Homecoming '85 Plays to Rave Reviews

Largest crowd ever feasts at annual luncheon

Large crowds, emotional testimonials, happy reunions, and wonderful entertainment highlighted this year's alumni Homecoming '85 on October 18 and 19. From the wine and cheese party on Friday evening till the last guest departed after the Black Eagle Jazz Band concert on Saturday night, Homecoming '85 got rave reviews from all who attended.

Many Maine School of Commerce graduates who had never before seen the new campus which was built in 1968 were in attendance, thanks to Hale G. Joy '41, who made a special appeal to see his friends from the 40s at Homecoming '85. Altogether, about 70 alumni of the 1940s got together to laugh and reminisce during the two day celebration.

Friday evening began with more than 100 alumni and friends feasting on wine and cheese and those big, delicious Maine shrimp before heading off to the David Mallett concert. David's brother Neil '68 joined him on stage for a song they used to sing together as kids. Those of you who remember the talent shows of the late '60s may remember David as the red-haired twelve-year old Neil brought to Husson to play guitar with him.

While many alumni enjoyed the David Mallett concert (he played to a crowd of 380), "The Odd Couple" was being performed to a capacity crowd in Kominsky Auditorium by the Husson Players.

Saturday morning started off with several concurrent events. While some alumni were receiving an accounting software update, others were meeting their old coaches at a special reception prior to the Sports Hall of Fame induction. Past and present coaches in attendance included Phil Harris, Janet Kinney, "Red" Wilson, Del Merrill, Keith Mahaney, Clara Swan, Bruce MacGregor and Mark Franchi.

At the Sports Hall of Fame induction, both laughter and tears were evident as coaches and players from the 1930s to the 1970s were honored for their contributions to the athletic traditions of Husson College. Inducted were Colby Wood '34, Marion Hayes Cheney '35, Clara L. Swan '33, Douglas Harrington '48, Del Merrill '54, Amy Oxley Lindsay '59, Barbara Briggs Higgins '54, Jack Scott '63, Harry Greenfield '66, John Sinclair '70, Stacey DeCastro '74, Linda Deveau '77, Sue Skinner '76, and Dana Wilson '74.

Chesley H. "Chief" Husson was inducted posthumously. His award was accepted by his son Paul, who is now director for admissions.

Also during the morning, Mrs. Louise B. Miller autographed copies of her new book, Husson College: A History, and two more seminars attracted big crowds: "Get it Together with Color!" by Tilly Atkins, and "Don't Throw it Away!", a primer on what you have today that may be a valuable antique tomorrow, by Bob Croul.

The annual awards luncheon was the day's highlight. While the children of several alumni were cared for and entertained by the Delta Sigma Delta sorority sisters, 179 alumni were served a delicious steak luncheon by Dick Kitchen's outstanding food service staff.

After lunch, this year's awards were given to several alumni and friends. Bob '62 and Jane '61 Goodwin together received this year's Service Award as employees of the College who put forth special dedication to the students of Husson College each year. Bob is director of data processing and Jane is office manager for admissions.

Shirley K. Richard '55 presented a special honorary award for business teacher education to Maine's commissioner of Educational and Cultural Services Robert E. Boose. Originally a business skills teacher for deaf students, Commissioner Boose was superintendent of schools for Mercer County, Pennsylvania before taking up his post as Maine's educational leader, where he has made a significant contribution since he arrived in 1983.

Husson Tops Area With 14% Frosh Enrollment Increase

Husson College in Bangor welcomed 287 new students on Saturday, September 7, as the 1985-86 academic year began. Incoming students and their parents spent the day touring the campus, meeting with staff and faculty and attending seminars.

Husson College is the only college in the area to show a significant increase in freshmen enrollment figures with a 14 percent increase over 1984 enrollment.

During the orientation program, students and parents met with faculty members from business administration, accounting, nursing, business teacher education, office administration, medical assisting and the ACHIEVE program. Following a seminar on strengthening academic skills, orientation guests attended a reception and a banquet hosted by President Delmont N. Merrill in Dickerman Dining Commons.

Significant gains were also made in the College's other programs. The graduate program, under Dean Robert Smith, saw enrollment at the Bangor campus rise from 83 in 1984 to 112 this fall. In Portland, 59 graduate students are registered, compared to last year's 29.

The Continuing Education Division's seven sites around Maine showed a total enrollment increase from 700 to 810.

At Husson South in Portland, 96 students attend classes on Saturday, and 38 are working to complete bachelor's degrees during the week.

Kominsky Elected Chairman of the Board

Norman S. Kominsky has been elected the new chairman of the Husson College Board of Trustees. A member of the board since 1977, Kominsky is the executive vice president of Eastland Woolen Mills in Corinna and general manager of Striar Textile Mill in Orono.

Kominsky has a bachelor of science dgree in business administration from Boston University and an MBA from Harvard Business School. A Bangor native, Kominsky was the vice chairman of the board since 1984. He has been active on the student affairs committee and several ad hoc committees, as well as the board's executive committee.

He is a past director of Depositor's Trust of Eastern Maine, the Jewish Community Council, and the Maine Municipal Bond Board. The executive committee of the Maine Council on Economic Education and chairmanships of the Wool Council and the Northern Textile Association have also kept him busy.

Also at the board's annual meeting, seven trustees were re-elected for three year terms, and Arthur E. McKenzie '48 was elected to the board.

Margaret Zoldi, CPA became the faculty representative to the board and Douglas Mehne will represent the students.

You are Cordially Invited . . .

If you are going to be in the Bangor area, you are invited to visit the Husson campus. You may tour the College campus, attend a sporting event or stay for a complimentary dinner with the students in Dickerman Dining Commons. Husson College invites you to take this opportunity to visit your alma mater, reminisce with professors and meet the Husson students of today.

