended the University of Maine in Orono for both undergraduate and graduate school, eventually earning his Ph.D. from Purdue University. His sister graduated from Husson in 1987. Since leaving Maine, Dr. Clark's professional path has scaled to great heights: He's served as a Fulbright Scholar at the Norwegian School of Management, and received a grant from the Lilly Endowment to found the Institute for Global Enterprise in Indiana. Along with running the Institute, Dr. Clark also served as University of Evansville's Schroeder Family Dean of Business and Vice President for Strategic Initiatives before taking on his new role at Husson University.

"This is my first move back to Maine since 1985," says Dr. Clark. "All of my family still lives here, so it really felt like coming home."

Husson today

Dr. Clark believes that Husson's new status as a university is a landmark for the school. "I think it provides a broadening recognition of the role that Husson plays in higher education in the State of Maine, and recognizes that the institution has grown in terms of its offerings," he says.

In addition to its longstanding business program, Husson University now has a wide variety of programs in health, education, legal studies, pharmacy, and science and humanities. And the school has moved beyond its Bangor base: Husson offers extended learning opportunities to students in Calais, Presque Isle, South Portland, and New Brunswick. The Boat School, in Eastport, is an affiliated program that provides students with education in boatbuilding at a working boatyard. The New England School of Communications, located on the Husson University Bangor campus, is a separate wholly owned subsidiary institution, but all Husson students are permitted to enroll in NESCom classes for school credit. For a school that started out small, Husson has seen a great deal of expansion—and it's not done yet.

While Husson offers many academic programs, they all share a common link of providing students with professional skills that will help students immediately find employment—a strategy that is benefiting both the school and its alumni in the current recession. Although the U.S. economy is facing its largest slump in decades, Husson University is thriving.

While other schools are struggling to adapt to the changing economic climate by trying to add new programs that will help students gain the real-world professional skills that employers are seeking, Husson is already ahead of the game.

“Because Husson is predominantly targeted at professional programs and training, the economic climate reinforced our traditional operations,” says Dr. Clark. “We didn’t have to change our modus operandi. In fact, our enrollment is higher than ever.”

Even better, Husson is attracting students from all walks of life, from recent high school graduates to mid-career professionals. “As the economy transitioned, we attracted a lot of older students, who were coming back to finish degrees and enhance their skill sets. The diversity we see in student backgrounds is one of the strengths of the institution.”

Husson tomorrow

As Husson University moves forward, Dr. Clark envisions a learning environment that reaches far beyond the classroom and into every facet of students’ lives.

“We won’t see the boundaries as distinctly as ‘being in a classroom’ versus ‘being in the community,’” says Dr. Clark. “We will have curriculum that challenges students, and the students will have the chance to engage in that knowledge through experiential learning, as well as academic learning.”

Husson already focuses on helping its students gain learning experiences outside of the classroom. In the School of Health and Education, for instance, students have the opportunity to take part in clinical practice, where they work directly with patients in the community and in hospitals. But it's Dr. Clark's goal to establish experiential learning programs across all divisions of the school by 2015, whether through internships, clinical work, or community service programs.

Creating an atmosphere where students are aware of their relation to the world at large is also important to Dr. Clark. Husson may be rooted in Maine, but the school aims to provide a path towards global understanding. "Even if our students have never left the State of Maine, it's our goal to engage them in a global mindset," says Dr. Clark. "We do that through our curriculum, which reflects a wide range of cultural perspectives; through bringing diverse speakers to campus; and through creating opportunities for students to study abroad."

Giving students an entrepreneurial mindset is a focus for the new president as well. "One of my past experiences was an opportunity to focus on entrepreneurship in learning," says Dr. Clark. "We helped students start their own businesses while working together in small teams. A large number of jobs are created through small business enterprise, so it's important for students to understand what it's like to be a business owner. Even if they never launch their own business after finishing the academic program, businesses want to hire employees that think entrepreneurially."

Dr. Clark's teaching philosophies seek to promote a broader worldview in Husson University students. "We want students to understand the context in which their knowledge will be applied," he says. "I think that what you'll see in the institution of the future is that it's more engaged in a learning model that challenges our students through all the facets of their life."

Hopes for alumni

Dr. Clark is a firm believer that a student's education shouldn't end once she receives her diploma. His educational philosophies all seek to help students become "adaptive learners," who can transfer the knowledge they've accumulated at Husson to a variety of new and different situations, no matter where they may find themselves in life.

"When students train themselves to be adaptive learners, they're not bound to become obsolete as new technologies develop," he says. "Their time at Husson University may be the years that they formally dedicate to learning, but we hope that we've provided our students with a platform on which they can continue to excel throughout their careers and their lives."

"When we look at the institution overall, what stands out most is the importance of holistic learning," says Dr. Clark. "Students are only in the classroom for 16 to 20 hours each week, and there are significant opportunities for learning that occur outside of that. We're working to bring student life, athletics, and community involvement into our sphere, helping students to develop their skill sets in both the classroom and the community."

