HUSSON '70 '71

by
Dylan Sean

Husson welcomes all new and old students to its campus. This year the keynote sounds like it will be involvement. That is students, faculty, and administration all working together, something all of us can dig. This is really something because the mood on the national campus scene seems to be a bit reactionary.

Let us turn for a moment, and ask ourselves a few questions. Were the college students justified last year in making their campuses a scene of destruction, blood, and even death? Were the authorities justified in taking the actions that they did? Could some of the problems been ironed out before violence broke out? Is the college movement heading in the right direction? And will we have a reoccurance of violence this year? These questions are all generalized, related and unrelated. They cannot be answered in a yes or no or a right or wrong, but we all have opinions on them.

With opinions comes a decision, will we use our knowledge of the problem and our solution or will we just keep it to ourselves? If we just sit on it, nothing will happen. If we try to do something we may get a change. At this time in our lives and this time in history we have to make the decision. If the American College Campus is heading into an era or repression, whether it be from government, administration, or middle America, we must make sure it is short or nonexistant. The campus must be involved in the community and visa versa.

Remember Husson is a college, you are college students, and although we are small, we are part of the American Campus Scene, so let us get involved, not only in campus matters, but in the community also.

As the summer of 1970 drew to a close, once again Husson College opened its doors to college students. This year, with an enrollment a bit less than last year. Even with this handicap, the student body seems to be bubbling over with enthusiasm There seems to be a different mood here.

Maybe this mood is due to our new president, maybe this year the students be all together, or maybe Husson is at the dawn of a new age. Whatever it is, it looks good and may we all hope it will last.

If this change has come about the media on campus will be more important than in previous years. This is the second year for the Spectator and the staff expect great strides to be made. They cannot without you, as students, pitching in and helping us. We need opinions, news, grips, ads (personal) and thoughts on how the paper can be improved. Without this we will become second rate and good for nothing but wrapping fish in.

You, as people, make the news, we don't, so let us know what's going on. The newspaper office is located in the basement of Bell Dorm and there is usually someone there in the daytime. So stop in and see us and lets find out what's going on.

PEACE

Haverford, Pa.-(IP)-A center for teaching studying, and using nonviolent means to resolve conflict has been started at Haverford College.

Created primarily as an educational facility for students, the new Center for Nonviolent Conflict Resolution also plans a series of pioneering research investigations into nonviolence; and it has started an action program designed to use nonviolent means to help solve local community problems.

FIRE

In the early hours of a morning fire blazed through a portion of Hart Dorm. Due to quick action on the part of procters, security guards, and students the fire was limited. The cost to the school came to over $400.

A fire at any time is dangerous but, this one wasn' accidential, it was intential.

Our dorms were built to contain fires, we have fire equipment to fight fire, and we have people (procters) trained to get students to safety. At the time of this fire the dorm contained a number of freshmen enjoying their first days on our campus, not knowing anything about what to do in case of fire. Due to co-operation we had nothing more than a few students with watery eyes due to the smoke, we were very lucky. If this occurance happens again, the school may not be so lucky. An act such as this is out of the realm of being a joke because people's lives and property are at stakes. The administration has made it very clear that the people involved in an act such as this, will be dealt with as severely as possible.

FRESHMEN CARS

The school policy concerning autos on campus has now been enlarged to include freshmen as well as upper classmen. Any freshmen interested in having a car on campus can obtain a permit through Mr. More's office located in the basement floor across from the mail room You must show your registration and a copy of your insurance. The cost will be one dollar.

WARNING

Federal Narcs use Dangerous Pesticides on Midwest Marijuana Crop.

Washington - (CPS)-The next load of marijuana from the midwest may contain a pesticide which a government commission recommended "should be immediately restricted to prevent risk of human exposure" because it is possible the pesticide causes birth defects.

The pesticide being used is 2, 4-D. When sprayed on Marijuana, the 2, 4-D will cause the dope to turn brown and shivel, probably within four days to a week. This means it would be entirely possible that the marijuana could be picked and smoked after spraying but before the effects showed. Since marijuana is generally purchased in small bags in crushed form, it is possible that the purchaser would not be able to tell if the dope had been sprayed even after it had browned.

This checmical has been tested only on pregnant animals, therefore, the danger may lie only in a large amount of the substance being consumed by a female quick with child.

EDITOR'S NOTE

We on the staff dig relaxing as much as you, so please excuse the size and quality of this first issue. The dust is off the printing press now, and we promise a larger more in depth paper starting next issue.