More than 500 Bangor area residents had their blood pressure checked by the Husson/Eastern Maine Medical Center students on October 24. The students provided the service at four locations: Doug's Shop 'n Save in Bangor, Shop 'n Save in Brewer, the Bangor Public Library, and on the Husson campus.

Husson, NMVTI Sign Agreement

In a welcome sign of cooperation between a private college and a public educational institution, Husson College in Bangor and Northern Maine Vocational Technical Institute in Presque Isle have entered into a formal transfer credit policy agreement for students.

The agreement outlines exactly which college credits a student coming from any NMVTI associate degree program may transfer into a Husson bachelor's degree program. For example, an NMVTI student receiving an associate degree in accounting will be able to go directly into the third year of the Husson bachelor's degree accounting program, without needing to take additional courses which could prolong the students' graduation date by a semester or more.

"This formalizes a many-year excellent relationship between Husson and NMVTI," said James Patterson, director of NMVTI. "The two years of technical training at Northern Maine, plus two years at Husson, create an exceptional candidate for employment in business administration, accounting, nursing, secretarial science and business teacher education."

"It is a rare relationship when one considers we are a private institution and a public institution joining in a very workable manner," Patterson said.

Although the transfer credit policy agreement is now becoming a formal policy, many NMVTI students have taken advantage of the informal agreement that has been in effect for many years.

"The raw talent comes to us from NMVTI, and we're able to increase its marketability," said Thomas Largay, accounting department head at Husson. "The NMVTI students have an excellent accounting curriculum five days a week and a strong, dedicated faculty."

At Husson, the students take the liberal arts courses which round out their education, in addition to more accounting classes.

"Very, very few have problems adjusting at Husson," Largay said. "We provide the same kind of caring, individualized instruction they're used to, not mass lectures with 300 students."

The advantages are many for both schools. NMVTI students are able to obtain their first two years of schooling, those often spent deciding on a career objective, close to home. Then, when the student has made the decision to enter a specific field, he or she has the determination to make the most of the two years at Husson.

"The success of those students who have come from NMVTI has been outstanding," said Delmont N. Merrill, president of Husson. "Many have gone on to find tremendously successful careers, including Rod Hotham, now our chief financial officer here at Husson."

"We are extremely pleased with this agreement, which ties the two institutions of higher learning together," Merrill said.

"It is a rare relationship when one considers we are a private institution and a public institution joining in a very workable manner."

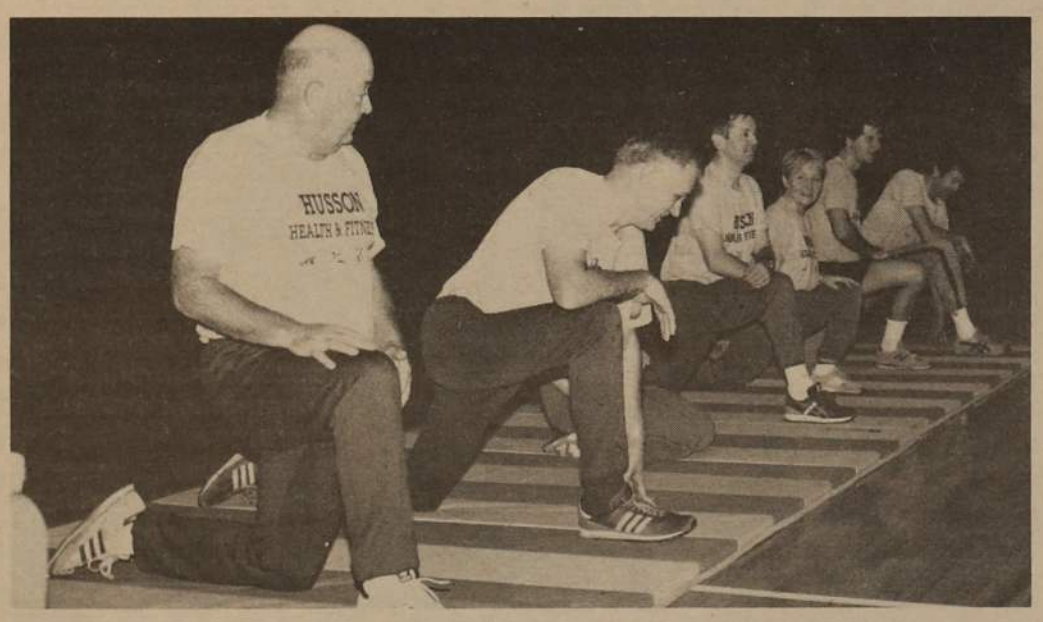

James Patterson, Director of NMVTI

Early Morning Fitness Program

Instructor Debbie Goldsmith

Bangor area residents who used to exercise at UMO before the Human Performance Center closed its doors now meet from 6 to 7 a.m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at Newman Gymnasium at Husson. This 15-week session's class has 26 participants, including Husson trustee John Bragg and office administration instructor Ann Turner.

Debbie Goldsmith, formerly of the Human Performance Center, instructs the classes. When Debbie, a petite blonde, explained the skinfold test for percentage of body fat, "because excess weight is a deterrent to good health," it was enough to make this reporter want to lose 15 pounds very quickly. She radiates health, and her positive attitude about it is an inspiration to her students in the program. Debbie's smile is enough to make anyone happy to exercise at 6 a.m.

Participants in the program must undergo an extensive physical and cardiovascular evaluation prior to joining. Along with the skinfold test, several other tests are done, including a blood chemistry test, which looks for elevated cholesterol and diabetes; a pulmonary function test for emphysema, asthma or other pulmonary obstructions; and a bicycle stress test to determine how much stress the heart and lungs can take. Flexibility, muscle strength and endurance are also measured.