Along with his goals for Husson's students and alumni, Dr. Clark is hoping to establish the university as a vibrant resource for the surrounding community in Bangor. "We want to enhance the quality of life in our region through academic lectures, musical concerts, and other opportunities for enrichment which anyone is welcome to attend," says Dr. Clark. "It's important to make sure that the university is a strong community resource rather than an isolated academic outpost. Close-knit communities are an important value in Maine, and we see Husson University as an integral part of our city and our state."

Remembering Del

Written by Paul Husson

“Everyone has a warm memory of Del,” remarked Rev. Bob Carlson, former Husson chaplain, at President Merrill’s funeral service.

It’s true and for one reason: Delmont Merrill lived a very full life.

Del grew up in Ellsworth and attended schools there. After graduating from Ellsworth High School, he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps where he served in the Pacific Theater with the 5th Marine Division. The infamous landing on the island of Iwo Jima – and the month long battle that came after – is one of the pivotal moments in World War II. Of the 25,000 troops who fought on the island, 18,000 were wounded and 6,981 Marines died. Of the 18 men that served in his squad, only Del and two others survived. This heroism and devotion to country was later chronicled by the filmmakers Stephen Spielberg and Stephen Ambrose in a movie made for the World War II Museum in New Orleans. Though most people never heard Del Merrill talk about his service during the War, he did appear in this moving film to tell the story of this honorable chapter in our history.

When he returned home after his service, he enrolled at Husson College. In 1948, he received a three-year diploma in Business Education and took his first teaching job at Sumner High School in Sullivan, Maine. Five years later, President Chesley Husson asked Del to consider taking a position at Husson College. “He was hesitant to make the move,” said Clara Swan, “and Chief sent me to close the deal. I told Del that it was a wonderful opportunity and that, who knows, he might even become president one day!”

Also during this time, he married and was a devoted husband to his wife of 58 years, Elizabeth – known as “Betty” – and a loving father to Colleen, Linda and Bob.

Thus began his remarkable career at Husson. In 1953, he received the first Bachelor of Science degree awarded at the school. He went on to earn an M.Ed. and a CAS from the University of Maine. Del rose to become a tenured professor and head of the athletic department. He is also remembered as a great coach and a great leader. He was appointed Vice President for Administrative Affairs in 1973 and became president of Husson in 1978.

Del’s career as a coach is legendary. He led Husson teams to a 392-168 record. He then became athletic director and basketball commissioner for the State of Maine and was inducted into several sports halls of fame. Del also served as president of the Wild Blueberry Association of North America, was a well-known community leader, and served his church.

There were some lean years financially during Mr. Merrill's tenure, and some of Maine's post secondary schools, such as Nasson and Ricker, failed. But Del was not going to allow that to happen to Husson. His loyalty, competitiveness and willingness to listen served him well. He looked for every opportunity to help the school succeed. He instituted the nursing program in collaboration with Eastern Maine General Hospital; he started our first master's degree program in business administration; he oversaw the purchase of the New England School of Broadcasting (now NESCom) and the International Center for Language Studies and established the annual holiday party that is beloved by the greater Bangor community.

I would like to share a few of my own memories with you of this wonderful man. In the summer of 1953, when I was 12 years old, Del and I worked together as janitors at commerce hall on the old campus at 157 Park Street. We painted, cleaned, repaired furniture and got to know each other. My pay was 25 cents per hour and I think Del earned a dollar per hour. We shared stories and lots of laughter. He had a way of listening that made you feel special.

In those days, Chief and my mother hosted annual faculty parties at our Green Lake camp. Del always put away prodigious amounts of lobster and clams, and beat all campers at horse shoes. He was a fierce competitor. Bruce MacGregor, long-time Husson faculty member and coach at Husson, recalls intense racquetball and basketball games. "We beat ourselves unmercifully," said MacGregor. "Del always played to win!"

Del had a wonderful sense of humor. Bob O'Donnell, '72, Del's son Bob Merrill, and I shared many fishing and camping trips. The camaraderie and the laughter and the fun were far more important than the fish.

As Clara predicted, Del did become a great president (as Chief knew he would). He was special. Thank you Del for all you did for Husson and all you did for me.

In Memory of President Emeritus Delmont Merrill '47 '54

The Fall 2010 issue of the Husson University Ledger magazine is dedicated to the memory of President Emeritus Delmont Merrill. Paul Husson, Husson Fellow and long-time colleague and friend of Del Merrill, wrote this tribute to honor Del's outstanding service and dedication to the University.

Alumni & Friends,

What a special time to be a part of Husson University. As you can see throughout this issue of the Ledger, there is much to celebrate and even more to look forward to.

As a young professional and fresh graduate of what was then known as Husson College on the “hill”, I had the privilege to work side-by-side with Mr. Chesley Husson as his administrative assistant. I know he would be so proud of what the Institution has become today – a beautiful campus that is filled to the brim with excitement, opportunity, and growth. His dream has truly become a reality.

