THE RICHARD E. DYKE CENTER FOR FAMILY BUSINESS

If Husson College were to make a statement as to what it has been about for the past 100 years, the new Richard E. Dyke Center for Family Business hits the mark. The Center, which was officially opened at a formal ribbon cutting on April 4, 1997, is a testament to Husson alumnus Dick Dyke'58 ΜΣΧ, whose career has included a score of family businesses, and whose dream, advocacy, personal generosity and fundraising drive made the Center a reality.

Standing beside Dyke at the ribbon cutting was his family: Katie, Larry '82 TKE, Mark '92, Jeff and Cheryl; the "boys" all Husson alumni- all family entrepreneurs. There was also founding Center executive director and newly elected United States Senator, Susan M. Collins, and new Center Director and Fulbright Scholar, Paul Young. And in the crowd were some of Maine's largest and smallest family business owners. "This is for you", said Dyke as he cut the ribbon. "This place is for the families who are the backbone of the Maine economy, the foundation of what this country is about."

Dyke, a native of Wilton, started his entrepreneurial ventures in high school with a band. He, along with "Katie and the kids" have owned and operated 40 family or closely held companies over the past four decades. "I've learned a lot and been very successful. I would now like to return some of this success to Husson College and to the family businesses of tomorrow", he said

The brick structure is simple, unique and bold. On the knoll that rises above the entrance to the College, it commands a view across the city from the Standpipe to the International Airport. The high roof, covered columned exterior walkway, nine French doors that tie the interior into the expanse of lawns, and the large, gracious entrance, hallway and meeting room space are designed for quality conferencing, flexibility, and access. The building was designed by Bangor Architect and Husson alumnus, John Rohman '77, and constructed by Atlantic Builders of Surry under the watchful eye of Husson alumnus, T. J. Sawyer '79. The flexibility was demonstrated by three recent events: a United States Senate Hearing, a Husson Board Meeting, and a faculty retreat.

Dyke, who was deeply involved in the creation of the Center and the design of the facility, conveyed much of his logic at the ribbon cutting. The Center is only one mile from the Interstate. It is at the edge of the campus with plenty of parking, and is accessible and welcoming to anyone coming on campus for the first time. The meeting room seats up to 200 and is unique as it has French doors which make the room open to the spectacular view and rolling lawns. "The idea is for the doors to be thrown open at breaks in meetings and for attendees to walk out onto the columned porch and find themselves on a college campus, " he explained

Richard E. Dyke '58 ΜΣΧ

In addition to the meeting room, there is a conference room, kitchen, director's office, and resource library which naturally reconfigures into a board room. "Our goal is to couple hands-on assistance with high technology" said Executive Director Paul Young. "We are installing computers with software packages that help with business plans and financial analysis as well as provide access to the Internet. We hope to add teleconferencing." Young, a native of Limestone, Maine, established and operated his own computer service company in the early 1980s. He also picked potatoes and worked in his family's roadside restaurant. "We want to be friendly and accessible to business folk who simply want to get pointed in the right direction for financing, counseling or networking. We certainly will not have all the answers, but our goal is to make people feel at home and to really help." Working with Paul Young as associate director is alumna Joyce Goodine '66, '92, '97 ΔΣΔ, whose undergraduate and Master's in Business degrees, years of experience in personnel and true Downeast friendliness, will make new comers right at ease.

The building abounds with plaques, recognizing major donors including Bangor Savings Bank, G. Peirce Webber, Eaton, Peabody, Bradford & Veague, Fleet Bank and many others. On the walls are a rotating collection of photos of many of the well known family businesses with names including Bean, Bragg, Cyr, Neally and Saliba. Finally, there is a plaque. It is a poem that Dick Dyke's dad, a mill worker in Wilton, used as advice to Dick. It captures what family businesses is all about.

A state-wide advisory board has been established. It is Chaired by Dick Dyke. Other members include Hilda Hutchins McCullen, Ralph Leonard, Martha Dudman, Robert Umphrey, Toby Hammond, Paul Young, Robert Smith, Joyce Goodine, and William Beardsley.

Husson Alumnus Gives Back to Husson

STEVE SOUBBLE
BS Accounting '75

Career development professionals are fond of saying "Networking can enable you to create your dream job." Many of us feel that's advice to take with a grain of salt. Steve Soubble is an example of someone who made the advice work. At the same time, he found time to be a major Husson benefactor in the form of valuable professional consultation to the School of Business.