One reason Husson is a good location for the program, according to Debbie, is the easy access to the olympic-sized pool in Newman Gym. Some of the 26 participants choose to swim during the twenty minutes of aerobic activity each morning. Other participants choose to walk or run. The hour also includes warm-ups, flexibility and muscle strengthening exercises and a set of cool-down exercises at the end of the session.

For Debbie, the hour of exercise precedes her full-time job at Goldsmith's Sporting Goods and her part-time obligation as a graduate student at UMO.

For the other participants, after a quick shower and light breakfast, most head off to work, including psychologist Bob Gallon, oral surgeon Dan McCarthy, and director of the Bangor community chorus Marion Vafiades.

There must be something good about this though, because when they head off to work, having been up and "getting physical" since 6 a.m., they are all smiling just like Debbie.

For more information about the Husson Health and Fitness Program, contact the athletic department at 947-1121, ext. 270. The cost for the program is $40 for one fifteen-week session or $100 for a full year. Participants who are also members of the Husson Athletic Association receive a ten percent discount.

Business Breakfast Briefs

September

Peter Geiger, associate editor and vice president of marketing for the Farmers' Almanac kicked off the 1985 Business Breakfast season. The Lewiston-based publication, with an annual circulation of 6 million copies, is a compilation of weather and farming forecasts, anecdotes and down-to-earth humor. Along with other marketing strategies, Geiger discussed how the Almanac is promoted through the effective use of the media. Asked why the company relocated in the 1950's, Geiger said they chose Maine because of the strong work ethic and professionalism of Maine people.

October

Calling venture capitalists the unsung heroes of the modern business world was October's business breakfast speaker Steven M. Cohen, editor of Venture magazine's "Capital Club Monthly." According to Cohen, venture capitalists provide the funds that turn an entrepreneur's dreams into a successful reality. Cohen suggested that a venture capital club could be started in the Bangor area providing a forum for investors and entrepreneurs to explore the feasibility of marketing new products or services.

$36,000 Co-op Grant

More than 100 Husson College students will be able to gain work experience while they learn this year, due to a one-year, $36,000 federal grant received from the Department of Education. The new grant will allow the Cooperative Education Department to continue to expand its services, according to Director Robert H. Thomas.

The purpose of this year's grant is to "develop positions in the health care field, specifically rural nursing," Thomas said.

The grant also allowed Husson to hire a student employment coordinator, Peggy Sumter. Sumter researches student job opportunities and helps co-op students coordinate work and class schedules.

The grant for the upcoming 1985-86 academic year makes the seventh consecutive year that Husson has received federal support for the co-op program, according to Thomas.

Husson Hosts 16th Federal Tax Institute

Slated for December 6 & 7

Husson will host its annual tax institute on December 6 and 7 at the Bangor campus. The program will cover new ideas for use in tax planning as well as this year's changes in federal tax law.

The institute is designed for anyone who has an interest in taxes: accountants, attorneys, tax practitioners, and others who are involved in tax planning or preparation. The topics selected for this year are of significant interest to tax professionals and their clients for the coming tax season and for future tax plans.

Following a welcome by Husson President Delmont N. Merrill, this year's program begins on Friday with presentations on Income Tax Proposals by Richard M. Simoneau, CPA; Trusts and Estates by David R. Hawkes, CPA; Employee Benefits by Raymond L. Cunliffe, CPA; Automobile Rules Revisited by Trudy D. Trembley, CPA; Imputed Interest Provisions by Raymond L. Cunliffe, CPA; and Corporate Liquidations by David R. Hawkes, CPA.

Friday afternoon, James Vashon, IRS collections group manager, will speak on the function of the IRS collections department, and then Steven Atwell, CPA and Christopher A. Bowden, CPA will discuss the implications of tax reform on real estate development.

The dinner speaker will be Raymond T. Adams, Jr. of Bangor whose topic will be tax case developments.

Saturday's activities will begin with an update on rulings and regulations by Robert Kruger, CPA. The closing speaker will be Stephen Murray, deputy director of the state bureau of taxation's audit division. Murray will speak on the role of the audit division in the examination of Maine businesses.

The institute will adjourn at noon on Saturday. Attendees will be eligible for up to 12 continuing professional education credits.

This year, the Husson accounting department will serve as directors and hosts for the institute. The institute is presented in cooperation with the National Association of Accountants (Bangor-Waterville and Southern Maine Chapters), the Maine Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Maine Chapter of the Association of Government Accountants, and the Maine society of Certified Management Accountants.

For more information about the tax institute or to register, contact the Accounting Department at 947-1121, ext. 257.

Clara's Autumn Thoughts

Alumni Association President Clara L. Swan '33

This fall has really been a terrific one with great color here in Maine. We all know that the white stuff will be here soon enough to satisfy you ski buffs!

This past year has been a very satisfying one to me personally, to the College, and to the Alumni Affairs and Development Office.

Homecoming was the supreme culmination of a great year. The Homecoming program included something for everyone. The Husson Players performed to a full house twice, and the alumni enjoyed the talented Dave Mallett and his pianist. Emotions ran high at the Sports Hall of Fame induction, and many enjoyed the soccer game, which Husson won! The awards luncheon was attended by 179 alumni and friends! Fabulous! THANKS!

Hale Joy gave each of us oldsters a pin proclaiming us "Golden Oldies." A special thanks to Hale for his physical and moral support of Homecoming '85.

Your alumni board will have to really work hard to surpass this successful year. With your support in 1985-86, we will strive for more participation, more support, and more interest in our college and its affairs.