That’s why I have enthusiastically volunteered to serve as your chair of annual giving in the coming year – to give back to the Institution that holds a very special place in my heart. Together with the help of the newly formed Annual Giving Leadership Committee, the Advancement Staff, and many other volunteers, we will work to make the Husson experience even better and brighter for the University’s students.

We’ll be in touch with you to share how your support, at any amount, translates into what Husson students need the most

“Thanks to the Husson Annual Fund, I’m able to pursue my dream of becoming a college graduate. Husson is holding true to its mission in providing me the tools I need to make a career out of my passion. I simply wouldn’t be able to continue without this aid.”

Remember – in addition to supporting scholarships, a gift to the Husson Annual Fund will upgrade classroom equipment, provide the latest technology, and so much more – all of which has been really important to me and countless other students at Husson. Please use the envelope included in this issue and send in your gift today.”

Your Gifts Make a Difference!

“Husson gave me the keys to unlock many doors in my life. With the skills and knowledge gained with my Husson education, I have navigated the many hurdles encountered in running a small, family owned business. I have many wonderful memories from my time at Husson. I donate my time and money so others can have the same quality education and great Husson memories.”

Donors Making a Difference...

Habitat for Humanity Student Trip

What do you get when you bring together fifteen motivated students, two supportive advisors, and generous donors who are willing to make a difference? For Husson, it means a family in need in St. Joseph, Missouri, has a home.

Jimmy Ouellette '11, a senior nursing student from Milford, Maine, started a club last year to organize students to participate in a Habitat for Humanity trip slated for March of 2010. Organizing the trip would be no easy feat, however. It would require at least 10-15 volunteers, lots of coordination, and donations to help fund the trip.

Over several months, the club worked diligently to raise funds for the trip. They held bottle drives, bake sales and organized a fundraising night through Texas Roadhouse. They called on Husson alumni, local businesses, family, and friends to support their trip, and they gave generously. Darlings donated all the mileage for their rental vans, which amounted to roughly $1,000 in savings.

"The experience was incredible," says Jimmy. "Even though it rained most of our trip, and we even had to clear standing water from the foundation and deal with a lot of delays, we were able to get half the roof built. We gained an understanding of what Habitat for Humanity does and how it helps people, and that's something we won't forget."

After long days of work on the house, Habitat for Humanity sponsored activities for the group. They had a pizza and ice cream night, went to the movies, and even visited an indoor waterpark. "We went on the trip as fellow Husson students, but we came back as friends. It was fun to get to know each other and we really bonded."

Plans are in the works for the 2011 Habitat for Humanity trip. The group has its sights set on New York, where they will be just an hour outside the City, providing access to a culture many of the students would not otherwise have an opportunity to experience.

Jimmy and the Habitat for Humanity Club sincerely thank all of the donors that made the trip possible. "Without donations, we simply wouldn't have been able to go. It truly made my Husson experience that much better. I honestly wish I didn't have to graduate so I could keep doing this!"

AROUND THE CIRCLE

To meet the needs of a growing Institution, Husson has hired many new faculty and staff members committed to fulfilling its mission of providing quality education that leads to professional careers. For extended bios on each of our new faculty and staff members, please visit our website directory at www.husson.edu. To read about new staff in the Athletic Department, please see the Athletics article included in this issue.

Thomas A. Martz has joined Husson University as vice president for advancement. Previously serving as president and CEO of the Indiana University Alumni Association, Tom is an entrepreneurial executive with more than 30 years of experience in university institutional advancement areas.

Teresa Steele has been named a Husson fellow. Dr. Steele began her career at Husson in 1985 as an associate professor in the fledgling Nursing program and went on to become dean of the Husson University School of Health from 2001-2010.

Mike Mullane has begun his new role as dean of graduate studies.

Before joining Husson, Dr. Mullane served as a professor of Law and director of the University of Arkansas School of Law.

Kristen Card has joined Husson as the University's first director of graduate admissions. Kristen was previously employed at Hebrew College in Massachusetts as their director of enrollment management.

Jamie Ballinger has been named the associate director of graduate admissions. Her specialty is in creating meaningful academic and social experiences for mid-career professionals re-entering higher education, and she works one-on-one with graduate students to create an academic plan that fits their professional and personal goals.

James Westoff has been hired as Husson's first director of career services. Please see the extended article regarding his services to alumni and students, see article on page 18.

Professor Emeritus, Dr. Phil Grant had a paper titled "How the Declining Marginal Utility of Rewards Accentuates MR-MC Divergence at Profit Optimization", accepted by the National Business and Economics Society for presentation and publication. He has had a second paper, titled "The Impact of Job Design and Ability on Employee Motivation", accepted for publication in the Journal of Leadership, Accountability, and Ethics. Both articles represent Dr. Grant's continuing efforts to advance theory at the microeconomics-organizational behavior interface.

COLLEGE OF HEALTH & EDUCATION

Dr. Barbara Higgins has begun her new role as the dean of the College of Health and Education. Dr. Higgins was involved in the development of both the BSN and the FNP programs and served as the chair of Nursing from 2005 until assuming the dean's role. In addition to her administrative role, she maintains a limited women's health clinical practice as owner/provider at Summit Women's Center in Bangor.