Steve was an accounting major at Husson. Upon graduation he taught in Portland colleges and then spent 15 years in banking rising to Vice President of Marketing and Product Development with Casco Northern Bank before assuming his current position as Marketing Manager for Northland Telephone, working out of Portland to serve Northern New England.

He brought his marketing skills he learned at Husson and throughout his career back to the campus in 1995. After attending an alumni event in Portland, he offered his services to the School of Business and the College's statewide Continuing Education Program, establishing and implementing marketing research. The results of the research were presented by Jessica Jenner, the Dean of the School of Business, at a national conference on adult learning to a 'standing room only' crowd. Dean Jenner is quick to add, "Steve deserves the credit."

ALUMNI Profile

by Ken Vogt

Brenda Fraser Castonguay '75

From the corporate headquarters at Carolina Power and Light's twenty-one story high-rise in downtown Raleigh, North Carolina, Brenda Fraser Castonguay manages the human resources programs for CP & L's 6700 employees. She administers the hiring, training, wage and benefits programs for this huge work force. "It's a challenge — there is never a dull moment", she says about her demanding job.

The total gamut of personnel and workplace issues — including worker safety, plant security, worker effectiveness — is what she faces on a regular basis. These matters are complicated by the company's many departments, various facets of CP & L's operation and its geographic spread.

Brenda considers herself fortunate to be with a world leader in the power utility business. She explains that CP & L has had outstanding corporate leadership that defined the industry and provided superb customer service. She adds that their nonunion work force speaks volumes about the strong positive relations the company has had with its labor force over the years.

CP & L brought Brenda to Raleigh to be its Assistant Vice President, Human Resources in 1994 during the depths of that year's cold winter. She claims they were very clever to lure her away from Maine for an interview at that time of year. She had just completed ten years with Maine Yankee as their manager of administration and human resources.

After graduating from Husson, Brenda was fortunate to be recruited by GTE for the only position they offered to a college graduate from Maine that year. She was accepted into a special executive training program in their Stamford, Connecticut headquarters where they trained her in finance. She then returned for awhile to the Sylvania plant in Bangor, first in accounting and then in the utility side of the operation. They sent her next to Kentucky where she worked in the budget department of their Lexington operation.

Fortunately for Brenda, the company's workers went on strike so she had to pitch in and help manage all aspects of the company. In long overtime hours, she found out she really liked the utilities business.

While she liked the company, she felt the need to return to Maine. She accepted a job with Central Maine Power where she spent two years in their treasury department before moving over to Maine Yankee.

Just a year ago, Brenda was named Vice President at CP & L. She says that the current deregulation is making for exciting opportunities and great challenges in the industry. "These are unique times for us, but here at CP & L we are very proactive and excited about shaping the future in our industry," she says. She points out that many issues need to be resolved; reliability of power will be among them. Making sure that the small rural customer is as well served as the big city power consumer is one of her concerns. In case of a disaster, such as a flood or hurricane, she worries about who will bear the responsibility of replacing downed wires after deregulation.

While missing the natural beauty of her native Maine and its opportunities for spectacular hiking, she speaks highly of the cultural and educational opportunities in the triangle area of North Carolina. She and husband, Bill '76, whom she met at Husson return each year at Christmas to visit relatives in Maine.

Brenda recalls her years at Husson with fondness and appreciation. She singled out Professor Phil Grant as an exceptional teacher and attributed the fundamental skills she gained at Husson as critical to her professional success.

FRIENDLY RIVALRY AFTER ALL THESE YEARS

Childhood teammates play last game at Husson

by Nathan Michaud

If you've seen them play, you may have noticed that Husson College's Beth Miller and Sue Ann Allen work particularly well together on the basketball court. It might have seemed, for example, like Miller knew exactly where Allen was going to be for an outlet pass after a rebound, or appeared that Allen intuited Miller's cut to the basket before leading her with a perfect pass. And that's probably just what happened. There's a good reason for it. These two have been playing together for fourteen years.

But if you've heard them speaking sharply to each other on the court, don't be alarmed. A long time ago, Allen got mad enough to put shredded paper in a jar of Miller's beloved Jiff peanut butter. If they can get over that they can get over anything.

The two seniors, who played their final game for Husson last Monday night against St. Joseph's College, grew up about a mile and half from each other in Bradford, where, to the best of their recollections, they started playing ball and being friends around third grade. Organized play and sleep-overs began in sixth grade.