While I have the floor, I am taking this opportunity to ask alumni to support their area chapters. Dick Stolkner will lead the Bangor chapter, Ralph Bickford the Waterville chapter, Bob Thompson the Aroostook County group, and Don Levine the Millinocket area group. The Portland chapter will receive assistance from several of the active alums in that area. Hopefully, 1985-86 will find these area chapters alive and functioning well! The social satisfaction derived from the meeting brings about a more tightly knit group to enjoy the sports, the plays, and the reminiscing about the job, family, and personal successes of those present.

Congratulations to those inducted into the Husson Sports Hall of Fame. You earned it. You were all great!

Congratulations to Ray Martin, Bob and Jane Goodwin, Mike Francoeur and Education Commissioner Robert Boose, recognized for their contributions to Husson, education and the accounting profession. We were honored to have you accept the alumni awards.

I had a tremendous weekend from beginning to end. Seeing you all laughing about old times, hearing of your exciting lives and successful careers and realizing that way back I was lucky enough to have you as students and now I have you all as friends!

Let's all band together and make 1985-86 even a better year for Husson and us!

I'll be in touch — we on the Alumni Board are flexible and interested in what you would like us to do for you. Do write and we'll do our best to support your ideas and interests in Husson.

New Husson Coaches Announced

Three Husson College athletic teams are sporting new coaches this fall, according to Richard Knight, director for intercollegiate athletics.

Due to an increased amount of student interest in playing basketball, Husson has a men's junior varsity team for the first time this year. The team is coached by Neil Waterman of Bangor, a teacher at the Garland Street Middle School.

Waterman has been assistant basketball coach and junior varsity coach at Bangor High School since 1980. He has also been the program director for the Northeast Basketball School, held at Husson each summer, since 1980.

The team will play ten games with Colby College, Maine Central Institute, Beal College, Eastern Maine Tech, and Unity College. The first game is scheduled for Monday, December 2 at home vs. Colby College.

Isabell B. Cross, a graduate student at UMO and former women's varsity basketball coach at the University of Maine at Machias, has been appointed women's volleyball coach.

Cross, an avid power volleyball player, played varsity volleyball at UMM for four years. She was an All-State volleyball player for three years and was voted most valuable player twice.

The volleyball season opener was a Husson Tournament on Saturday, September 21. The Lady Braves were willing adversaries of the Bowdoin, University of Maine at Machias, University of New England, St. Joseph's College, University of Maine at Presque Isle, University of Maine at Fort Kent, and Unity College teams.

This year's state volleyball tournament was also held at Husson. Bates College won the title on Saturday, November 2.

Tom Largay, head of the accounting department at Husson, has signed on as golf coach. A golf enthusiast since age 16, Largay is a past winner of the Germannia Community College Open in Fredericksburg, VA.

Husson Grad in Washington Post

David V. Dukes '57, formerly deputy assistant secretary of finance with the department of Health and Human Services, has been selected as executive director of the Joint Financial Management Improvement Program. Dukes will be responsible for developing and directing multiple interagency projects related to improving financial management in the federal government. Leadership and guidance are provided by the four principals of the program — the Secretary of the Treasury, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, the Comptroller General of the United States, and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management. The executive director leads the staff in selecting, coordinating, monitoring, and providing support for special projects; reviewing and analyzing agency financial management improvement programs and progress; coordinating the sharing and dissemination of improved practices and technologies in financial management; reviewing central agencies' regulations and instructions on financial management policies and procedures; and responding to agency requests for information and advice.

During his eleven and one-half years as Deputy Assistant Secretary in HHS, Dukes directed the department's accounting, fiscal, and budget execution policies. He also led the development, improvement, and operation of department-wide financial systems. Dukes joined Health, Education and Welfare in 1967 as a systems accountant, and in 1970 was elevated to the position of Director, Budget Operations. Before 1967, he held various financial and auditing positions with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Atomic Energy Commission, General Electric Company, and the General Accounting Office dating back to 1957.

Dukes received a Bachelor of Science degree from Husson and a masters in public administration from the University of Washington at Seattle in 1970. He is a recipient of several department awards and is a member of the Association of Government Accountants.

Co-eds Spend Summer Lobstering

Pa's Boat was swung expertly to nestle beside a lobster trap toggle off Swan's Island early in the afternoon. The trap was out of the water, emptied of lobsters and crabs, and dropped back into the water, rebaited, in less than a minute.

Unlike most college women, Husson senior Denise Joyce and Letita Joyce, a sophomore at Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., spend their summers lobster fishing from their home on Swan's Island.

The sisters are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Joyce of Swan's Island and the granddaughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce of Swan's Island. Both their father and grandfather are full-time lobster fishermen.

The Joyce sisters (Letitia drives the boat and Denise gaffs the traps and rebaits them) fish about 150 traps. They've been doing it the past five summers, "because we like it, but I don't think most girls would do it though," Denise said after the two had put their boat on its mooring and rowed ashore in a punt to a landing in Burnt Cove Harbor.

Stepping onto a float, they were greeted by their grandparents who were on their way out to haul traps yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Joyce had volunteered to be her husband's sternman.

After their grandparents were aboard the Robert L. and headed seaward the Joyce sisters, who said they learned lobstering and boat handling from their father, said they use the money they make each summer in part for tuition, "some goes to clothes," and spending money.

"You're your own boss," Denise said about why they choose to lobster.

"You work when you want," Letitia added.

"We share everything 50-50," Denise said. "The boat's in my name, but it's really both of ours. It's named Pa's Boat for our great-grandfather who had it built when he was 76 years old. He wanted a small boat that could fish 150 traps. People always called him Pa, so that's how the boat got named."