Dr. Laurie Mouradian is the new director of Occupational Therapy. Dr. Mouradian is completing her responsibilities as a clinical researcher for Pediatrics at College of Medicine, University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center.

Chrystal Adams is the new director of the Family Nurse Practitioner program. Ms. Adams has most recently been the staff director of research at Northeast Cardiology Associates in Bangor.

Cindy Connelley will be returning to her position as assistant professor of Physical Education and Health.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS

Dr. Ronald Nykiel has been named the dean of the School of Business. For more information about his appointment, please see his article on page 19.

Marie Hansen has moved from associate dean of Legal Studies to her new role as associate dean of the School of Business. She began working at Husson in 2003 where she has delivered a variety of classes in over 22 topics ranging from introductory courses through graduate level.

Dr. Thomas W. Hutchison has come on board as a professor of Business. Dr. Hutchinson has a Ph.D. from Florida State University in Marketing Mass Communication and has most

Gail Tudor, Ph.D., Husson's New Director of Institutional Research

In today's economy, students are looking for the highest return on their education dollar and the information that can help them choose the right school. Enter the value and evidence-based bragging rights provided by Gail Tudor, Husson's new director of institutional research.

"Now it's all about assessment and demonstrating Husson's effectiveness in teaching students and preparing them for the real world," explained Dr. Tudor. "The demand for accreditation reports, written reviews, and tangible results is becoming more intense."

The new director of institutional research position at Husson enables Dr. Tudor to concentrate on collecting, analyzing and reporting data - responsibilities previously spread out among various staff and faculty job descriptions. Dr. Tudor's expertise and personality are well-suited for the work ahead; before coming to Husson in 2005, Gail spent six years at the University of North Carolina's (UNC) Department of Biostatistics. Prior to UNC, Dr. Tudor worked as teacher and consultant at the Duke Clinical Research Institute.

"Husson is a great fit for my professional experience and my personality," offered Dr. Tudor. "I'm thrilled that I can work with both data and students, creating real-world experiential learning opportunities through research."

recently served as coordinator of marketing at Middle Tennessee State University.

Tom Collins has accepted the position as assistant professor of Sports Management. He is completing his doctoral program at North Carolina State University and most recently served at Western Carolina University as a sports management instructor.

SCHOOL OF SCIENCE & HUMANITIES

Dr. Stephanie Gross has accepted the position of associate dean of Science & Humanities.

With a Ph.D. in English from the University of Oklahoma, where Stephanie taught for fifteen years before coming to Maine, Stephanie teaches writing and literature courses, specializing in women's literature, American literature, and theory.

Dr. Christopher R. Howard earned his Ph.D. in Experimental Psychology from Auburn University and will serve as Husson's assistant professor of Psychology.

Paul Kinlaw is a Ph.D. candidate at Dartmouth College and has accepted a position as our assistant professor of Mathematics.

Dr. Julia T. Upton will serve as an assistant professor of Mathematics at Husson. She has most recently been a lecturer at Western Carolina University.

Clint Spaulding has accepted a one year position in English.

SCHOOL OF PHARMACY

In the Basic Pharmaceutical Sciences Department, Dr. Aaron Domina is now a full-time faculty member in the School of Pharmacy.

Within the Pharmacy Practice Department, Dr. Ronald Reed has been hired as the new chair of the Pharmacy Practice. He has 30 years of experience in the profession as a clinical faculty member at the University of Toledo, a faculty member at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine, and most recently as an associate scientific director of Neuroscience at Abbott Laboratories.

Dr. Daniel Robinson has joined Husson University. He was previously a professor emeritus from the University of Florida College of Pharmacy.

Dr. Dmitri Cohen joined Husson in August. He has just finished his practice residency at the Brookdale University Hospital and Medical Center in Brooklyn, NY.

Dr. Bethany Lessard has joined our Pharmacy Practice faculty. She has just completed her post-graduate residency at Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates and she earned her Pharm.D. degree at Northeastern University.

Gretchen Schaefer, M.Ed., Instructional Technologist

The faculty applauded President Clark's announcement this spring that Husson would dedicate a full-time position to integrating technology into teaching. In June, Gretchen Schaefer's role as Instructional Technologist shifted from part of her job description to her only job description, filled with opportunity.

"When I first started at Husson, there were challenges in the infrastructure such as no wireless access and LCDs that were often cumbersome to use. That has since changed, which allows faculty to use our classroom technology with greater ease," explained Gretchen. "In four short years, we've moved to having wireless access across the campus, and installed push-button controls in every classroom for the technology resources we've added."

Gretchen's full-time position enables her to stay up-to-date with the newest technology and help the faculty make best use of technology in the classrooms. "There is a wide range of comfort and familiarity with technology among our faculty members," said Gretchen. "My job is to meet the needs of my diverse learners - the faculty."