By the time they started at Central High School in East Corinth, they had—along with mutual buddy Cherie Greatorex, who went on to play for Merrimac College in Massachusetts—formed a nearly inseparable trio of bona fide basketball junkies.

"In high school a lot of kids drink and smoke, but we never did anything but basketball," Miller says. "If we wanted to have fun, we'd ask for the keys to the gym. We were actually kind of dorky because all we wanted to do was practice."

"I think we thought about basketball more than anything else in high school," Allen adds. "School was important, but basketball practice was what got us through the day."

But if that makes you think Allen and Miller are a couple of dumb jocks, just check out their grades at Husson. Allen earned a 3.7 grade point average and is finishing up her student teaching in Brewer, while Miller's getting a 3.5 in Husson's demanding nursing program.

"I think we both really believe now that basketball is great, but school is what we're really here for when it comes down to it," Allen says.

Such foresight is refreshing these days, when so many college sports stars seem to see the classroom as little more than a place to rest up before game time. Women's basketball coach Mary Walker calls her Bradford duo role models, true student-athletes driven to succeed on and off the court.

Allen actually decided to attend Husson first, because she knew she wanted to stay in the area.

Sue Ann Allen (L) and Beth Miller (R)

Miller says she was looking at schools all over, before also deciding finally on Husson—mostly because of the quality of the nursing program there. But the prospect of playing with Allen for four more years certainly didn't dissuade her.

At Central High, Miller, Allen and Greatorex made up the nucleus of a very strong team that, come tournament time, regularly had very bad luck ("Other coaches couldn't believe that we all played together," says Miller. "Other coaches would say to our coach: 'If you don't win the gold ball, I'm coming to take your job.'"). Foul trouble and other misfortune, it seems, perpetually sent Central home in the early rounds.

But Allen and Miller have found better luck at Husson, where their families sit together in the stands and cheer them on. The Braves have earned a berth in the NAIA National Tournament two out of their four years (1995 and '96). And the two have the individual statistics to prove that they played no small part in that success.

Miller, a center/forward, leads the team in scoring this season with a17.22 average and has scored over 1,000 points in her collegiate career. Point guard and team captain Allen currently leads the Braves in assists and steals and scored her 1,000th point in February. Miller was the Maine Athletic Conference Player of the Week the first week in February. Allen received the same honor the next week.

When two players as talented as these play together for so long, a fair amount of competition usually emerges between them. While this case is no exception, the two insist that the competition has had nothing but a positive effect on both their playing and their friendship.

"Beth has helped me become the player that I am," Allen says. "I think it's always about making each other better."

Their friendship, they say, is actually strong enough that they trust each other not to take things personally.

When you're on the court, you're intense and you can't really think about feelings when you play," Allen says. "Maybe that's not right, but I think we both understand that. I would say things to her that I wouldn't necessarily say to someone else because I know she can take it. That's a good feeling—to have someone you can get mad at."

Now that their last season at Husson is over, Miller and Allen are faced with the prospect of not wearing the same uniform on court again. Which, of course, is not to say that they won't try to string things out a bit.

"It's scary," Allen says. "We've had basketball our whole lives and now it's almost over."

Sitting next to her, Miller smiles. "I've already asked if I could play on somebody's rec team."

Allen lights up. "I want to play! Do you have enough room? What nights do you play?"

"I don't know and I don't care," says Miller, shrugging. "I'm just playing."

And their friendship? That will always be there, they say, even though they're both approaching major life changes. Allen is getting married in June (Miller, of course, will be a bridesmaid in the wedding) and Miller is getting set to leave the state to pursue a nursing career.

"I think we'll always stay in touch," Allen says to Miller. "Like I'll always know what's going on in your life and I think you'll always know about me."

"Yeah," Miller agrees. "We'll always stay in touch."

Allen shoots her a look that only the best of friends can get away with. "You better!"

News in Brief

NESCom Joins Husson

In January, the New England School of Communications became part of Husson College. NESCom, as it is known, continues with its own board, president George Wildey, and degree granting authority. It continues to be located on campus and operates WHSN, but it has become a nonprofit organization with assets owned by Husson. NESCom continues to expand with enrollment projected well over 100 in September. It also owns and operates the Marsh River Theater in Brooks, Maine. With its focus on communications and technology, NESCom compliments the other schools at Husson.