The boat was later sold to another Swan's Islander who was starting out in the lobster fishery and when he was ready to sell it Carleton Joyce, their father, bought it, according to the sisters who now own it.

Pa's Boat has hydraulic steering and a hydraulic pot hauler and the Joyce sisters appear to handle the boat and its gear with a skill that would probably be the envy of many boatmen.

"There's not too much to do on Swan's Island other than work so that's what we do," Denise said.

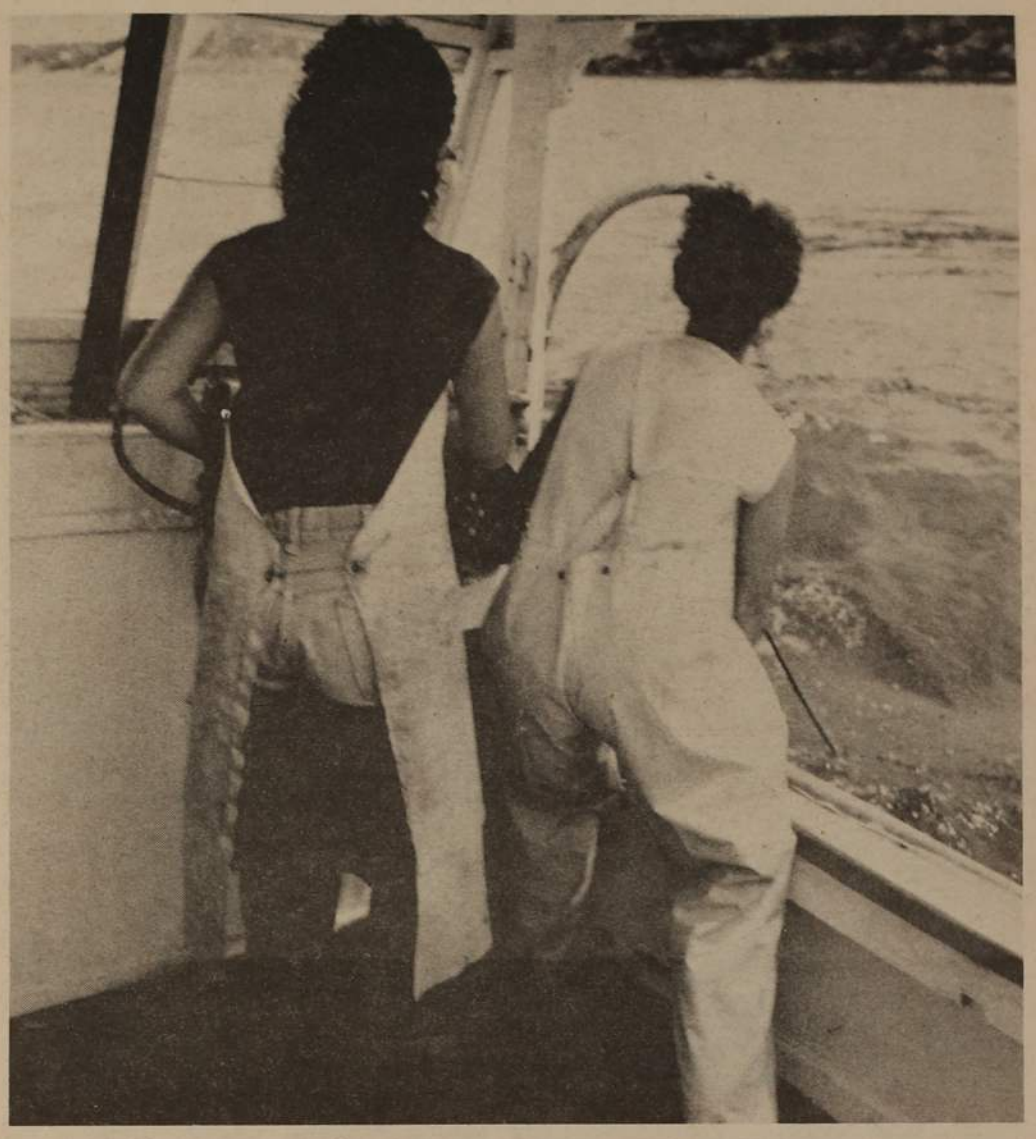

Denise was recently awarded a $1,000 scholarship by the Eastern Business Education Association (EBEA) in Washington, D.C.

The EBEA awards three scholarships each year to students enrolled in business teacher education programs at colleges in the eastern United States.

Denise, who will graduate in May, 1986, has been on the Dean's List every semester. She has a cumulative grade point average of 3.8 out of 4.0. Last year she was named a Blaine House Scholar by Governor Joseph E. Brennan for her scholastic achievements.

In her letter of intention to pursue a career in business education for the EBEA, Denise wrote, "As a teacher I want to stay current with trends and technological advances by reading current literature, meeting with people in the business community and furthering my formal education."