The instructional technologist's expertise was most recently put to work with a faculty member who wanted to expand her online course. "I set her up with a collaborative workspace online by creating a wiki for the class," Gretchen explained. The new wiki website allows both students and their professor to create, edit and converse online, outside of the traditional classroom setting.

Gretchen looks forward to expanding professional development opportunities for Husson faculty and returning to the classroom to teach "Technology in Education" to undergraduates this fall. To learn more about Gretchen and the role of Husson's Instructional Technologist, visit <http://www.facebook.com/HussonTech>

School of Pharmacy One Step Closer to Full Accreditation with Candidate Status

The Husson University School of Pharmacy has passed the midpoint on its way to full accreditation by the Accreditation Council on Pharmacy Education (ACPE). After a site visit in the spring, the School of Pharmacy was awarded candidate status at the June 2010 ACPE Board of Directors meeting.

"Candidate status should provide a sense of security for our current students, confirming that they will graduate from a program of quality," explained Rod Larson, Ph.D., R.Ph., founding dean and professor. Larson hopes that, for faculty, staff and alumni, the recent accreditation news "helps bring the Husson University reputation to a new level in the state and beyond."

Already the new School of Pharmacy has exceeded expectations. The first year the school was open to applications, Larson reports "we started with 155 applicants. This last cycle, we received 645 applications."

Husson's School of Pharmacy was created to address the increasing demand for pharmacists in Maine, especially in our most rural areas. Prior to the creation of Husson's program, "students had to

Connecting Students and Alumni through Career Services

There was little to no fanfare on June 2 as the new Career Services Office opened its doors to students and alumni of Husson University.

However, the excitement around this new department – and the potential value for both students and alumni – is genuine. James Westhoff, the new director of career services, has created numerous online resources as well as an extensive library of tip sheets and printed materials in less than six months at Husson University. Add James' fourteen years of career counseling to those resources, and you have the remarkable start-up of a new opportunity.

“Career counseling is a critical piece in educating students – for the students who know exactly what they want to do when they graduate, and the students who have no idea what the next step might be for them,” explained James. “Career Services can provide the nuts and bolts of getting connected and conducting a systematic job search, or start from the beginning with guidance and career choices.”

For alumni, Career Services will offer the same nuts and bolts and connections. In the summer months alone, James helped a dozen or more alumni. Most recently, he conducted an on-campus mock interview with an alumna, followed by a phone conversation with an alumnus from outside the region. James' counseling time now focuses on the students attending classes this semester, with drop-in hours and personalized attention to each visitor.

For alumni, Career Services will offer the same nuts and bolts and connections.

“Despite the economic downturn, jobs are going unfilled for six months or more,” explained James. “Employers are looking for analytical skills, work ethic, people skills, and basic computer skills – and they aren't finding them as easily in today's workforce.” James sees part of his role as educating students and alumni about the top ten skills employers are looking for, and helping to link people to open doors.

“Finding a job – and your passion – is about connections and networking,” and James emphasizes experiential learning as a critical element in creating those connections. He envisions an online mentor database that links students to alumni willing to be an information source and guide through the maze of career options.

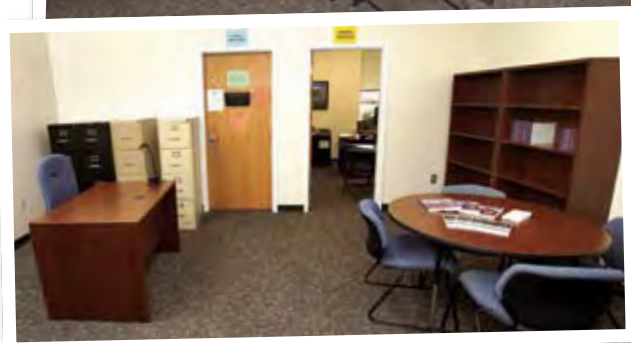

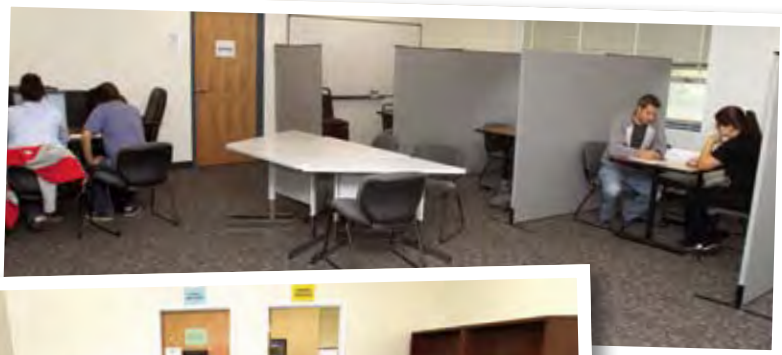

“Alumni can post internships and job opportunities with just one click,” explained James, inviting alumni and students to register with Husson's online job and employer database, Eagle Career Link. James' work on the online database of job postings has just begun, and he sees immense potential for this resource.

“I envision having thousands of job postings and employers available to a clientele of three thousand or more Husson students,” explained James. “When we add alumni to that mix, the possible connections are unlimited.”