Graduations in Bangor and Portland

Led by pipers and wrapped up by a U.S. Senator who only months before had been a colleague, Husson graduated 340 AS,BS, and MS students in Bangor on May 10th, including its first MSN students (nurse practitioners). Honorary degrees were granted to Husson's founding executive director of the Center for Family Business, U.S. Senator Susan Collins, Husson/EMMC nursing alumna and African missionary, Sister Barbara Brillant '66, and Husson Alumnus and aerospace industry entrepreneur James Carlisle '64 ΚΔΦ.

On May 11th, Husson graduated 100 in Portland at its second annual southern Maine commencement. Elaine Rosen, President of UNUM Insurance Co. was the commencement speaker.

New Academic Programs

The School of Business continues its diversification with new B.S. degree programs in Hospitality Management, Business and Technology, Business Studies, and a new M.S.B. concentration in Nonprofit Management. The School of Science and Humanities has approved new B.S. degrees in Science and Humanities, Life Sciences and Life Sciences/Teacher Education.

Nursing Grants Awarded for Graduate Nursing Study

Two separate federal grants totaling $1.3 million were awarded to the Husson School of Health in June. $900,000 will support an expanded rural initiative for the MSN for family and community health nurse practitioners. $440,000 will support the introduction of advanced practice psychiatric nursing, again with a rural focus. Honors go to Dr. Barbara Higgins and Dr. Teresa Steele for their leadership in these areas.

Introducing Field Hockey

Field Hockey will be introduced as an intercollegiate sport in September following the successful introduction of men's lacrosse in the Spring. Plans for cross-country and tennis are also underway.

The President Serves

During the 1996/97 year, President Beardsley served as President of the Maine Higher Education Council. He also serves as chairman of the N.E. School of Communications and the Maine Education Assistance Board and as a director of the Finance Authority of Maine.

Husson Beats U Maine in "TWO" Men's Sports

After decades of secret scrimmages, challenges and taunts, the Husson Braves finally won the tip in the first official basketball game between the two Maine powerhouses - Husson beating the Division 1 Black Bears with one second and one point to spare on a critical three-pointer by Chris Funk of Caribou. Then, in the school's first ever lacrosse season, the Braves knocked off U Maine's club team in lacrosse as well.

Former Chair, Constance Carlson

Dr. Constance Carlson passed away on May 14, 1997. A longtime trustee, Dr. Carlson chaired the Husson Board from 1989 to 1992. A native of Bangor, Dr. Carlson was an English Scholar, a women's state golf champion and the first woman to be president of one of the University of Maine campuses, UM Presque Isle. A collection of books has been established in the Husson library in her memory. She is sorely missed.

New Locations

With over 600 Husson graduate and undergraduate students studying in southern Maine, the college has relocated its facilities. The Portland campus has moved into a newly renovated 12,000 square foot space in the Mall Plaza, adjacent to the Maine Mall in South Portland. In Lewiston, the College has relocated to the Bates Mill. In Augusta, Husson continues to offer a masters program in business at the Central Maine Power corporate headquarters on Edison Drive.

Changing of the Guard

Husson will not be the same after well over four decades with Dr. Janet Kinney '59 ETE, coach, teacher and administrator. Dr. Kinney retired in May. Also retiring were Assistant Prof. Anne Turner '84, Dr. Paul Goss '59 ΜΣΧ and Edna Kustner.

Promotions include John Rubino, who has been appointed Dean of the College, Dr. James Kinney, as Acting Dean of the School of Science and Humanities, Julie Green, as Assistant to the President, and Joyce Goodine '66, '92, '95 ΔΣΔ, as Associate Director of the Center for Family Business.

New appointees include Fulbright Scholar Dr. Paul Young as Executive Director of the Center for Family Business, and Maine Restaurateur of the Year Michael Carney, FMP, Director of the Institute for Hospitality Management.

New Trustees include alumnus Arthur Fuller '66, President of Bowater Newsprint, and entrepreneur, O.D. Hopkins of East Blue Hill, Maine.

Affiliations in Maine and Japan

Husson has signed new formal affiliations with Aomori University and Tokyo Pacific Business College of Japan and with Eastern Maine Healthcare of Bangor, the parent organization of Eastern Maine Medical Center, Acadia Hospital and Affiliated Health to offer opportunities for joint programs and articulations.

The College is also rewriting its transfer agreements with the Maine technical college and community college systems.