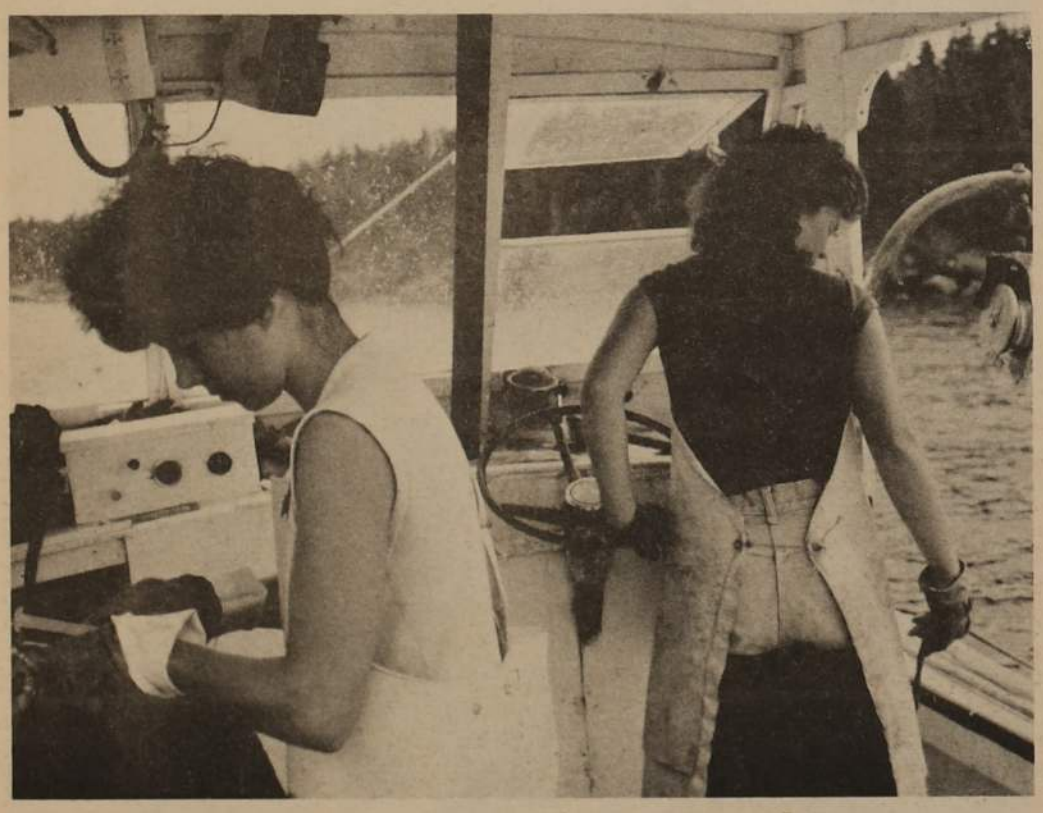

Denise plans to begin her graduate degree and her teaching career next fall, after she and her sister spend another summer lobstering.

Letitia Joyce holds Pa's Boat steady in the seas while sister Denise gaffs a lobster trap off Swan's Island. The two sisters have been lobster fishing in their great grandfather's boat for the past five years. "Most girls wouldn't do it," Denise says.

Denise Joyce uses a lobster gauge to measure the carapace length of a lobster that she and her sister have just hauled aboard Pa's Boat.

Pa's Boat heads for its mooring after a day of hauling lobster traps.

"Needless to say, being named the Husson College outstanding alumnus is surely the creme de la creme as far as I am concerned ... You have contributed greatly to making me what I am."

The honorary award for accounting, presented to Michel J. Francoeur '68, was accepted in his absence by Karl McGaw '63.

The 1985 Outstanding Alumnus Award was given to a man also chosen Educator of the Year by the Maine Vocational Association, Raynald A. Martin '57. Ray has been at Brewer High School in the business department since 1973, where he is now department head. He has been a business teacher for 28 years. Ray was also elected to the alumni association board of directors at the Homecoming luncheon.

Following a sneak preview of Husson's nine new T.V. commercials and the Twenty-First Century Fund videotape, a short business meeting and annual alumni association elections were held (see election story in this issue). Then the door prize, a weekend for two in Quebec City, was won by Marion Hayes Cheney '35, who was not only a member of the newly inducted Sports Hall of Fame, but also celebrating her 50th college reunion. Couldn't have gone to a nicer alumna!

Before heading off to the Husson — U. Maine Fort Kent soccer game (won by Husson!) or to the second performance of "The Odd Couple," alumni were treated to a show of oil paintings by local artists Dorothy Coulter and Evelyn Pearson. In addition, Pauline Saba '60 exhibited several of her craft items.

From then till the Black Eagle Jazz Band concert, alumni were on their own to visit, celebrate, reminisce, and tour the campus. Many old friendships were renewed, and many new ones begun. All in all, Homecoming '85 was a smashing success, and Clara and her alumni board have every intention of topping it next year!

Homecoming '85

President's Corner

President Delmont N. Merrill '54

Homecoming '85 gave me a wonderful chance to catch up on the lives of so many of my friends, my fellow alumni. It was the best Homecoming I've been to, and I'm extremely pleased at the support for the college shown by the 200 alumni who attended, and by the tremendous effort put forth by Clara and her committees to make the weekend such a success.

The induction of the first members of the Husson College Sports Hall of Fame was the culmination of a dream I've had for a long time. I'm happy the College has recognized the talents of so many athletes for their contributions to the athletic traditions Husson holds. I myself was delighted to be chosen, and I was both happy and sad as I listened to the emotional acceptance speeches of my fellow alumni, especially Dougie Harrington, Harry Greenfield and Colby Wood. I wish "Chief" had been here to see it. While his principal role was as the leader of this institution, he participated in nearly every activity, from basketball coach to orchestra leader.

I was also very pleased to be able to recognize Louise Brookes Miller's extraordinary contribution to Husson College at Homecoming '85, and I hope she gets many years of enjoyment from her Husson armchair. The publication of Husson College: A History was the culmination of many years of her dedication to the image of this college, and I will never be able to thank her enough for her unfailing support.

Husson is really on the move! Enrollment is up at every turn, which shows outstanding support for the valuable educations Husson students receive. We're making progress on all fronts: I'm extremely pleased by the agreement between Husson and NMVTI in Presque Isle, for this is a sign of innovative cooperation between a public institution and a private institution.

We are indeed fortunate to have Norman S. Kominsky as the newly elected President of the Board of Trustees, and I look forward to working with the board as we strive to provide better educations for the leaders of tomorrow.