James is also responsible for staying connected to current trends and marketplace demands. His recent conversation with one of southern Maine's larger employers, UNUM, illustrated the next big trend: the aging of the American workforce.

“The UNUM Information Technology Division employs nine hundred people, and twenty to thirty percent of those employees will retire by 2015,” James explained. “The federal government will lose up to forty percent of their employees to retirement in the coming years. Even though people are staying longer in jobs because of the economy, there are many opportunities for the right skills.”

Want to stay connected? To learn more about Career Services offerings, and to register for the Eagle Career Link network, please visit www.husson.edu/careerservices.

Husson Welcomes New Dean of the School of Business: Ronald A. Nykiel, Ph.D., CHA, CHE

Ron Nykiel claims to have found paradise. The new dean of the School of Business discovered a simple recipe for happiness: “I’ve found paradise in doing what I’m doing for work, living where we are living, and married to one of the happiest people I have ever met.”

The journey has taken more than three decades, with a detour or two along the way. Dr. Nykiel first visited Maine during his tenure at the University System of New Hampshire, where he served as the vice chancellor for financial affairs and treasurer of the board. Since that first visit to Kennebunkport, “Maine has been the constant in my life, more than anywhere I have traveled.”

Dr. Nykiel’s career in business and academics has taken him to fifty states and countless international destinations. His professional accomplishments include managerial and executive experience with IBM, Xerox and Marriott Corporation, among other household names. Dr. Nykiel’s academic credentials are no less impressive, including, most recently, the Conrad N. Hilton Distinguished Chair at the University of Houston.

His expertise in revitalizing brands is already apparent in Dr. Nykiel’s approach to the dean’s role. “I like to build things, and it’s time for a new vision, building on the traditions and assets of the School of Business,” explained Dr. Nykiel. “What I have learned from alumni is that Husson has a great reputation; we produce graduates prepared for the real world with a balance of academic and experiential learning.”

Dr. Nykiel’s approach is both local and global, encompassing emerging opportunities in Maine as well as on an international level. “We’re putting together a vision that looks at sixty years in business and education, and addresses rapid changes in market demands.”

For example, in the near future, all

School of Business undergraduates will be required to pass two semesters of a foreign language. “If that student’s intentions are to stay in Maine, perhaps he or she studies French. If that student has aspirations to work for a multinational organization, I’m proud to say we will offer Mandarin in addition to Spanish.”

On a more local level, “we’re looking at the curriculum in an exciting way. We are building on excellent faculty and degree programs to include those areas of study that drive the Maine economy.” Dr. Nykiel’s immediate plans call for a School of Tourism and Hospitality, where Husson “has the opportunity to emerge as a leader in that field in our state.”

The new vision for local impact also includes offering concentrations in real estate, entrepreneurship, franchising and insurance. Long-term, Dr. Nykiel would like the School of Business to put its reputation and expertise to work within a doctoral program.

The excitement is genuine, and the passion for his new job is sincere. Dr. Nykiel’s high-energy, creative approach to the Dean’s position translates into years of work ahead.

“I’m not going anywhere; I’m the happiest person I know.”

go out of state for pharmacy education,” explained Larson. “Once those students spent four or six years outside of Maine, it was difficult to attract qualified pharmacy graduates back to rural Maine.”

The new School of Pharmacy graduates will help relieve the pressure on pharmacists now practicing in Maine and “provide a higher level of pharmaceutical care to patients,” Larson said. “Pharmacy is moving toward more patient counseling and drug therapy monitoring, working with physicians and other healthcare professionals to manage the patient’s needs in order to maximize the benefits of their therapy.”

Provost Lynne Coy-Ogan adds, “we are very proud of the outstanding pharmacy program that has been developed and pleased with the caliber of faculty and students we have been able to attract to this program.”

The remaining steps toward full accreditation include graduating a first class of students in spring of 2013 and another site visit and evaluation that same semester. For the latest accreditation news, visit <http://www.husson.edu/pharmacy>.

EAGLES WALK TO PREVENT SUICIDE

In honor of their fallen teammate, Kyle Dwyer, the Husson University men's lacrosse team participated in the "Walk to Prevent Suicide: Out of the Darkness" on September 26. As a team, the Eagles walked with thousands of people nationwide to raise money for suicide prevention and increase awareness about depression and suicide.

In a nation where a person dies by suicide every 16 minutes, the Eagles know firsthand what it is like to lose one of their own. As a team, they raised more than $350 for the American Foundation for Suicide.

outfit all fourteen of Husson's varsity sports for clothing and footwear. The Athletic Department will also partner with Wight's Sporting Goods for the retail portion of the agreement.

"Our athletic department is pleased with this deal with New Balance and Wight's Sporting Goods," said Reasso. "We are looking forward to this being a long and prosperous relationship for everyone involved."