Brockway Watercolor Donated to Husson College Library

Frank Gardiner '51 ΜΣΧ donated a painting by Maine Artist Phil Brockway before his death on June 9, 1996. "Timber Bridge" hangs in the Husson College library, given in memory of Frank and his brothers Byron "Buzz" Gardiner '48 and Kenneth Gardiner '36 ΜΣΧ. Buzz died January 24, 1992 and Kenneth was killed in action during World War II.

Phil Brockway's Maine landscapes and seascapes have been shown in galleries throughout New England and have been frequently awarded prizes. "I try to communicate through the visual elements of the picture the underlying moods, emotions, and meanings I experience from 'my' Maine."

The painting was presented by Joan Thibodeau Gardiner '48, Frank's wife, and their son-in-law Gary K. Leighton '91.

John Boucher '66 Coaches Team of Champions

Husson Trustee John Boucher '66 ΚΔΦ has coached the Souhegan High School girl's soccer team in Amherst, NH, for three years. They have won the State of New Hampshire Class I Championship the past 3 years with an amazing record of 55 wins, 1 loss and 1 tie.

In 1995, their record was 19 wins and 0 losses, and in 1996 they compiled a record of 18 wins and one tie.

Homecoming 1996
"Alumni Receive Honors and Degrees"

With 700 alumni attending a wide variety of events, the 1996 Homecoming was one of the largest ever. Over 200 diploma graduates from pre-degree days received honorary associate and bachelor degrees. The corner stone for the Center for Family Business was laid, nine alumni were honored as outstanding in their professions, and seven were inducted into the Sports Hall of Fame. It was a time to remember.

In Search Of . . . All Husson College Alumni/ae

Have you ever tried to get in touch with an old classmate, only to find that the last address you have in your telephone directory is 8 years old? Well, your troubles are over. Soon an impressive directory of our alumni/ae will be available to help you locate all your old friends.

The new Husson College Alumnae/i Directory, scheduled for release in March/April 1998, will be the most up-to-date and complete reference of over 10,000 Husson College alumnae/i ever compiled! This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, academic data, plus business information (if applicable), bound into a classic library-quality edition.

The alumnae/i Office has contracted the prestigious Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc. to produce the Husson directory. Harris will soon begin researching and compiling the information to be printed in the Directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumna/us (If you prefer not to be listed in the Directory, please contact the Alumnae/i Office in writing as soon as possible).

Look for more details on this project in future issues.

Ways of Giving - Income Producing Gifts

"How a Gift to Husson Could Increase Jane's Income"

(Jane is imaginary but her story could be yours)

Jane has watched her stock skyrocket in value but it only pays a dividend of 2%. She doesn't want to sell because of the capital gains tax but she would like to increase her annual income. She'd also like to help Husson.

Jane talks to her accountant or lawyer who suggests a charitable remainder trust or charitable gift annuity. In oversimplified terms, Jane gifts the high value stock to Husson. Since Husson is nonprofit, this gift can be deducted from her income at tax time. With lower taxes, Jane has more to spend in the year of the gift.

But, the real value lies in what Husson does with the stock. Husson sells it. As a nonprofit, it pays no capital gains tax. Husson invests the entire proceeds in an annuity which pays Jane or her spouse or another beneficiary an annual income for life. By investing in stocks or bonds with reasonable interest or growth potential or other investments, the resulting annual income to Jane could be several times larger that the original dividend. Jane has helped her college and herself.

For more information about charitable annuities, life income funds and charitable trusts, contact your lawyer, accountant or the Husson Alumni Office.

Is a Gift Annuity Right for You?

(Try this simple little test to find out.)

True/False

1.____ I would like to make a gift to Husson College that would not only help Husson, but provide me with income for the rest of my life.
2.____ I would like to receive regular, fixed payments that I could count on.
3.____ I would like to receive an attractive payment rate.
4.____ I would like a portion of each payment I receive to be tax-free.
5.____ I would like to receive a charitable income tax deduction for my gift.
6.____ I would like to reduce the size of my estate to lessen (or avoid) possible estate taxes.
7.____ I would like to know more about charitable gift annuities.

If you answered yes to most or all of these questions, a gift annuity from Husson may fit your needs perfectly. Use the handy coupon to request further information. Or, feel free to call Husson's Alumni Office at (207) 941-7100. As always, your inquiry will be treated confidentially.