Mrs. Merrill and I wish you a very safe and happy holiday season, and we hope that 1986 will prove to be another banner year for us all.

Middle East Alumni Host Paul Husson

Paul Husson, Jamal Abdullah Al Sarabi '81, and the brothers and sister of Bader Al Said, a current Husson student.

If you had the opportunity to travel to four middle east nations shortly after an airplane hijacking, would you go? That was the prospect facing admissions director Paul Husson when he left for New York City and a flight to Amman, Jordan in early July.

Husson took the risk and decided to board the Royal Jordanian Airlines flight from New York's John F. Kennedy Airport and travel first to Jordan, then to Jedda in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, on from there to Kuwait and Bahrain and returning to New York via Amman.

Actually, aside from greatly increased airport security, Husson said that the trip — planned for months in advance — was not interrupted by any untoward events.

"Everywhere I went I was received with utmost civility," Husson said. "My preconceived notions of the area were far from the situations I experienced. The people I met were sophisticated, powerful, and the area is dynamic — people are progressive and well-educated and economic growth abounds."

Husson noted that he was anxious about being an American in this part of the world, but "I was treated with kindness and respect everywhere I went. Sure there is a negative view of the United States in this part of the world, but, among the people I met, that criticism was directed at U.S. foreign policy, not at me as an American citizen."

Husson remained in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia for six days, meeting with representatives of Saudi businesses and institutions like Saudi Airlines, the Ministry of Petroleum and Mineral Resources, Shairco, the National Commercial Bank of Saudi Arabia, Maternity and Children's Hospital, the Minister of Information for the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and Saudi Telephone.

"Most of my meetings were not brief. They lasted up to two hours and began with tea, Turkish coffee or a soft drink. Then we chatted about interests of mutual concern, not business, then we touched upon the nature of my trip and finally discussed the purpose for my visit." Husson said. "I owe a great debt of thanks to the Husson alumni who made the arrangements for the trip. There is a word in Arabic 'wasda' which means 'connections and power,' — something like that enabled me to meet with so many top people."

The hospitality was incredible Husson said,and the food was excellent. Husson's alumni host, Mostafa Al-Shair '81/'84, had a schedule waiting for him when he arrived in Jedda, he said. After six days in the Saudi Kingdom cities of Jedda and Riyadh, Husson flew to Kuwait, where he and Mostafa were met by Jamal Al-Serabi '81. Later in Bahrain they were met by Adel Al-Alawai '83.

Mostafa earned his associate degree in business administration from Husson College in 1981 and completed his bachelor's degree in 1984, also in business administration. He is one of three partners in Shairco, a fiberglass trading, contracting and manufacturing firm in Saudi Arabia. Mostafa also owns a jewelry firm, AJ, which soon will expand to four stores selling Arabic jewelry. He has several business interests in Maine.

"It is amazing how Husson alumni, who have not met before, have a common experience — a teacher like Dr. Sullivan whose stories are remembered, to make us feel a tie to Husson College," Mostafa said. "I would also like to congratulate the State of Maine and its nice people. All of us remember how they helped us and we are proud to know them."

"It amazed me how these alumni felt about Maine and the Bangor area," Husson said. "Both of them remarked that while in Bangor, they felt no discrimination, no animosity — I think that speaks well

"Most of my meetings were not brief. They lasted up to two hours and began with tea ... then we chatted about interests of mutual concern, not business, then we touched upon the nature of my trip and finally discussed the purpose of my visit."

of Maine people. They have such pride in Husson College and a love of the area that I called them 'My Bangor Boys' whenever we went for a meeting together."

"When I landed in Kuwait, the temperature was 113 degrees Fahrenheit and there was a sandstorm obscuring visibility. In this country, near Iran, there is a large Shiite population and at night people said you could hear the guns in the Iran-Iraq war. I didn't hear anything," Husson said. In Arabic this combination of heat, humidity, and sandstorm is called "toz."

In Kuwait, Husson visited with Dr. Ernest Parkin, attached to the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait. Dr. Parkin and his wife Marilyn are former Hampden residents; Parkin was employed by the International Center for Language Studies (ICLS) as its director. The ICLS operates on the Husson campus.

The U.S. Embassy Annex in Kuwait was in ruins as a result of a terrorist bomb and there was continuing concern for Americans living in the area, Husson said. Despite these pressures, the embassy continues to function at a high level of activity and efficiency.

Despite the concertina wire protecting the embassy, Husson noticed the growing westernization of the middle east. "Not too far from the razor-wire you could see the familiar sign of a Dairy Queen ice cream parlor and a Hardee's restaurant," Husson said, adding "if you wanted a hamburger you could get it. I preferred the local food — kibabs, lamb, and fish dishes with indescribable spices. Wherever I went, my hosts sincerely rolled out the carpet for me."

Jamal Al-Serabi '81, a lecturer at the University of Kuwait, was host to Husson while in Kuwait. Jamal teaches courses in management and finance, investment and portfolio management, and works on a research team studying management and finance in Kuwait. In addition, Al-Serabi is helping to develop training programs for some companies and institutions. Al-Serabi serves as an assistant to the dean of the faculty and was the first alumnus to invite Paul Husson to the mideast.

The Bangor admissions director then flew from Kuwait to Bahrain. Husson characterized Bahrain as an island of green in an ocean of sand. Actually Bahrain is an island in the Arabian Gulf and, in the middle of the island, there is a freshwater spring which gives the island a lush greenery not found elsewhere in the mideast. As if the presence of water influenced people's attitudes, Husson noticed this nation was more relaxed than in Kuwait or the Saudi Kingdom.