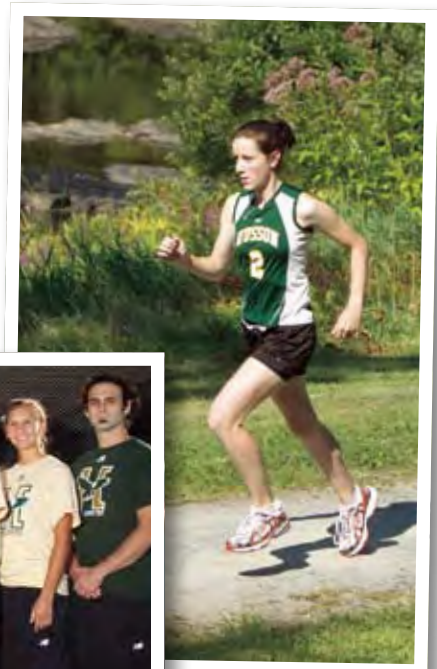

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY OFF TO HISTORIC START

Early in their inaugural year, the women's cross country program is enjoying much success. The team earned a first place finish at the UMaine

Presque Isle Invitational. Angela Stauble placed first in the Eagles' first three meets of the season (Presque Isle Invitational, University of New England Invitational, UMaine Farmington Invitational). Just a year ago, Stauble organized Husson's running club and was pivotal in sparking interest in a varsity cross country program at Husson.

HUSSON HOLDS FIRST GOLF OUTING

Husson University Athletics hosted their first athletic golf outing on Monday, August 30, at the Penobscot Valley Country Club in support of the University's athletic department. More than one hundred golfers participated and the outing was a tremendous.

ATHLETICS

"I want to thank Tricia Quirk- Hampden Home Builders for being our title sponsor," stated A.D. Bob Reasso "and all our corporate partners for their gracious support. Special thanks also to the staff at PVCC for allowing us to use their beautiful country club. This was a great way to kick off the athletic year and we look forward to the outing becoming an annual event."

MEET BOB REASSO HUSSON'S NEW ATHLETIC DIRECTOR

Husson University president Robert Clark announced the appointment of Bob Reasso as the new director of athletics, effective July 1. In making the appointment President Clark noted that, "Bob has a tremendous amount of energy and enthusiasm for Division III athletics. His extensive experience and professionalism are the hallmarks of a strong mentor to students. I know he will continue to work hard to support our student athletes in the seasons ahead." Former AD Cindy Connelley has returned to the School of Education to teach full time.

Prior to coming to Husson he served as the Head Men's Soccer Coach at Rutgers University, achieving 13 NCAA Tournament appearances, three Final Four Tournaments and six conference titles. Early in his career, Reasso was also the executive director of the Touchdown Club, assistant director of the Scarlet R Club, and assistant director of marketing and promotions. Also, he coached the New Jersey Special Olympics Soccer Team in two world games.

"I want to thank President Clark for this wonderful opportunity", said Reasso. "I have found this to be a wonderful, enlightened, and vibrant community both academically as well as athletically. We have outstanding student-athletes, a dynamic coaching staff, and my job will be to give them the tools to continue to build on the foundation of their successes.

He holds a Masters of Education from Springfield College and an undergraduate degree from Pfeiffer University in North Carolina. Reasso and his wife Michelle live in Bangor with their daughter Danielle and son Bobby.

Managing to Change the Way We Light Our World

Meet Brenda Castonguay '75 Vice President of Administration at Cree, Inc.

It's no surprise that a high-energy, focused woman ends up working with the market leader in LED power and lighting. Brenda Castonguay '75 always knew she wanted to be a businesswoman and "make my mark." Most would agree that Brenda has accomplished just that, building a noteworthy career in the demanding, international energy industry.

Brenda is Cree, Inc.'s Vice President of Administration, a title that brings numerous responsibilities within the global company. Her oversight of human resources, facilities, employee health and safety, and a three-million-dollar travel management budget "keeps the learning process going" for an administrator whose company has more employees in China than the United States.

"I'm always learning about new cultures and how those cultures change the way we hire and motivate employees," said Brenda. "Part of my job is to increase the local effectiveness of our programs by differentiating between cultures." Brenda is certainly capable of meeting that challenge, with a career that includes being recognized as one of the Triangle's Top 25 Key Women and one of the 50 Key Women in Energy.

Brenda's career in management began immediately out of college, with a jump from Bangor, Maine to Stanford, Connecticut. Brenda gives credit to Husson's reputation for gaining a head start on her professional goals. "Husson was the only school in Maine they recruited from, and I had the minimum qualifications. It was Husson's reputation in the marketplace that landed that first job."

That same reputation played a major role in Brenda's decision to attend Husson; "I would make the same decision today. The smaller college setting was perfect for me and helped to develop me as a better student and a better human being."

Among Brenda's favorite memories of Husson, Dr. Phil Grant comes to mind. "He was not just about getting the grade; Dr. Grant taught me and inspired me to rethink business decision-making," said Brenda. "I'm not sure I thanked him enough for how he prepared me for the real business world."