In Bahrain Husson and Mostafa were joined by Adel Al-Alawi, '83. Al-Alawi is a lecturer in computer information systems at Gulf Polytechnic University and teaches five classes. While teaching courses for engineers and beginning business students, Adel also teaches a management information systems course for upper level executives. He is married and is the father of a four-month old son, Mishael, who was born in Waterville. Some of the Bangor faculty are assisting Al-Alawi with materials and information for the management information systems course.

As in other visits, Paul Husson discussed the college's close ties to the International Center for Language Studies. The fact that the Bangor business and health-related professions college can provide a setting for non-English speaking students to learn the language quickly is a decided plus, Husson said. Visits in Bahrain included stops at the Gulf Polytechnic University and the College of Health Sciences.

Husson's impressions of the area changed greatly from his preconceptions. The Saudi Kingdom, with its vastness and the "Empty Quarter" where few save nomads travel, was equally impressive because of its sophisticated economy and "Saudization" — a program to train Saudi nationals for upper level management positions. The program would make the Kingdom less reliant upon foreign leadership of corporations.

"The Saudis are doing things we will be doing in this country in a few years," Husson said. "Saudis now have their own training programs in English and other technical courses located at the firm's headquarters. They really want to develop their own managers and realize that they must become the source for this information and education."

Paul Husson described the progress in Jedda over the last 30 years or so this way. "There used to be an expression in Jedda whenever an important decision had to be made and a meeting was required. The common meeting place was outdoors, under a tree. In those days everyone knew where the meeting was to be held — because there was only one tree in the city!"

New Alumni Association Board Members

The Alumni Association held its annual meeting at Homecoming '85, electing a new second vice president, three new board members and five new ex-officio members.

James C. Hathorne '68 joins the association's officers as second vice president, replacing Ted Barber '50. This year's officer slate also includes Clara L. Swan '33, President; Richard M. Newcomb '80 MSB, First Vice President; and Anne Roberts '63/'83 MSB, Secretary/Treasurer.

Elected to the board were Hale '41 and Eleanor Joy '41 of Ellsworth, who were responsible for the attendance of many members of the 1940s classes at Homecoming '85, and Raynald Martin '57, winner of this year's Outstanding Alumnus award.

Three new chapter presidents were elected as ex-officio members of the board. Ralph Bickford '56, recently "retired," will keep busy activating the Waterville chapter, Don Levine '82/'83 MSB has taken on the challenge of organizing the new Katahdin area chapter, and Dick Stolkner '72, will lead the Bangor area chapter.

In accordance with the change in alumni association bylaws, Doug Mehne '86, president of the Student Senate, and Dan Baker '86, president of the Senior Class, have been invited to be ex-officio members of the board.

Alumni Association board president Clara Swan and the dedicated board are looking forward to an exciting, busy year serving the alumni of Husson College.

Like Mother, Like Daughter

They might be seen chatting in the halls or sharing a coffee break between classes in the Wigwam. Slim brunettes who look like sisters, Karen is a full-time nursing student while Terry is a second-semester senior in Information Processing. Like many college friends, they've shared rides, lockers, library books and college gossip. But Karen and Terry are more than casual friends - they're mother and daughter.

Karen Manzo of Bangor was the first member of the family to come through Husson's doors when she enrolled in the nursing program in 1983. After years spent as a homemaker happily caring for her two daughters, Karen decided to fulfill her lifelong ambition of becoming a registered nurse. "I always wanted to be a nurse," says Karen, who added that she chose Husson because of the excellent reputation of the baccalaureate nursing program. Currently in her Junior year of the program, Karen says she hasn't been able yet to narrow down her specialty areas. "I enjoy each new facet of nursing that I learn about, so it's hard to pinpoint one exclusive area."

It was Karen who urged her younger daughter Terry to follow her footsteps to Husson College. Terry transferred from a large, state university to Husson because she was looking for "a smaller school where I'd know the people around me and they'd know me." Terry, who is also a part-time secretary at the College, is preparing for a December graduation. She will receive an associate degree in Information Processing.

After graduation, Terry will begin to prepare for her August wedding. She and her husband-to-be will live in East Millinocket where they plan to raise race horses. In her new setting, Terry plans to continue her education at Husson's continuing education division site in East Millinocket. One instructor at this site is Terry's uncle, Don Levine, president of the Katahdin Chapter of the Alumni Association.

Karen and Terry look more like sisters than mother and daughter. "College keeps me young," commented Karen, who recently became a grandmother. Terry described their relationship by saying her mother had "always been more like a sister to me." Karen says her husband is very proud and supportive of his wife and daughter who have both taken well-earned places on the Dean's List.

Attending college together has given mother and daughter a unique opportunity to see and enjoy each other as peers. They also give each other balance - Karen providing Terry with an example of determination and perseverance and Terry giving her mom tips on how to juggle college with her personal life. Karen, who admitted her first semester was "a bit of a shock," felt she had to get an A in every course to be considered a good student. "I was studying around the clock," says Karen, who relaxed her expectations a little at her daughter's urging. Terry's advice was "relax or you'll burn out."

Both Karen and Terry Manzo seem to have found their place at Husson College, and Husson is proud to have them both.

Mrs. Merrill Hosts Annual Tea

For the eighth consecutive year, more than 50 women associated with Husson College attended a social gathering at the home of Mrs. Delmont N. Merrill in Brewer. Held on Wednesday, September 4, the tea served to welcome new and returning women to Husson.

The tea was attended by faculty women and faculty wives, women administrators, professional staff members, and women associated with the Boards of Trustees and Advisors. Shown here are Darlene MacLeod, assistant director of public relations, Kathy Doberstyn, wife of academic dean Gary Doberstyn, and Mrs. Merrill.