Another favorite Husson memory illustrates Brenda's knack for taking advantage of all that Husson had to offer - something she encourages current and prospective students to consider. "It was a privilege for me to be selected to represent Husson and the State of Maine in the first 'College Girl of the Year' program in Washington, DC. It was the first time that I travelled to the capital, and meeting other state candidates from colleges and universities around the country was a fascinating experience!"

Brenda's Husson experience is also credited for a major milestone in her personal life: meeting her husband of 34 years, Bill Castonguay '76. "He is by far the best thing that ever happened to me, so I owe Husson a great debt for that!"

What's next for this high-energy alumna? "I'm fortunate to be part of the team that is on the front-end wave of technology that will change the world," stated Brenda. "Our grandchildren won't know what an incandescent bulb is! It's so much fun to work for an entrepreneurial company like Cree."

It was Husson's reputation in the marketplace that landed that first job.

May 2010 Commencement

Husson held its 111th Commencement Ceremonies on May 15th, 2010 in Bangor. More than 330 undergraduate degrees, 125 master's degrees, 52 doctor of physical therapy degrees and 2 honorary doctorates were awarded. Graduates represented 150 Maine towns, 15 states and 8 countries.

A new tradition was started the evening prior to Commencement with Husson's first Hooding Ceremony. Students receiving masters and doctoral degrees were formally hooded in front of a crowd of their family, friends, and fellow graduates.

Honorary Degrees

Deborah Carey Johnson received her Master of Science in Business from Husson University in 1987. As the Chief Executive of Eastern Maine Medical Center she leads a 411-bed regional referral hospital with a $580 million operating budget, 3,600 employees, and 380 active medical staff members serving 70% of Maine's land mass and 40% of its residents. She is responsible for establishing the mission, vision and strategic direction for the Medical Center consistent with the mission, vision and strategic plan of the system. Deborah Carey Johnson was awarded an honorary Doctorate of Public Service.

Dr. Philip Grant has been a member of the Husson University Faculty since 1968. During his tenure at Husson, he has been a prolific scholar. He has written and published 10 management books and over 165 academic/professional articles. In the last two years he has authored an innovative, pioneering work, The Mathematics of Human Motivation. Dr. Philip Grant was awarded an honorary Doctorate of Business Administration.

The Commencement Ceremony for Husson's South Portland campus was held on May 22nd. 70 undergraduates and 12 graduate degrees were awarded at Woodfords Congregational Church in Portland.

George J Lambert '66 $\text{K}\Delta\Phi$ continues to pursue his post-retirement career-writing. His first book, a documentary entitled Brothers and Heroes: A Chronicle of Military Service of Six Americans, recounted the experiences of his older brothers and was published in 2008 by Publish America LLP of Baltimore, Md. His latest books in 2010 represent quite a departure from that initial publication: both are children's books. "I am particularly pleased with 8 Boys and 8 Beasts, a whimsical tale of 8 unique boys with their 8 unique pets, since it represents collaboration with my daughter Celeste, an artist, who did the artwork." In Maine Woods and Waters features wonderful photographs from amateur and professional sources alike of species native to Maine. Young children can enjoy the photos and simple text and as they get older they can read more about the featured animals and fish in the glossary at the back of the book.

George has numerous other works in process including more documentaries and books for children as well as novels.

Fred Guilmette '68 $\text{K}\Delta\Phi$ sent the following note: "I miss auditing, but the time flies when you are self employed. to the Husson campus: "We (Don, Cheryl and I) had such a wonderful time. Deandra, Kari and Amanda were so wonderful and gracious. We had the best time. I am so impressed at what has transpired at Husson. The food at the Dickerman Dinning Commons was the best, just as I had remembered it. I often hated to go home because I liked the food. lol. I loved telling them what it was like when we were there. I think that the highlight of my day there was to walk down the hallway on the floor where I lived in Hart Hall. My day couldn't have been any better. Again, thanks. It was also nice to meet Janet in the bookstore where I had purchased some Husson hats for my friends. This trip has meant so much to me. I will not forget it."

Kathleen Tauer '04 sent the following note: "At the age of 55 I completed my life-long goal of earning my bachelor's degree in business at Husson. While working on my degree I became disabled but was still determined to complete the program, and I did! I also managed to earn high honors while taking classes and working at Cary Medical Center 3-4 nights a week. I learned a great deal on my journey for my degree about working hard every day, but I don't regret a single one of them. One of my major support people during this time of my life was Carolyn Dorsey-Durepo '91, '95, '01 from the Caribou site. Since my time at Husson, I have retired and 4 years ago we moved to Surprise, Arizona in search of warmer weather. Surprise is a cool name for a place, but we definitely found our warm weather; last week the temperature was 102 degrees. We live ten miles from Phoenix, and only a few hours from Las Vegas, California, and New Mexico so we don't have to go very far to get away. We sometimes miss the beauty of Maine as grass and maple trees are rare here. When we miss the snow, we can go to Flagstaff or the beautiful mountains. I try to stay busy volunteering one day a week at a stained glass business. Thankfully our son still lives in Caribou with his family so we still have a strong tie with the area. I'd like to end by saluting Husson for their continued success and for nurturing so many students both young and old!"
